"Well, of course he did. My aunt Min said she was lovely. I remember seeing her once or twice, but, kidlike, I didn't pay much attention. She was a lot younger than he was, too, Jen. Well, I was a widow when I was younger than you are." Betty, turning the dishpan upside down and spreading the worn gray dishrag carefully over it, said with some bitterness: "And if I'd had the sense of a louse I'd have stayed a widow!"

"What about us Mom?" Elna shrilled from the floor where she was sprawled with a book. Betty laughed.

"Well, I forgot about you."

"I know you had an awful time when Clint left you," Jennifer said. "Three of us to handle without any help."

"You were the greatest help in the world, and don't you fool yourself," Betty said. "My mother lived with us then—you remember Gramma Buckner?—and she had a pension. Clint sent me my money regularly.... I don't know, I got through all right. My sister Cecilia used to bring you kids shirts and pants her kids had outgrown."

"And the white muff!" Jennifer supplied laughing.

"Lord how I loved that white muff! Oh, I guess if it hadn't been Clint I'd have married someone else. Just the same don't you get married too soon, Jen."

"I'm not going to marry at all." They were in the dining room, Jennifer seated at the table her cards spread before her. "Im going to have a white farm," she announced; "farmhouse and barns and fences all white of course; lots of white flowers; two white cows, one white horse, a white dog, a white cat, white chickens—Minorcas."

"Where did you ever hear of white Minorcas?"

"I remember white Minorcas before I remember anything else, almost."

"Oh, Jen, let me live with you on your farm!" Faddy implored.

"Will you bring two little white pigs?"

"I'll bring you white pigeons, Jen," Elna promised, entranced.

"And we'll always wear white," Jennifer stipulated. "White Chinese cotton coats and trousers in the daytime and white things—ruffy things at night. And we'll not let any men come within a mile of the place, ever."

"If you carried on like that, cleaning chicken houses and washing dishes in white clothes, you'd have a pretty sizable wash" Betty reminded them. "And as for men, they'd flock around the place like bees. The minute you try to keep them out, that's when they won't let you alone. You don't have to look so scared," she finished, laughing at Jennifer's expression. "Men won't bite you!"

Jennifer smiled vaguely and absently. Her thoughts had not been on men. She had been thinking of the little girls, studying them in a moment of revelation that frightened her, sickened her. Faddy and Elna, bright-eyed, talkative, eager. Two little slim, shabby children with dirty fingernails, dirty smart sweaters, dirty little socks. Their lives were already an eager chase for pleasure — only pleasure. Movies and funny papers and comic magazines, cones and chocolate bars and gum; these were their interests. School was a daily contest—fierce criticism of the teachers, fierce gossip with other small girls, fierce plans and fierce resentments. They lived hard every minute of the time, and almost every minute except when they were asleep they were in danger. Talk was dangerous to them; streets were dangerous; associates were dangerous. Other little girls had already given them their own twisted, unclean little versions of facts far too great for their understanding. Sometimes Faddy and Elna giggled and whispered together at some supposedly unobserved moment, and Jennifer knew what they were talking about. Faddy, at eight, was already talking about boys; too much pastry, candy, fast gravy had already ruined her complexion. Elna, a year younger, had weak eyes and athmatic tendencies. What chance, Jennifer mused, had either one? How would they ever achieve real education, culture, charm, the right sort of husband, home and children?

"You look as if you'd lost your last friend!" said Betty.

"Not quite so bad." Jennifer smiled automatically. But she went to bed thoughtful, anxious. It was not only Faddy and Elna, of course. There were other children, hundreds of them in these drab blocks, and hundreds of such blocks in all the cities.

Of course she could direct them to brush their teeth; she could put their socks into the hand basin every night; she could remind them that a hundred strokes of the brush every day made glossy hair and that slang and coarseness in speech, dropped "g's" and loud voices were not the attributes of gentility. That is, she could start. But they would not brush hair or teeth; they would not change their language or their tastes; and she would not keep it up anyway. They laughed a good deal; they seemed to get genuine satisfaction out of life; one must be content with that.

Meanwhile she studied the handbook in which from time to time Monty had her write down such odds and ends of fact, poetry, information as he felt composed a part of the "capsule culture."

"When two persons are arguing and a third enters into the conversation, say, "Ah, tehtium quid!" Always say everything carelessly, and if you get stuck tip your head, look into space, and say, 'Is that the telephone?'

"Be damned careful how you pronounce such words as 'tissue,' 'issue,' 'due,' 'amateur,' and 'portiere.' On second thoughts, your generation doesn't need 'portiere.'

"Ask me what borsch, bouillabaise, gnocchi, and profteroles are; they appear on menus from time to time."

Betty had been apprised of the capsule system and its object; she regarded it with mild amusement and small interest. "To know about things," said Betty, "you have to read lots of books. Lord, the books your father read! I couldn't make head or tail of any of them. And that was just one subject—engineering. You don't get anywhere just knowing one thing about a thing."

"Well, I guess you don't," Jennifer conceded, slightly discouraged. Eut she kept on, and Monty occasionally gave her a cheering word.

"You came in very pat with your allusion to Pippa the other day," he told her on a certain languid autumn afternoon when Jennifer was peeling figs in preparation for a studio supper. Jennifer looked up and laughed.

"I remember. When that man named Sam—wasn't it Sam?—said that he had decided to stop helping his sister-in-law every month and that her youngest little girl came up to him and offered him a suck of a lollipop and he didn't have the heart to stop, I said, 'Pippa passes.'"

"And just where it belonged, too, and just in the right tone."

"Oh well, but you see, I asked Miss Drake at the library what it was, and she got the poem for me and I read it—most of it," Jennifer explained. "I couldn't understand some of it. But I got the meaning."

"I see. You're not supposed, you know," he said, "to go beyond your capsules. Else the whole experiment fails."

Jennifer laughed, unimpressed.

"There's not any danger I'll go too far! I tried to read another Browning poem, Sordello. I simply couldn't get anywhere!"

"You're not the first. They say nobody can understand anything but the first line and the last line, and they're both lies."

"Oh, what are they, Monty?"

"The first is, 'Who will may hear Sordello's story told,' and the last is, 'Who would has heard Sordello's story told.' I think that's it.... Why don't you take the rest of those figs home? They don't keep."

"I was thinking I would. I don't mean take these home but go down the street way and fix some just like this with the raspberries for our supper."

"But you're coming back here for supper."

"Only we haven't got the yellow pottery bowl; they'd have to go in the pressed glass," Jennifer mused. "No, I can't come back to supper tonight, Monty. Every now and then Betty has to meet Clint Slade and talk with him, and she's' meeting him tonight. That leaves me with the children."

"What does she meet her husband for?"

"Oh, talk. Abqut the children and money, I suppose. Anyway, it's tonight. So hasta la vista," said Jennifer, departing.

"You and your culture!" he said.

She was drawing away from them all now, from Faddy and Elna and Betty. It could not be helped. The outer frame of her life was the same as before, but inwardly she was living in a different world. True, her only tangible contact with that world came on the two or three nights in the week when she went across thes dark roofs and timidly entered the region of enchantment that was the studio, and yet that was the real world and the other the dream. Sometimes she stayed for only a few moments; sometimes Monty and an artist friend or two would be scrambling eggs and brewing coffee and she could help. Often there was music and the lights were low, and Jennifer would join the company like a slipping little shadow and seat herself on a cushion on the floor with her back against the couch or against someone's' big chair. And there she would sit listening, dreaming, occasionally glancing about at the faces that had now grown so friendly and familiar, but for the most part gazing rapt into space with half-closed eyes. When a general conversation was going on she had little to say but they all liked her; Monty's little friend had her place in the circle. Even when they were alone she did not always have much to say to Monty; he would paint away in silence and Jennifer would browse among his books or turn the pages of portfolios of reproductions and learn to recognize Albright and Grant Wood and Georgia O'Keefe, Chardin and Vermeer and Renoir.

Office days dragged on with less interest than ever; home hours presented the same routine of dishes and bedmaking and cooking in cramped quarters, in little rooms never fairly aired or ordered, overflowing bureaus and closets, shabby clothing odorous from being worn and kept too long. But Jennifer noted little of it. She was carried along on a tide of entirely new plans and though she felt herself already emancipated from Betty's drab little home and all its stood for; her own life lay far beyond all this.

The weeks went by and were months; Jennifer was twenty. It had always sounded a great age to her; now it was so different from nineteep.

"I am half forty," she said to Monty.

"One fifth of a hundred! That's some age!" Monty said admiringly. Jennifer laughed.

"I feel—not older," she told him, "but different. In a way I feel younger. Plans and — and thoughts have a way of making you feel younger, I think."

"And you have plans now, Jinny?"

"Well, yes, I think I have. Without really meaning to have had them, they seem simply to have.. come," she explained, a little at a loss. "I never thought before I knew you what I would be, Monty. I just thought things would come along and happen to me. Now I feel as if I could more or less make them happen the way I want them to."

"And what do they sum up to, Jinny? Singer, artist, writer? Newspaperwoman?"

"No. Having a home," she said slowly, her eyes fixed on space. "Flowers in glass vases, children, someone always to love me, books."

She stopped, her smile a little shamefaced, her eyes filling with tears.

"Nothing wrong with that plan, Jinny," the man said.

"Except that I don't know how to go about—getting started."

"Thinking that way, you are started."

"Yes, but it's only thinking. What changes things, what makes the break?"

"Ah that we never know. But unless you're ready for it you don't know it when it comes. Luck, someone said, is when preparedness meets opportunity. You're moving straight toward something, Jinny," Monty said. "We all are, all the time, good or bad. We're all getting ready for something, up or down. Hello!"

The last word was for Julie Carteret, who came upstairs a little breathless, furred and lovely and smelling of violets, with drops of rain glistening on her red hair.

"Oh, Monty, what luck to find you! The ogre downstairs in the auction room said he didn't think you'd come in. And Jennifer. You're the one I wanted to see."

Six Players On Basketball Team Killed

Sooke, Dec. 9 — (CP) — Plans were made today for an inquest investigation into the deaths of six Sooke high school athletes who plunged to their deaths Saturday night when their car smashed through a bridge rail and dropped 92 feet into Jacobs Creek about 20 miles west of here.

All six were members of a Sooke athletic club basketball team which had gone to the settlement of Jordan River for an exhibition game and were returning when their 1936 sedan plunged into the creek. Even as the bodies were removed from the crumpled wreck where they were found by searching parents hours later, it was disclosed three other members of the team missed a similar fate by remaining behind at Jordan River.

Dead are Gerry Shafer, 18, whom police said they believed was driving the auto; Gerald Pimlott, 14; Robert Hansen, 15; Fred Smith, 11; Bordon Duncan, 15 and Warren Shields, 15.

Investigators said those not killed outright in the crash probably drowned as their car hit the creek bed and settled, upside down in several feet of water in one of the worst auto fatalities in Victoria district history and the second such major crash this year.

Earlier in the year a car plunged off a highway into the Nanaimo River near Nanaimo carrying eight persons to their death.

The accident struck tragedy into the little logging and fishing village of Sooke where all the boys lived and went to school.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 9. (CP)— The gold and industrial stocks posted index gains of more than two points at noon and the base metals were up $1.39 while the Western Oils netted a small decline on Toronto Stock Exchange today. Volume was the heaviest in weeks at 1,397,000 shares for the first three hours.

The paper, utility and liquor issues moved up strongly and several papers netted gains of a point or more. C.P.R., Ford A, Brazilian, the Abitibi stocks and the Senior Oils added fractions.

Regcourt featured the cheaper golds, trading about 300,000 shares on an advance of 20 to 25 cents. There were reports of rich ore discoveries at the property. The Malartic and Rouyn township stocks were all strong.

Smelters gained 2 points, Nickel 1 1-4 and gains of 5 to 10 cents appeared for Golden Manitou, Normetal, Sherritt and Steep Rock. The Western Oil share market was dull. A gain of 10 cents for Calgary-Edmonton was the main change.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, Dec. 9 —(AP)— Inspired by Saturday's coal truce customers battled for hours for stocks in the forepart of today's market although the melee was eventually quelled by profit cashing which, by mid-day, substantially trimmed most early advances of one point to 6 points.

Demand was so heavy shortly after the opening that the ticker tape for half an hour ran as much as two minutes behind floor transactions.

Canadian stocks showed substantial gains at mid-day. Hiram Walker and Canadian Pacific advanced 1-2 and distillers Seagram 3-8. Dome Mines, an exception, eased 1-8.

Acting Fire Chief Malcolm Wallace said he had never seen a fire move so quickly.

George Hunter, night porter at the hotel grabbed a fire extinguisher and emptied its contents on the flames. By this time, he said, the flames were running up the door frame. Smoke and flames falling like a 'damp mist,' whipped toward him.

Hunter said there was no sign of panic by the guests at the start. Later they leaned out of the windows and yelled for help.

Finally Rescued

Harry Ditlove, one of the three proprietors of the hotel after being awakened by Hunter, began groping his way to the fire escape at the rear of the floor where his suite was. After he collapsed, overcome by smoke, he and his wife managed to get back to their room. The lock on their door had closed but Ditlove found the key in his pocket. Firemen finally rescued them.

Dave Harms, of Aberdeen, Sask. was one of five persons who crouched on the ledge of a skylight till rescued. When firemen reached them with a ladder flames were bursting on both sides.

The hotel had been bought a week ago by Ditlove, Mickey Phillet of Edmonton and Leon Asben of New York for $120,000.

Acting Fire Chief Wallace said that while every man in his department had been called out, there were "only two men on a hose where I should have had six."

Police Chief Albert Milne said a "thorough investigation" would be made.

parties. The Tories want all controls off at once, the Liberals want to travel the same road, only more slowly.

Refuse to Build Base

"Though even they are gathering speed on the way to chaos. Neither will face the fact that no government can implement even their restricted promises if they will not interfere with big business, and if they refuse to build a solid base of production, which is the creation of real wealth."

Report of the C.C.F. Provincial Council was presented at the meeting, showing briefs, recommendations, and programs of the party in the year since its convention last November.

It said in part, "the most important of our programs was the inauguration of a province-wide series of radio broadcasts, which started Oct. 15 and ends Dec. 20 for this year. While intermittently the prominence given to speeches by the daily press is valuable to our cause, the only sure way of reaching the public without program, undiluted and ungarbled, is through radio."

"Our brief on forestry draws the attention of the Royal Commission to the continued exploitation and destruction of the greatest of our natural resources by private interests, to the lack of positive action by our government despite the recommendations of previous commissions, and to the need of a forest resources commissioner to manage our forests in order that what we have left may be conserved and what we have lost should be restored."

Advocate Amendments

"Our brief on milk advocate amendments to the Milk Control Act to provide for adequate consumer representation on the Milk Control Board; the payment of patronage dividends by bona-fide co-operative dairies; the sale of milk in stores at a price lower than that charged for house delivery; municipalities to engage in the business of distributing milk as a public utility; free milk to all school children on school days, and payment of at least two cents a quart on milk for home consumption as a provincial subsidy in default of federal action."

Other business mentioned in the yearly report concerned criticism of the Drew Government in its cocktail lounge policy and lack of action in the housing situation.

The convention continues tomorrow and Wednesday.

turn to their homeland. Lumbering officials say just about this number of additional men now are needed for winter woods operations.

However it was not indicated whether any prisoners to stay in Canada would be diverted into lumbering. Most of the remaining captives engaged as laborers have been working on farms, many in Ontario where they have worked for their keep and a few cents a day for cigarets and other minor luxuries.

For hundreds of the Germans, their removal to the Reich was unwelcome news, and many of them applied for official permission to remain and settle in Canada. Their requests were backed up by large numbers of their farmer-employers, who said they had proved good workers and asked that they be allowed to remain.

Of the wartime peak number of 35,000 Germans to reach Canada, the final batch of 3,200 was due to sail from Halifax Dec. 22. For some weeks past, the army had been gathering them up from various prisoner of war camps and farms throughout the country. The last previous contingent sailed in November.

Most of the remaining Germans in the country are former merchant seamen. Several of them, eager to remain here, escaped as the time for sailing arrived. Twenty-two are still t large.

Royal Commission Starts Sessions At Shire Hall

The Royal Commission on Milk appointed by the Ontario Government started its four-or-more day sittings in Shire Hall here today with Justice Dalton Wells presiding.

Representatives of milk organizations with their counsel were in attendance as were a number of local firm's members.

The committee inspected the Belleville Creameries this morning and on Tuesday will journey to Prince Edward County where it will view the U.E.L. cheese factory which is the only one in the district at present in operation. Mr. Linn Fair, agricultural representative for Hastings County will accompany the commission on its tours of inspection.

The commission will sit for four days or as long as is necessary.

Calorie Reduction Shown to Cut Cancer Incidence

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Reporter

New York, Dec. 9 — (AP) — A considerable number of human cancers can be either entirely prevented by avoiding over-eating and over-weight beyond middle age, or at least their appearance can be postponed, nutritionists were told.

This report was made to the Conference on Nutrition in relation to cancer by Albert Tannenbaum, of the Department of Cancer Research Michael Reese Hospital, Chicago.

The prospect of reducing cancer by diet was based, he said, on a review of six available insurance statistics studies indicating that individuals who were overweight when past middle age were likely to die of cancer than were persons of average weight.

It is based also, he added, on studies of the effects of limiting the intake of calories on cancer in mice. This calory restriction has been shown to decrease the incidence of every type of cancer studied so far. There are six of these cancers. The calory restrictions also reduced the number of cases of leukemia — blood cancer — in mice.

The average calory restriction to protect against cancer is about one-third. There are, however, no human studies to show what would happen to men and women who cut their calory intake by one-third. It would take 20 to 30 years to make on man the studies that can be completed on mice in two or three years.

Patriarchs Hold Rally in City

With a large number of out-of-town guests in attendance the Patriarchs Militant, I.O.O.F. held a rally in the Oddfellows Temple here on Saturday night under the auspices of Canton No. 8 Belleville.

The business part of the rally was held under the command of Captain R. E. Fox after which several guests were introduced. These included Col. Lyle Wilson, Cobourg; Brigadier Archie Parsons, Toronto; Col. Albert Baker, Toronto; Major A. Lord, Oshawa; Major MacKenzie Penfound, Oshawa; Major Newton Foster, Kingston; Captain Bruce Holder, Kingston; Major B. W. Kiser, Belleville and Col. Thomas Allen, Oshawa.

Also introduced was the Degree Staff of Oshawa which mustered in sixteen candidates to the lodge. Following this a supper was held served by the members of the Past Grands Club of Quintena Rebekah Lodge No. 133.

Brief addresses were given by Co. Wilson who thanked the ladies for their efforts; Brig. Parsons, Col. Baker, Lieut. Col. Allen; Major Foster; Major Lord and Chevalier Thomas White one of the candidates and who spoke on their behalf.

JOHN McCORMACK TO JOIN OILERS

Detroit, Dec 9 (CP)—Gus Marker, manager and coach of Tulsa Oilers of the United States Hockey League, informed the parent team Toronto Maple Leafs last night that Johnny (Goose) McCormack of Edmonton will rejoin the Tulsa team this week.

McCormack, a centre player, worked out at the Leafs' training camp in St. Catharines last fall and then announced he was retiring from hockey to enter the priesthood. Marker said arrangements have been made for the 20-year-old westerner to continue his pre-ministerial studies at Tulsa.

The Tulsa manager left with the Toronto team last night and after a couple of days in Toronto will go to Kingston to look over that city's O.H.A. Junior "B" team.

A Bargain Is Not Always —A Bargain

On Saturday afternoon, a real honest looking chap, carrying quite a good sized shopping bag, sticking out of which were a couple of big yellow legs with feet to match, barged into a local hotel to quaff a couple before wending his way back to his farm or what have you. But he had business to transact first—he had to sell that which belonged to the yellow legs and feet. So he asked several men if they would like to buy a prime young hen turkey—but with no success. Spying a chap who looked as if he knew but little about livestock, although this particular person was raised in Prince Edward and should have known better, the question was repeated "wanta buy a prime young hen turkey, boss?"

After a minute examination of the bird, this bright chap popped the query "how much do yez want for your prime young hen turkey?"

Said the honest looking chap "waal, it's my last bird so give us three bucks and you've got a bargain."

"Sold," almost shouted the guy from Prince Edward—and forked out three green backs. He then exhibited his bargain proudly and asked one of the staff to put it in the ice-box until night as there was no room for such a big turkey in his domestic ice box. But this bright young fellow on the staff quizzed the bargain hunter with "did you say this bird is a young hen turkey?"

"It shure is," crowed our friend.

Waal," says the other man "it's the first time I ever saw a hen turkey with yellow legs and spurs an inch long", and unwrapping the paper head shroud, he yelled "and did yez ever see a prime young hen turkey with a rosebud comb?" Gasping, the Prince Edward party could only croak, "well, I be doggoned" or words to that effect. And the strange thing about this person is that he wore spurs himself for about four years when he was a gunner in the First War—so he should have recognized them on a tough old rooster.

Chance Discovery Nips Attempt To Steal Horses

What is believed to be a well laid plan to steal horses and ship them out of the district by truck was nipped in the bud Sunday night by the chance discovery of Gerald Vance, proprietor of the Vance Riding Stable on Coleman Flats, that his stable door was open.

Investigation showed that two horses, together with bridles and saddles, had been taken from the stable with a three hour search by police and the owner finally leading to their discovery tied in a sheep pen at the Belleville fair grounds.

Mr. Vance had been on his way home about 10:30 when proceeding up Moira Street he glanced across Coleman Flats and in the moonlight observed that the door of his riding stable was open. Investigation showed the two horses missing.

Police were immediately notified and a search of the city made in the police cruiser with no sight of the missing horses. As a last resort a search was made of the fair grounds and at the west end of the park in one of the sheep pens the two animals were discovered. Saddles were over a nearby partition.

The owner today advanced the opinion that the persons responsible had every intention of moving the animals from the district by truck as the horses were found tied in a pen adjoining a ramp which is used for loading purposes.

John Rickard President Quinte Seed Growers

John Rickard, R. R. 2 Newcastle, was named president of the Quinte District Seed Growers' at their annual meeting and election of officers held at Shire Hall here last week. He succeeds Mr. Oscar Parks of Bloomfield who was named honorary president of the association.

Other officers named included B. C. Jackson, Enterprise, and Wilmott Croxall, Uxbridge, as vice presidents; H. L. Fair, secretary treasurer; Fred Campbell, Uxbridge, fair secretary and Stewart Bowman, Peterborough, fair manager. W. Breenon and Harry Pearson will act as assistant fair managers.

The meeting was well attended by members from all counties represented in the district with Oscar Parks presiding over the meeting. The annual seed fair will be held in Oshawa in March of next year.

Kenneth Fallis, crops, seeds and weeds branch, and Mr. Stewart Bowman, seed inspector, Plant Products Division, Peterborough, gave interesting talks on the general seed situation.

THREE ARE TIED FOR FIRST PLACE IN SOUTH SECTION

Minneapolis Millers Move Back Into Top Position in North Group

(By The Canadian Press)

Minneapolis Millers once more rule the northern division of the United States Hockey League but just who is boss in the southern division is anybody's guess. Fort Worth Tulsa and Dallas each has 21 points.

Omaha took possession of the northern Division leadership last Thursday by trouncing the almost untouchable Millers 7-1. They were to meet again Saturday in Minneapolis but fog grounded the Omaha plane and the Millers had to wait until Sunday to destroy the Knights' one-point lead.

When Sunday arrived the Millers' fury was at fever pitch and they went onto St. Paul Saints' ice to batter the Saints 11-2.

Minneapolis counted four times in the first frame, twice in the second and five times in the third as Walt Melnyk, and Stan Smith tallied two each for the Millers and Bartholome, Brennan, Forgie, Art Trobel, Atanas, Kelly and Tomuik brought a tally apiece to the Millers' coffers.

Buck Davis and Kirkpatrick scored for St. Paul.

But even now the Millers have only a one-point margin over Omaha and each has two games coming up this week.

Fort Worth Rangers gave their rivals the points they needed to move up and share first place honors with the Rangers in the southern division. Tulsa and Dallas were tied in second place and each needed only a win to get into the first slot tie.

Saturday Tulsa downed the Rangers 3-2 and Sunday Dallas edged a 4-3 win over the Rangers. Ironically it was two former Fort Worth wingmen who set up the Dallas victory. Ken McKenzie and Doug Maher set up the tying and winning tallies for Doc Halderson to score in the third frame while Squee Allen and Armstrong were the other Dallas score makers. Sawyer tallied twice for the Rangers and Kraiger once.

In a clash of the cellar teams—Houston and Kansas City at Houston Sunday — Houston came out on top 5-1.

Sports Roundup

(By JOHN D. HAMILTON)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 9 —(CP)— Player deals usually dominate the dormant major baseball leagues at this time of year but the winter dickering now underway has pushed managers under the spotlight . . . Latest dope is that Detroit Tigres are after Bucky Harris, signed only a month ago as New York Yankees manager . . . Reports from Los Angeles where the major-minor meetings have just ended, say that the Tigers want Harris to fill the slot occupied by George Trautman, new minor league czar . . . President Larry MacPhail of the Yankees says tersely: "If the job was offered to Harris he didn't know it." . . . However, Detroit may make another offer . . . The Harris rumors cap a long series of negotiations involving managers . . . First of all it was said that Brooklyn pilot Leo Durocher would go to the Yanks . . . Then MacPhail signed Harris and Branch Rickey warned Durocher to sign quickly or be out in the cold . . . The widespread dickering clearly indicates baseball is in the midst of a major rebuilding drive. . . .

Youth Takes Over.

American college football teams also show a tendency to drop some of the pilots . . . The accent will be on youth next year with the most famous old-timer of them all — Amos Alonzo Stagg —leaving his coaching berth at College of the Pacific rather than be relegated to a "consultant" job . . . Stagg, 84, will take an advisory coaching position with his son at Susquehanna University in Pennsylvania . . . The senior Stagg has been coaching for 55 years . . . And Kerr, 68-year-old Colgate mentor, is another of the old timers to boy before youth.

The Best.

Ask any of the players around the National Hockey League who the best forward is and it's 2 to 1 they'll come back with Milt Schmidt, the Boston Bruins centre . . . The men he faces say Milt has everything — speed, polish, deception and brains . . . On defence the name most often mentioned among the players is Jack Stewart of Detroit . . . Joe Cooper, New York Ranger backliner, doesn't run with the herd: he picks Bill Quackenbush for his all-star defence line. . .

Just An Old-Fashioned Boy.

There's a lot of talk around that the rough-tough, body-slamming defenceman is a creature of the past . . . But don't take the talk too seriously . . . New York Rangers have improved immensely since Bill Juzda was recalled from New Haven of the A.H.L. . . . Bill is one of the few players in the N.H.L. who still throws a real bodycheck.

Question Suspect In Connection With Taxi Slaying

Kingsley Man Charged With Robbery of Taximan

Toronto, Dec. 10 — (CP)—Toronto police said today they were questioning a 33-year-old armed man who gave his name as Kingsley Mann, in connection with the slaying here Nov. 30 of Alfred Reddish, taxi driver.

Mann was arrested early this morning and charged with the armed robbery of Leonard Purdy, 24-year-old taxi driver, shortly before last midnight near the outskirts of Niagara Falls, Ont.

The detectives assigned to the Reddish case were called in after Purdy reported the gunman who held him up said he "shot a driver in Toronto last week and if you make a move I'll shoot you."

Purdy told police he was held up by a man he had driven from Thorold, Ont., to Black Horse Corners on the Welland Highway. The gunman tied his hands and feet, removed his shoes and threw him in the back seat. The gunman then drove the taxi cab toward Niagara Falls and at the outskirts of the city dumped the driver into a ditch.

Mann was arrested by Toronto police who had received notification of the Thorold incident. They noticed a car with a Thorold licence plate about to make a turn on Toronto's Parliament St.

At the time Reddish's body was found slumped in the seat of his taxi on a Toronto street police said the motive for the killing apparently was robbery.

Authorities said that when Mann was taken into custody he was carrying a fully-loaded Luger pistol in his belt and, according to the story told police by Purdy, the man who robbed him left him so tied that he struggled for two hours to free himself. Then he walked nine miles in his stocking feet into Niagara Falls.

Police said that a short time after Purdy was dumped into the ditch by the bandit, the man went to the residence of George Trache on the Thorold Stone Road and there, at gunpoint, interrupted a party and forced Mrs. Trache to collect all the money in the possession of the people in the house. Mr. Trache had obtained a gun from his bedroom, jumped out a window and was going to return to the house when the bandit escaped out a rear door, entered a taxicab which he had parked in front and disappeared.

William C. Riggs Elected Alderman

Windsor, Dec. 10 —(CP)—Electors yesterday voted W. Ernest Atkinson to the board of control and William C. Riggs as alderman in ward three—bringing to four the number of Windsor Daily Star employees on municipal bodies.

Mr. Atkinson, a printer, was second in the six-man contest for two control board vacancies. He will join Tom Brophy, reporter, and Gordon Ellis, linotype operator, who were elected last year for two-year terms. Fourth controller, James S. Gow, re-elected yesterday, is a merchant.

Mr. Riggs, C.C.F. member of the Ontario legislature, 1943-45, also is a linotype operator.

WANT TANK BACK

Merritton, Dec. 10 — (CP) — The case of the missing tank was aired at last night's session of the town council. The old tank had been taken from the fire engine but when council was asked to set a price upon it they found that the man making the bid had already removed the tank. Council ordered the tank returned.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Dec. 10 — (CP)—Synopsis: Rain is general over Southern Ontario this morning and considerable fog has formed in the vicinity of the lakes. Over Northern Ontario the skies are cloudy and temperatures are near 30 degrees compared to those in the lower fifties over Southern Ontario. A disturbance in Northern Michigan moving slowly eastward is causing the rain in the lower lakes region. By Wednesday the weather is expected to clear over most of the province and temperatures will drop gradually.

George N. Bilton Dies on Gallows

Whitby, Dec. 10 —(CP)—George Norman Bilton, a husky young welder who during much of his adult life was unemployed, early today was granted his wish—to die.

He died on an improvised gallows that necessitated cutting a hole through the floor of the Jail Governer's office, for the June 16 slaying of the woman with whom he had been intimate, Mrs. Theresa Laurie, 34-year-old mother of six children, whose body was found near the new section of the Toronto-Oshawa highway along with that of her four-year-old daughter. Both their heads had been bashed by a 25-pound rock.

Since his arrest in the cab of a truck 12 hours after discovery of the tragedy, Bilton had never denied his guilt, police said. They claimed the 25-year-old prisoner had readily confessed that he killed the woman during a quarrel in a field near the highway. He said she insisted on wanting to "go away" with him and also insisted on bringing along the child. The confession said Bilton repeatedly hit the woman with the boulder and then decided to kill the child.

From the beginning Bilton said he had "no desire to live without her" and he tried to hang himself in his cell before he was sentenced. And just before he was taken to the gallows in the Whitby jail "he aroused himself from an apathy into an almost cheerful frame of mind," said the jail chaplain, Rev. A. Gordon Channen. "The weight on his mind seemed strangely lessened by the fact that he confessed so readily and did not try to escape."

Bilton's mother, who had come from Nova Scotia to see her son, visited the jail last night with other relatives.

Quinte Skyways Granted Licence

Ottawa, Dec. 10. (CP)—Applications for two commercial air service licences in Ontario have been approved by the Air Transport Board, Reconstruction Minister Howe announced today.

The applications were those of Samuel R. Bernardo to operate a non-scheduled charter service from a base at Brantford, and of Quinte Skyways, Ltd., to operate from a fishing and hunting club near Trenton.

In both cases, the licences prohibit carriage of passengers and goods between points on scheduled routes except in emergencies.

Immigration Dept. Acts as Cupid, Santa to Vets With Fiancees Abroad

By JOHN LEBLANC
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 10 — (CP) — Giving a hand to cupid, the Canadian Immigration Department is ironing out a few rough spots in the course of true love for several hundred overseas fighters of the Second Great War.

And not only does the little fellow with the bow and arrow get an assist from the austere department, but it may even play the role of Santa Claus by bringing over European fiancees of the former servicemen in time for Christmas season marriages.

Virtually impossible up to now, the movement of brides-to-be from the continent to Canada is being facilitated by the setting up of special immigration offices in Holland and Belgium, where many Canadians found future wives while fighting through those countries.

The new system has just gone into effect, and it is expected here it will soon start moving the first of a stream of European girls for whom Canadian soldiers have been waiting for months.

Immigration authorities are opening the new offices in The Hague, Holland, and Brussels, Belgium. There, the girls will be given civil and medical examinations, and those qualifying for entry to the Dominion will receive visas immediately.

On the part of the soldiers and their fiancees, they must pay the girl's passage across the Atlantic, and they must be married within 30 days after she arrived in the Dominion.

One Ottawa man who has been waiting eight months for his Netherlands bride-to-be and who now hopes to bring her over almost immediately under the new system is Stanley Davis, an overseas sergeant with the Royal Canadian Electrical and Mechanical Engineers.

Engaged to Germanine Byl of Ghent, Belgium, he has been exchanging a letter a day with her for the last eight months.

New, he's making preparations for an early wedding here.

"There must be around a thousand other fellows in the same position," he said, "and this will certainly be good news for them."

LAWMAKERS SET DEADLINE TO AVERT NEW COAL STRIKE

Labor Control Measures Must Be Passed By March 31st Govt. Officials Announce

Washington, Dec. 10 (AP)—Lawmakers of both political parties today set March 31 as the deadline for labor control measures aimed at staving off a possible new coal strike in the United States at that time.

Republicans and Democrats alike said John L. Lewis' order sending his miners back to the pits until April 1 puts pressure on Congress to act swiftly if it is to find a solution for disputes in such essential industries as coal, steel, oil and transportation.

With coal output gradually returning to its normal figure of 2,200,000 tons a day, there were these hangovers from the 17-day bituminous shutdown:

1. The Supreme Court not only agreed to step into the Lewis case itself but decided to rule as well on another background issue in the coal dispute—the unionization of foremen.

While the current case involves only a group of Packard Motor Company supervisors, the fundamental question is one in which Mr. Lewis is virtually interested: Whether foremen are included in the Wagner Act's guarantee to workers of the right to join unions and bargain collectively.

Mr. Lewis already has won federal approval—in his reinstated contract with the government—to unionize mine foremen under rules and procedures of the National Labor Relations Board.

The Supreme Court yesterday set Jan. 14 for arguments on Mr. Lewis' appeal from his and the United Mine Workers' contempt convictions for refusing to obey a lower court's restraining order.

2. Mr. Lewis' counsel began preparing their defence against a Virginia State Corporation Commission charge that the U.M.W. violated the State's "blue sky" law through the "sale" of union memberships. Mr. Lewis has been directed to appeal before the commission at Richmond on Friday to show cause why a temporary injunction should not be issued.

3. Government economists speculated that it might take as long as two months or longer for production to bounce back to pre-strike levels.

Compulsory Bill

A Republican-backed compulsory bill proposes creation of an independent disputes conciliation administration.

Should a dispute threaten to harm public welfare, the Attorney General could obtain a court injunction against a strike or other work stoppage while the settlement machinery is set in motion.

The disputing parties then would have two choices:

1. To negotiate an agreement of their own accord, or

2. To settle their differences through arbitration by arbitrators of their own choice.

If, after 30 days, they failed to settle their differences, the President would have 15 additional days to submit the controversy to the conciliation administration.

Says Georgia Has Evidence To Prosecute Some Members Of Anti-Negro Columbians

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 10 (AP) — Attorney General Eugene Cook said today that the State of Georgia has obtained evidence for criminal charges against several members of the anti-Negro, Anti-Jewish Columbiahs who sought to establish a Nazi-like government in the United States.

In a report to Governor Ellis Arnall, Cook summarized statements of state prosecutors and former members of the organization which he said would show that the Columbians, "through its officials and agents:

Statements of Prosecutors

"1. Systematically plan to intimidate and injure members of minority religious and racial groups.

"2. Conspire to bring about the arrest of innocent Georgia citizens on false charges.

"3. Have arrested Georgia citizens.

"4. Assemble a private arsenal of deadly weapons.

"5. That Homer L. Loomis (Columbian Secretary), Emory Burke (Columbian President) and Ira Jett, as a consequence of a conspiracy between them, planned the bombing and did bomb a home at 333 Ashby Street, in the city of Atlanta, Fulton County, Ga.

"6. Corruptly influence the behavior of minor youths in such a way as to incite them toward the commission of crimes against the state of Georgia.

"7. By force, threats, duress and intimidation have restrained home owners in Fulton County from the full and proper enjoyment of their property."

Cook called the governor's attention to statements of Loomis and Burke which he said would "show that their announced purpose, whether it is within the range of possibility or not, is to create a state of insurrection and to with force and arms suppress the rights of Georgia citizens."

Lanier Waller, 21, of Atlanta, told newspapermen that he had turned state witness in the state's prosecution of the organization which is defending a charter revocation suit.

Waller said that both he and James Ralph Childers, also of Atlanta, had given evidence linking a Columbian leader with purchase of dynamite to blast homes of Negroes.

Waller said he went with a Columbian leader "when he bought some dynamite" and that they previously had discussed whether "to burn the Negro's house or bomb them out" of houses in a white settlement.

Waller said that he joined the Columbians because "I just naturally don't like Negroes." He said he withdrew from the organization when Secretary Homer L. Loomis "told me of plans to take over the country and be a dictator."

Declare Group Anti-Jewish

Waller said he and Childers then "took it on ourselves to find out what we could about the organization" which had expanded into an anti-Jewish group as well.

Both Waller and Childers revealed that they went to New York Dec. 2 and had exposed "all secrets" of the Columbians to professor James H. Sheldon, administrative chairman of the anti-Nazi League.

Waller said Sheldon had subsequently given all testimony to the Georgia State attorney general.

Solicitor E. E. Andrews, police chief M. A. Hornsby and detective superintendent E. I. Hildebrand were conferring with Assistant Attorney General Dan Duke as the two former Columbians talked with newspapermen. The conference was preliminary to a formal hearing in the office of Attorney General Eugene Cook who promised to release much of the state's evidence against the Columbinas.

ESCAPES SECOND TIME

Penetang, Ont., Dec. 10 —(CP)—Melville Wilkie, convicted of burning to death his wife and child in their Owen Sound home in 1932, escaped last week for the second time from the Ontario Hospital and is still at large, Dr. C. S. Tenant, hospital supervisor said today.

Wilkie escaped last August and after a 12-day search was found hiding in an old building on the hospital grounds.

Since 1932, Wilkie has been an inmate of the criminal insane ward of the institution.

ELECTORS RETURN SIX MAYORS FOR ANOTHER TERM

Across the Province Large Numbers of Voters Flock to Polls

(By The Canadian Press)

Belated election returns trickling in early today told of unusually heavy voting as officials of more than 100 municipalities took stock of the changes demanded by their electorates.

Six mayors were returned to office and another three were elected for the first time as voters exercised their democratic opinion on a wide variety of by-laws. Some centres voted in this manner without holding civic elections because of earlier acclamations.

Mayors back in office include: Stanley Lewis, Ottawa; Sam Lawrence, Hamilton; Arthur J. Reaume, Windsor, Garfield Anderson, Fort William and F. S. Follwell, Belleville, newly-elected city mayors were: J. L. Shaw, North Bay; Lloyd D. Gallinger, Cornwall and D. A. Thompson, Woodstock.

So many voters turned out at both Hamilton and Windsor that it was the small hours of today before election of Boards of Control could be determined.

At Hamilton, Mayor Lawrence, celebrated his silver anniversary year in public office by trouncing Don Clarke.

U. S. Army Transport Plane Crashes in Japan

Tokyo, Dec. 10 —(AP)— A United States army transport plane crashed two minutes after taking off from Itami airfield, Osaka, today and all aboard except one person were killed, 5th Airforce Headquarters said.

The number of passengers and crew members was not reported.

Headquarters said the cause of the crash was not known. An army board is investigating.

The plane was en route from Tokyo to Fukuoka on Kyushu Island.

NORTHERN ONT. MINES INCREASE WAGES 10C. HOUR

Boost Will Bring Average Wage to About $2,500, Highest in History

(By The Canadian Press)

Northern Ontario mines today posted notices of a wage increase of 10-cents-an-hour for hourly-rated employees. Mining men said the boost would bring earnings of the average miner to approximately $2,500 a year — the highest in history.

It was learned in Toronto that approximately 90 per cent of the mines in Northern Ontario as well as their neighbors in northwestern Quebec had granted the increase.

One of the prime reasons for the increase was to attract more men to the mining industry, The Canadian Press learned. If the mines can step up production they can reduce overhead costs. At the same time the extra earnings will help workers who faced increased living costs.

Observers said the increase followed a pattern which had become apparent in the mining industry across Canada. British Columbia mines boosted wages 10½ cents but others had generally granted 10 cents.

First mine to post notice of the increase was Lamacque in Northern Quebec which made its announcement yesterday. The big McIntyre Porcupine mines in Timmins followed this morning and Kirkland Lake district mines at noon.

N. L. Urquhart, assistant manager of McIntyre Porcupine, said its increase, retroactive to Dec. 1, would affect 1,250 men. Lifting of federal wage controls had enabled the raises in the basic wage rate from 75 cents an hour to 85 cents. The men are to receive the increase in their Christmas cheques.

Mine managers in Timmins said the increase likely would be general throughout the Porcupine camp which employs upwards of 7,000 miners.

MOSCOW MEETING DEPENDS ON RUSS CHANGE OF VIEW

Molotov Opposed To Small Countries Expressing Opinions On Peace Treaty

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

New York, Dec. 10 (AP)—With the next Big Four foreign ministers conference scheduled for Moscow March 10, western diplomats expressed hope today that Foreign Minister Molotov would quickly reverse himself and agree to get the views of small countries on Germany before the great powers start work on a German peace treaty.

In fact, if Mr Molotov does not yield his opposition on this point by the end of the week it seems highly unlikely that the Moscow session will be held. State Secretary Byrnes told the Foreign Ministers Council meeting last night he was flatly opposed to making any German decisions until the small countries have had opportunity to express their views.

Mr. Molotov said he would think the matter over.

Meanwhile, the council agreed to meet early today to clean up odds and ends of the five European satellite peace treaties which are being completed here and possibly begin consideration of an agenda for the Moscow meeting.

Generally diplomats considered it likely that Mr. Molotov would find some way to agree to the appointment here of Deputy Big Four foreign ministers who would hold hearings in Europe in January and February and report to the Moscow conference shortly after it opens.

In agreeing to hold the meeting in the Russian capital, Foreign Secretary Bevin, Mr. Byrnes and Maurice Couve De Murville, Deputy Foreign Minister of France, were assured by Mr. Molotov that news reporters from their countries would be able to report freely what happens there.

Correspondents, Mr. Molotov said, would be able to report the proceedings of the meeting from Moscow just as they have from Paris and New York. This was interpreted to mean they would not be under any censorship or other governmental handicaps.

The only other important problem to be settled is that of the agenda for the Moscow meeting.

Mr. Bevin declared it should include a report on the Allied Control Council in Berlin, covering the whole status of reparations and also the problem of the return of German war prisoners from Russia and other countries, this being an important element of Germany's industrial manpower potential.

Other items in the agenda, according to preliminary drafts already proposed by the big powers, will include consideration of the permanent political organization of Germany and measures for insuring European security, notably Mr. Byrnes' proposal for 40-year German disarmament treaty.

Flying Police Squads in Montreal Search for Fred Rose Leaflets

Montreal, Dec. 10 — (CP) — Left in the dark by refusal of police officials to comment, Montrealers today watched to see what action special flying squads composed of municipal, provincial and Royal Canadian Mounted Police would take in their campaign to nip in the bud distribution of "The Defence of Fred Rose" leaflet, allegedly seditious and libellous and described as attacking the government, the courts and the Royal Commission on Espionage.

Sunday and yesterday anti-subversive officers of the Montreal police, reinforced by members of the Provincial and R.C.M.P. anti-subversive squads, raided a printing establishment, branch offices of the Labor Progressive party and several private residences in their search for copies of the leaflet.

There has been no announcement on the number of the pamphlets confiscated.

In Quebec, Premier Duplessis, also Attorney-General of Quebec, could not be reached to comment on whether the raids came under his controversial padlock law, which entitles police to search and lockup any establishment used for dissemination of subversive literature.

The law obstensibly was designed to curb and eventually eliminate distribution of Communist literature in Quebec province.

The only arrest made so far was that of Simon Malamed, 22, former McGill University student, who was taken into custody Sunday and who pleaded not guilty on his arraignment yesterday on a charge of distributing a seditious and libellous leaflet. He was released on $950 bail pending preliminary hearing Dec. 17.

Malamed, police said, was requesting signatures for a new petition to have Fred Rose released from nearby Bordeaux jail pending hearing of his appeal on his six-year sentence.

Rose, Labor Progressive member of parliament for Montreal Cartier, was convicted last summer of conspiring to communicate secret information to Soviet Russia. His was one of the first of the spy trials, several of which are yet to be heard.

Yesterday, officers swooped down on the English, French and Jewish branches of the L.P.P.

In the same building as the French office are the offices of city councillor Michael Buhay. Mr. Buhay's private home was raided, as were those of several L.P.P. organizers.

The councillor is secretary of the defence for Fred Rose committee which police claim prepared and paid for printing of the pamphlets.

Woodley Defeated; 4 New Aldermen Elected to Council

Both By-Laws Are Approved By Substantial Majorities

Mayor Frank S. Follwell was elected to his third term of office as chief magistrate of the city in the civic elections held yesterday, defeating Alderman Harold "Twig" Woodley, by a 1104 majority. Mayor Follwell polled 2878 votes as against 1774 for Alderman Woodley.

Mayor Follwell established an early lead and was never headed in the mayoral race. He surged into a 200 lead in the first returns and gradually increased his majority with later results.

Alderman-elect Bruce Lattimer showed surprising strength at the aldermanic polls forging into an early lead with Alderman E. E. Follwell chasing him to the wire after relinquishing top spot in the first two poles. Other aldermen elected are: H. J. Clarke returned to office for the eighth consecutive year; Angus Duffy; Mark Vanner; Harold J. Armstrong and James H. Lazenby.

Defeated were Thomas Jeffery, George Brown, Arthur Keegan, Clare Ridley, Harry Hill and Ted Schwab.

By-Laws Carry

Both by-laws, for the construction of an incinerator and for the purchase of industrial sites outside the present city limits, were passed by a large majority by the taxpayers, there being a vote of approximately three to one in favor.

With two polls still out through reason of the returning officer locking his report in the ballot box, the by-law for the incinerator was passed 1,325 to 454, while for the purchase of industrial sites outside the city the vote was 1,218 for 465 against.

Largest Vote in Years

The vote, according to Mayor Follwell was the largest polled in years. Approximately 58 per cent of the city electorate went to the polls as against 38 per cent in 1945. Alderman-elect Lattimer polled the largest number of votes given an alderman in years.

Elected as trustees on the Board of Education were: E. A. Geen, W. H. Finkle; Dr. R. Tennent, Alex Nathan and George Wishart. Defeated were: Ed. Shortt; Enos David, A. L. Burke, Mrs. Violet Camken, Dick Hart, F. Creeggan, and Lewis Watson.

Mr. Morley P. Duff was given an acclamation as Public Utilities Commissioner at the November nomination meetings when no other candidate offered himself for the post.

Plenty of Interest

There was plenty of interest in the election despite the fact that the streets were practically deserted. A large crowd milled in and around the city clerk's office where a battery of tabulators took down the returns as they trickled in from the polling booths.

Practically all the candidates for office were present busy with pencil and paper as they watched their electoral fortunes ebb or flow or both.

Southam Pub. Co. And Union Heads Fail to Agree

Winnipeg, Dec. 10 —(CP)—Negotiations seeking settlement of issues in dispute between the Southam Publishing Company and the International Typographical Union (A.F.L.) have ended in failure, it was made known here Monday in a report submitted by Mr. Justice S. E. Richards, of the Manitoba Appeal Court to Labor Minister Mitchell

Named industrial disputes inquiry commissioner Sept. 25, in an effort to resolve the differences between the company and union, Mr. Justice Richards said several conferences had been held but without settlement as "the parties refused to change their respective positions."

After preliminary discussions, the report said that joint and separate meetings had been held in Montreal on Oct. 24th and 25th In attendance were Philip S. Fisher, William J. Watson, president and vice-president respectively of the Southam Company, Woodruff Randolph, president of the International Union and Harry Finch, International I.T.U. representative.

Reporting on the result of these meetings, Mr. Justice Richards said:

"Mr. Fisher stated and took the position that it was the traditional policy of the company that the local publisher of each newspaper should negotiate independently any collective agreement in respect of the newspaper published by him, and that he would not negotiate for him. Mr. Randolph stated and took the position that he represented all the local unions involved in the dispute and was ready to enter into negotiations towards a settlement of the issues in dispute.

BOY KNOCKED FROM BICYCLE BY CAR

Eleven-year-old William Campbell, 142 Church Street, was admitted to hospital Monday evening, following being knocked from his bicycle when he was in collision with a motor car driven by Charles Frost, 21 Foundry Street.

According to the police report Frost was driving west on Foundry Street, when his vehicle was in collision with the bicycle which was being ridden east on Station Street. The accident was stated to have occurred as the Frost car endeavored to make a turn. The lad claimed injury to his left leg and was detained at the hospital for X-ray examination.

WAY INQUEST WED.

The adjourned inquest looking into the death of Marjorie Way, 13, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Way, 181 College Street, who died on the way to hospital Saturday evening following being knocked from her bicycle when struck by a car, will be held on Wednesday evening instead of Thursday as was reported.

The preliminary inquest was held Saturday before Coroner Dr. Russell Scott.

POLICE COURT

Jail sentence of one year was given to William Clarke, age 29, by Magistrate T. E. Wills in Magistrate's Court, on Tuesday morning, when the former pleaded guilty to a charge of forgery. Clarke was also given a three-months sentence to run concurrently, an a charge of stealing a suit in Trenton. The latter case was heard in Trenton with judgment reserved until the hearing on the forgery count.

The forgery charge against Clarke concerned his signing of another party's name to a cheque which had passed through a local bank.

Russell Lucas, Madoc district, was given seven days in jail following a plea of guilty to a drunk driving charge. In addition his auto was impounded and his driver's licence suspended for a three-months period.

Alex Crowter, Belleville, pleaded guilty to a like charge with the same penalty being imposed by Magistrate Wills.

Harry Spurgeon pleaded guilty to wilful damage and was assessed $5 and costs and was ordered to make restitution. The charge involved the breaking of a window at the rear of Walker's Hardware store.

Several other cases, including one of forgery, and charges of breaking and entry against local youths were laid over until a later court when counsel was unable to be present.

This is to thank all of those who supported and voted for me in the present election for School Trustee.

Importance of Good International Relations in World Trade Recovery Stressed by Bank of Commerce Head

Toronto, Dec. 10 — At the annual meeting of the shareholders of The Canadian Bank of Commerce today, the president, Mr. A. E. Arscott, C.B.E., stressed the importance of good international relations in world trade recovery. "Unless nations work together on problems of trade," he said "efforts to stabilize exchange rates and to encourage the flow of international investment capital will have little chance of being effective. International trade is the keystone in the whole program of economic co-operation.

"It is obvious, therefore, that our aims must be at least to maintain the current level of exports, to trade with a wide variety of countries, and to achieve a well-rounded balance with all countries. It seems reasonable, therefore, to support the rehabilitation of European economic areas and their import-export program." He pointed out, however, that this could not be attained by trading on our record but on the quality of our products and on our prices relative to competitors. The maintenance of a high rate of employment in Canada was contingent upon the maintenance of satisfactory export trade relations."

Huge Task

Mr. Arscott outlined the magnitude of task which faced country a year ago in recasting the greatly enlarged productive system to meet the needs of peacetime. This involved the cancellation of war contracts of over $1,000 million, the transfer of 1 1-4 million people from the services and munition plants to civilian occupations, the reconditioning of plant and the redistribution of available materials.

"Up to six months ago," Mr. Arscott said, "excellent progress had been made but then delays ensued through a series of employer-employee disputes which crippled the production of many factories and mills during the past summer. We lost among other things during that period a very large volume of industrial production, which might now be regarded as the 'unfinished business' of the current year and which must be undertaken anew." Production of civilian goods generally had, nevertheless, been high, and export trade, averaging about $175 million monthly, was noticeably buoyant.

Difficulties Not All Solved

Mr. Arscott made it clear, however, that unforeseen difficulties had arisen and that they were not yet all solved. The two objectives which had crystallized out of wartime aspirations were a high level of employment and a desire for stability, neither of which could be achieved through legislation or precisely measured statistically. "To reach these objectives," Mr. Arscott stated, "there are a number of factors to be reckoned with and a thorough understanding of these is of prime importance. I have particular reference to the impact of the wartime expansion of money, the cost and price of commodities (both domestic and foreign) and the effects of taxation.

In approaching the problem of retaining a high level of employment we must remember that during the war years our productive capacity and our productive possibilities increased many times ——but mainly for war purposes. Now we have the tasks of encouraging and increasing the rate of volume of consumption of our products both at home and abroad. With respect to stability; our efforts must be directed to maintaining a balance between deflation and inflation. Over-all policies must be designed to match consumption with maximum output."

Inflation Danger Present

In regard to the increase in the money supply, Mr. Arscott pointed out that it brought with it ominous possibilities, the seriousness of which depended on a number of factors. "If people decide to hold their cash or savings deposits," he said, "and to retain Government bonds bought during the war instead of making purchases while goods are in short supply, then to that extent the threat is reduced, but it will still be present until increased production at relatively stable prices brings the post-war supply of goods into balance with the present volume of money. However, the swing of the pendulum depends upon many factors, not the least of which is the attitude of the consuming public—and their attitude cannot be forecast with any degree of accuracy.

"Having regard for the above circumstances," he continued, "it is in the interests of all business to consider in terms of current conditions the significance of the term 'pent-up demand,' and what has become known as the 'backlog' of unfilled orders. Ordinarily, demand is governed by prices, and upward price adjustments may serve to restrain the volume of replacement demand. Care must be taken, therefore, to avoid the making of commitments which depend for success upon further price increases and free spending. Also it cannot be overlooked that 'pricing out of the market' can happen both at home and abroad. Hence it is necessary to keep in mind that increasing costs of production can be the main contributing factor to such a development."

Taxes Can Act as Brake.

In dealing with the subject of taxation, Mr. Arscott said that, while people paid their taxes willingly during wartime out of a sense of duty, this motive subsided under peacetime conditions and the burden of taxation became more apparent, acting as a deterrent to investment, risk-taking, savings and productive activity. "In the individual's mind" continued Mr. Arscott, "the question of whether or not he is reasonably rewarded for his work hinges on the net amount he receives in his pay envelope. Thus the natural incentive of the worker to put forth extra effort to achieve maximum per capita production, with higher gross earnings, tends to diminish when heavily graduated income taxes have the effect of allowing a relatively lower net return for the extra work; consequently production suffers. In like fashion very high taxes have the effect of discouraging venture capital necessary for the development of those assets which have a relatively high rate of depletion." Mr. Arscott suggested that the effect of continued heavy taxation on peacetime activity should be studied with a view towards revising the whole tax structure and that consideration might be given to the advisability of turnover or selective sales taxes to a greater extent, so that the direct income taxes which were having a hampering effect on business and production in general might be modified.

The well-being of the community was involved in wage issues, the bank's president asserted, but he thought it timely to point out that increases in pay for certain groups did little more than improve the access of these groups to the available supply relative to that of other groups which did not share the increase.

Substantial Business Increase.

Mr. S. M. Wedd, vice-president and general manager of the bank, reported to the shareholders on the very satisfactory growth of the bank's business within the past year, and stated that the number of individual customers continued to show a substantial increase and now aggregated over 1,500,000, a gratifying reflection of the bank's useful service.

The total assets of the bank had risen within the past year to $1,441 million, an increase of $157 million. Current loans in Canada of $238 million were nearly $51 million above a year ago, an indication of the general activity of post-war business. Deposits by the public were close to $1¼ billion. The year's earnings were higher and the amount carried forward into Profit and Loss Account, $601,000, was $206,000 higher than in 1945.

Branch Enlargement Needed.

"Our various branches," said Mr. Wedd, "continue to be very busy and in a number of instances are obviously in need of enlargement. However, rather than accentuate the existing shortages in materials, we are restricting our building program to the bare necessities for the time being. Painting and repairs are, of course, being proceeded with as the situation requires and as man-power is available."

"It is a source of great satisfaction to welcome back to the bank so many of our staff who were in the services. We are taking all possible steps to see that the period they have been away has not been a handicap to them."

McColl Frontenac Dealers Given Service Awards

With approximately 100 persons in attendance eight Belleville and district McColl Frontenac dealers were presented with long service awards at a special dealer-award meeting and social get-together held at the Quinte Hotel last week.

District manager for McColl Frontenac, Mr. T. Thomson, presided over the meeting assisted by T. W. Kendall, superintendent of sales production.

Mr. C. B. Bird had his 20 years of service with the company recognized when he was presented with a handsome gold pocket watch by Mr. Kendall on behalf of the company. The watch was suitably inscribed showing Mr. Bird as having been associated with the firm for 20 years.

A 15-year award was presented to Mr. A. Waddingham the presentation being made by G. L. Delong, local manager, while ten year awards went to R. Bell, R. Gaffney and J. E. Elliott. These awards were presented by H. R. MacDonald. Five year awards, presented by W. LeSage, were presented to P. L. O'Hearn, and I. Brown.

Demonstrations And Lectures Given At Read Short Course

Lectures and demonstrations continued during last week at the Read Short Course with a very good average attendance. Mr. H. W. Burns, assistant agricultural representative for Hastings County, will continue his lectures on Animal Husbandry, Field Husbandry, Feeds and Feeding, Poultry, etc.

Three special speakers will attend the course during this week. Today Mr. James Turnbull, Dominion swine grader in the Canada Packers plant in Peterborough, will have a number of hog carcasses with him for his demonstration. He will point out the difference between good quality hog carcasses and poor quality. He will also give considerable time to a discusion on rations for hogs that will produce the most desirable carcasses.

On Wednesday afternoon, Mr. Ken Fallis of the Crops, Seeds and Weeds Branch, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, will visit the course and will lecture and demonstrate on improved pastures, eradication of weeds by chemicals and other subjects of interest to farmers.

On Thursday, December 12th, Mr. George Pollard, Dairy Instructor for South Hastings, will attend the course. Mr. Pollard will emphasize the necessity for producing clean milk for the manufacture of cheese and clean sweet cream for the manufacture of butter. Mr. Pollard expects to have a few samples of cream with him and those attending the course will have the opportunity of actually grading these samples themselves.

Everyone interested in agriculture is invited to attend this Short Course in Agriculture at Read. The special lectures outlined above are particularly recommended.

Other Notes

The next news item will be of particular interest to the Club Project Girls and their leaders in Hastings county.

On the Belleville Junior Chamber of Commerce broadcast at 9 p.m. next Thursday evening, Miss Elsie Irvine, Home Economist, will interview Mrs. Fred Bailey of Cooper and Miss Joan McCurdy of Stirling, on various phases of Homemaking Club Work in Hastings County.

These girls have had considerable experience in Club Work and will be able to give a great deal of information which will be of interest to girls and young women and to all Institute members.

Worst Power Failure Ties Up Toronto Industry

Toronto, Dec. 10 —(CP)— The biggest power failure in Toronto's history tied up commerce and industry through the city at 11 a.m. today. Power was restored 30 minutes later.

The Toronto Hydro Electric Commission said there was no power anywhere in the city for a time.

The cause was not immediately apparent.

The wires in the head office of The Canadian Press suddenly went dead as lights went out throughout the downtown area of Toronto. In newspapers presses stopped.

At the Toronto Star power was maintained and the paper gave the story an eight-column headline, getting into its early edition only 130 words or so on the incident. The Toronto Telegram, however, remained without power as the noon hour rolled by.

Estimate Japs Murdered 131,028 in Philippines

Tokyo, Dec. 10. (AP)—An official United States War Department estimate that 131,028 Americans and Filipinos were murdered, starved or torturned to death in the Philippines as part of a Japanese "strategy of terror" was read to the International War Crimes tribunal today.

Associate Prosecutor Pedro Lopez, opening the Philippines case against former Premier Tojo and 26 other wartime Japanese leaders, said he would show these atrocities were the flowering of deliberate Japanese policy of instilling fanatical hatreds in the Japanese people.

Lopez related ghastly details of butchery, orgies of rape and mutilation, deliberate starvation of prisoners and bayonetings.

Cheese Merchants Assoc. Organized

Announcement is made of the formation of a new association "The Cheese Merchants' Association," comprising primary buyers of cheese on the Ontario Cheese Boards.

The purposes of the Association being:-

(a) To inculcate honorable and equitable practices in the marketing of cheese;

Bodies of 11 Men Recovered From English Mine

Whitehaven, Eng., Dec. 10 — (CP) — Rescue workers reported today the recovery of the bodies of 11 men killed in an explosion in an undersea section of the United Steel Companies' Lowca mine and said there was little hope that any of the four still missing survived.

Rescue crews, wearing respirators to guard against black damp and working in water knee-deep, moved tons of fallen rock and coal in an effort to reach the men still unaccounted for.

The explosion was the first serious accident in the colliery since the shaft was sunk under the sea in 1901. Some 650 men, working in three shifts, produced 3,000 tons of coal a week from the colliery.

More than 200 men were working in the mine when the blast occurred, 39 of them in the immediate area of the explosion. Only 15 were trapped, however.

SEA 'MONSTER' STUMPS EXPERTS

New York, Dec. 10 — (AP) — A 70-pound undersea "monster" complete with four horns, five sets of teeth and four fins each bearing five fingers, stumped Izaak Waltons in Brooklyn yesterday. William Atkins, 54, a retired navy man and a fisherman 40 years, hauled the creature out of the Atlantic two miles off Ambrose lightship Sunday after an hour's battle. He and a companion used hammers to subdue it in the boat.

Jolliffe Foresees Possible Federal, Provincial Voting

Hamilton, Dec. 10. (CP)—Possibility of a Federal election within 18 months and an Ontario election in 1948, both designed "to stop the Socialist menace", were foreseen here today by E. B. Jolliffe, Ontario C.C.F. leader, when he addressed the annual convention of the party in Ontario.

Mr. Jolliffe said: "Do not be surprised if there is another Ontario election in 1948. In 1937 Mr. Hepburn went to the polls—after only three years—because he wanted to force another decision before the opposition grew stronger. Mr. Drew may do the same thing. Again, the purpose will be to keep the C.C.F. out."

"There may well be another Federal election within 18 months," the Ontario leader continued. "Again, the government's real appeal will be purely negative—they will urge the electors to avoid multiplicity of parties and to stop the Socialist menace."

Mr. Jolliffe hoped that the C.C.F. appeal in both elections would be a positive one. "We don't want to win power on a protest vote," he declared. "We want to win the support of the people who vote for a C.C.F. government to carry out C.C.F. policy."

He said the party should fight the election "on a concrete four-year plan — promising no more and no less than we know we can deliver in four years."

"No C.C.F. government can establish Socialism in one province," he continued. "And no government can perform miracles with a rotten economic system. What we can do is improve greatly the provincial legislation and services, thereby opening the door to better things. Socialism will not come suddenly by revelation or by accident — it is a development, a growth by which society will steadily be transformed through the democratic organizations of the people themselves."

Mr. Jolliffe charged that since the elections of June, 1945, there had been attacks on Confederation, the economic organizations of farmers and workers and on the living standard of the people. In all three, he said, the Ontario government had "played a leading part."

In 1945, he said, the centre of conflict in Canada was on the electoral front; in 1946 the centre of conflict shifted to the industrial front.

$4 MILLION DAMAGE ACTION

Sarnia, Dec. 10 — (CP) — A $4,000,000 damage action between the Canadian National Railways and Canada Steamship Lines arising out of a fire which destroyed the C.S.L. steamer Hamonic and a C.N.R. freight shed at Pt. Edward in July, 1945, was set over to the next non-jury sitting by Mr. Justice G. A. Urquhart yesterday. The C. N. R. alleged that negligence by a steamship employee caused the fire.

Forcibly Ejected From Jail Bldg., Says Reporter

Whitby, Ont., Dec. 10 (CP) — Elmer Ross, Oshawa correspondent for the Toronto Globe and Mail, was forcibly ejected from the jail building early today by Jail Governor J. D. G. Sutherland, shortly after the hanging of George Bilton.

Officials said applicants for permission to attend the hanging had been refused and that no newspapermen had been authorized to enter the building.

Ross said he had been allowed into the governor's apartment in the building by members of the governor's family, that he had heard sounds indicating the hanging had been completed, and was making a call to his newspaper when the governor walked in, "slugged" him with an open hand, and dragged him by the overcoat to a back veranda.

Sheriff Horace Bascom of Ontario County, in a verbal statement on the incident, said he and the jail governor had come downstairs after the hanging and found Ross alone making a telephone call. He said Sutherland took Ross by the coat and after a slight struggle pushed him outdoors. He did not see any blows struck.

Municipal Elections

Voting, which was heavier than usual, marked the municipal elections in Belleville on Monday when 4,652 electors cast their ballots in the mayoralty polling. This total gives a fairly accurate impression of the public interest which was demonstrated not only in the contest for the honors and responsibilities of the office of mayor, but also in the contests for the seven council seats for a two-year term, the five seats in the Board of Education and in the large majorities given the by-laws.

A larger vote was what municipal leaders and observers have been urging in every part of the country for some years. There has been for some time rather a small vote attracted out on municipal election day in many centres, a condition which has been deplored. In Belleville somewhat the same condition has prevailed though the percentage of voters coming out has been growing for some years. Here on Monday there was a marked increase in the number of ballots cast for municipal offices. Mayor Follwell mentioned this fact in his address after the announcement of election results at the city hall.

Helping to increase the total of votes here were no doubt many factors or conditions. For the council seats four new members had to be elected owing to the decision of Aldermen McDougall, Trudeau and Thompson, not to contest the aldermanic office, and the fact that Alderman Woodley was contesting the mayoralty with Mayor Follwell. Another cause was the interest of the property-owners in the two by-laws which were given overwhelming majorities in favor of the proposals submitted by the council.

One of the important factors which no doubt stirred the electorate to greater interest was the activity of the newly organized Junior Board of Trade in getting out the voters. By slogan and by practical work, offering transportation to any voters who wished to be taken to the polls, they contributed much to this revived interest in municipal elections. Mayor Follwell praised these active young business leaders for their work and effort.

Voters in the city by so turning out have served their community well and shown that they know they are vitally interested in civic bodies and problems.

Mayor Frank S. Follwell was returned mayor for a third term over Alderman Harold Woodley who made his first bid for the office. A newly elected member led the aldermen, W. Bruce Lattimer, with E. E. Follwell in second place and Alderman Harry J. Clarke third. After these in order came Angus B. Duffy, Mark J. Vanner, Alderman Harold Armstrong and J. H. Lazenby. Messrs. Duffy, Vanner and Lazenby are also newcomers to council.

Elected to the Board of Education were Col. E. A. Geen, W. H. Finkle, both previous members, in first and second places, Dr. Robert W. Tennent and Alex. Nathan, in third and fourth places, new members, and George Wishart, fifth, a member of the board previously. Incidentally, Dr. Tennent is following in the path of his father who was for many years an honored member of the School Board.

The two by-laws were given the strongest support. That to authorize the construction of an incinerator for garbage disposal was carried by about four to one of the electors, while that to authorize the purchase of sites for industrial use was given the property-owners' approval by a large majority.

There is the evidence of the encouraging fact that the voters have been taking greater interest in civic affairs. A deeply interested electorate which will come out to vote is one of the finest developments in any community, it is the ideal condition in a municipality of citizens who have confidence in their city's future.

New Experiments

An interesting experiment has been made by six Sydney University students to discover the output of human energy for a certain task. It might be interesting if it were possible to find a means of measuring the amount of physical and mental energy to perform some tasks as compared with others.

These students had undergone a controlled course of training for a year and recently they pedalled their way through the test, each riding a "bicycle ergometer" which is a stationary bicycle with the back wheel braked by a heavy canvas belt— to determine their use of energy.

They had to work 1.5 horsepower to drive the pedals. Special instruments recorded the poundage executed and the number of wheel revolutions. A team of physiological technicians, who stood by with [illegible] and calculating machines, [illegible] the contestants' pulses before and after the experiment.

The [illegible] in this test was to establish how to [illegible] the best well-being by the minimum amount of physical energy. They were important in understanding the phenomena of recovery and improvement and an aid to research work on exercise and fatigue.

Experiments in all sorts of tests can be made in this scientific age and the new knowledge applied with important effect.

A Word For The Lumber Jack

The lumberjack has been identified with Canada's forest industry for many years. He has seen it move westward and northward from the shores of the eastern lakes. He has been a strong and rugged figure. The old-time lumberjack and riverdriver was a strong and fearless soul. In the main he was as honest and trusting as a child but he would not allow anyone "to run on him." He would fight for his rights and his dignity from the drop of the hat. Not a few men who served for years as lumberjacks later became farmers or lumbermen in their own right, according to Fort William Times-Journal.

Stalin Flatters Churchill

During his private, four-and-one-half hour session in Tehran between Winston Churchill and Josef Stalin, who now are denouncing each other, Churchill asked how a Russian can rise to a position of eminence. "There are two ways," said Stalin, "industrially or politically.".

"I suppose, then," said Churchill, "that if I were born in Russia I would have had to try to get ahead politically. I don't think an industrial career would have intrigued me."

"If you had been born in Russia," Stalin told him, "you'd have been one of the top men by now."—Leonard Lyons in New York Post.

Science in The Nursery

A manufacturer of toys has announced that he believes it will soon become practically and commercially possible to introduce radar into his products. Toy submarines and airplanes, guided by radar, may before long be added to the playthings of children.

If there is something intriguing, there is also something rather appalling in the idea. War's far beyond the parade of the wooden soldiers. The weird wonders of military warfare will become the commonplaces of childhood's experiences.

Surely if this pace keeps up there may some day be a terrible reality to the cartoon recently published in Punch. It pictured a precocious child, big-browed and bespectacled, standing before a druggist's counter. The druggist, replying to his young customer's inquiry, is saying: "No, sorry, we have no uranium today."—Montreal Gazette.

JUST FOLKS

WORK

Oh, the work must be done by the hands that are willing,
Or the dishes the sink very soon would be filling.
The floors must be swept, and the beds
 must be made up,
And the men go to business to keep the bills paid up.

The world isn't run by the few who have riches;
It is kept in repair by the diggers of ditches.
The plumbers, the builders, the butchers,
 the bakers,
The men of all trades and the lollypop makers.

The home is maintained by the toil of the mothers,
The help of their girls and their smudgy-
 faced brothers.
If ever they idled, the neighbors would know it.
Let someone stop dusting, the parlor will show it.

A sad world 'twould be if the workers stopped working,
And women the tasks of the home began shirking.
If plumbers stopped plumbing and no one dug ditches,
The fortunate few would be stuck with their riches.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why is the horseshoe associated with good luck?

The superstition that finding a horseshoe and nailing it over the door will bring good luck is widespread and dates back several centuries. It appears to be merely a modification of the earlier belief in the horseshoe as a protective charm.

In the second century A.D., when iron horseshoes were still uncommon, Pliny the Elder recommended a horseshoe as a protective charm and healing agent. During the Middle Ages the horseshoe was used as a charm against witchcraft. It is probable that placing horseshoes on stable doors was originally intended to prevent witches from entering and riding the horses at night.

John Aubrey (1626-1697), English antiquary, wrote that many houses in London in his day had horseshoes over the doors. It had long been a common belief that a horseshoe nailed to the door of a house would protect the inmates from witches and that no evil spirit would cross the threshold of a home so protected.

Lord Nelson had a horseshoe nailed to the mast of his flagship. In a mild form the superstition is still quite prevalent and horseshoes are often attached to buildings, vehicles and ships. Soon after he became President in 1945 Harry S. Truman had a horseshoe put up for luck over the main entrance to his White House office.

Just how the iron horseshoe acquired its alleged magical properties is not known. The horseshoe superstition may be a fusion of several ancient beliefs. One theory is that it was the iron of which the horseshoe is made rather than the horseshoe as such that was originally regarded as a protective charm and as a symbol of good fortune. In ancient times iron was a sacred and luck-building metal. Finding any iron was propitious. The Romans drove iron nails into the walls of their houses as an antidote to the plague. An old English rhyme runs:

See a pin and pick it up;
All the day you'll have good luck.

Another theory is that the horseshoe acquired its magical properties because of its similarity in shape to the lunar crescent, which in ancient times was a symbol of good luck. Some authorities suppose the halo or nimbus around the heads of saints and angels in conventional pictures was suggested by the crescent of the moon. Crescent-shaped devices were used to ward off the evil eye.

Still another theory is that the superstition is somehow related to the mystic "seven," the number of nails in a horseshoe. Some people say that only a cast-off horseshoe that has been found on the road is effective as a good-luck charm and that the potency of the charm is increased in the proportion to the number of nails in the shoe when found.

Believers in the horseshoe superstition disagree on the manner of hanging or nailing the luck piece. Some hang the shoe toe-down "so the luck won't run out." Others hang the shoe with the heels pointing downwards in imitation of the sacred halo. Still others insist that both these methods are wrong and that the shoe brings the best luck when hung with the sides horizontal.

Peacetime Peak In Production Will Take Month

Washington, Dec. 10 — (AP)—A return to the peacetime production peak in the United States — a peak attained on the eve of the 17-day strike of soft - coal miners — will take a month or two, economists of the government predicted today.

Nevertheless, they added privately, the country has been spared the smashing blow that a prolonged strike would have meant. Hence when finally measured against the vast scale of the country's economy, the effects may seen "only a dent."

All agreed, however, that it will be some time before total effects of the shutdown become fully apparent.

Besides the coal itself — not only a source of power but a basic material in production — the other industry hardest and most directly hit by the strike was steel. Steel also is a fundamental link affecting the whole chain of the economy, and analysis said it probably will take two or 3 weeks or more to restore steel production.

The automobile industry, another sufferer, was seen as rebounding somewhat more quickly — in a week or two.

Also hit quickly and hard were parts makers, whose production loss threatened to throw out of gear the making of many finished products.

Several building materials in severely short supply, including cement, and chemicals, paper and pulp also were said to have felt the effects of the coal stoppage sharply

On the score of wages and profits, the economists said losses will bear hard on those who suffered them, but are not likely to loom large against the country-wide totals.

Coal mining accounts for but $1,200,000,000 of the $81,000,000,000 total of wages and salaries paid by private industries last year. Manufacturing industries as a whole — principal secondary sufferers — paid out $38,000,000,000.

In totals like that, the economists said, the estimated $67,000,000 in wages lost by 400,000 miners over a two-week period and the smaller one-week loss by perhaps 150,000 others "doesn't make an appreciable dent."

Prince Philip Of Greece May Wed Princess

London, Dec. 10 (AP)—A weekend deluge of publicity for Prince Philip of Greece and Denmark Monday whetted the British people's expectation that the handsome, 25-year-old court favorite soon would become engaged to Princess Elizabeth in the "royal romance" of the year.

Three national-circulated newspapers devoted considerable space Sunday to Prince Philip, and a blessing on the reported engagement came from an unexpected source—Tom Driberg, left-wing labor member of parliament, no admirer of the Greek royal family, who described the Prince as "intelligent and broad-minded, fair and good-looking."

"It seems fair to interpret his request for British citizenship as, in part, a desire to be disentangled from Greek politics permanently," Driberg wrote in his Reynolds news column.

Prince Philip, sixth in line for the Greek throne, will forfeit his right to succeed his second cousin, George II of the Helenes by becoming a British subject.

Newspaper writers stressed that Prince Philip, who served in the Royal Navy during the war, has spent most of his life in England, has English blood (he is Princess Elizabeth's third cousin) and frequently is a weekend guest at royal residences.

"It is no secret at court that Uncle Dickie—the family name for Lord Mountbatten, the Prince's uncle—is a wholehearted supporter of the marriage," said the Sunday Pictorial, adding: "Close friends of the Princess smile and say: 'She's very young but she knows her own mind.'"

Readers were reminded that the orchestra played "People Will Say We're in Love" when the blond Prince danced at a night club with 20-year-old Princess recently.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

I am left-handed at anything where I use both hands, such as shovelling, pitching hay, wielding an axe, but I use the right hand for anything that requires but one hand. When I was fifty I happened to play cards frequently with a man who dealth the cards now with his right, now with his left hand. I found he could also write as well with either hand. From him I took the notion (the corrospondent continues) to practice ambidexterity and to my astonishment found in a very short time that I could do many things as well with my right as with my left hand. I am 65 now and as nearly as I can tell sufficiently abidextrous to change from left-handedness to right-handedness whenever it seems restful or convenient to do so, although, as you see, there is a difference of slant between this my right hand writing and this my left hand writing.

The correspondent wonders whether it wouldn't be better to train children to use both hands alternatively for writing, drawing, sewing etc. (H. McK. D.)

Another correspondent says she and her sister, 40-year-old twins, her mother and one of her brothers and her sister's daughter are left-handed. She and her twin sister write equally well with either hand, but the other three write only with the left hand. The twins had learned to write with the left hand, but then they came under the supervision of a 4th grade school teacher who insisted on right-handed writing—so, after a struggle, which was harder for the teacher than for the twins, they learned to write with the right hand too.

When it comes to tedious jobs like painting ceilings, scraping paint off, cleaning wall paper, weeding flower beds or garden the twins find they can just change hands and keep right on where one-handed folk have to pause for a brief rest every little while. Both sisters throw the ball with the left hand, usually, but bat right-handed—when playing with Girl Scout troops (both are leaders of troops).

My insurance agent is a southpaw, this correspondent remarks, and the contortions he goes through to make a note in his book or blank are really funny. We can't understand why some left-handed persons turn the paper almost upside down and practically stand on their heads to write. None of us five do anything more awkward than to change the angle of the paper as far to the left as right-handed persons usually have it to the right, and it is scarcely noticeable. We are all left-footed, we have noticed in our outdoor games—for instance we all kick off with the left foot. I'd rather lose my—

(Excuse me, Ma'am, this is too confusing for my poor comprehension — maybe because I'm a little — well, anyway, I have always batted in the usual right-handed position but it has always seemed awkward to me to place right hand above left on the bat—They made me do so, but I know I could hit better if I had the left hand above the right (as a left-handed batter does.)

If I had a choice, the correspondent continues, I would choose to be left-handed in a right-handed world, as the loss of my left hand—

(Quiet, please, and concentrate —I do hope you will get the correspondent's meaning in less than half a dozen readings. I have read it more times than that and I'm still uncertain about it.)

—the loss of my left hand wouldn't be nearly so tragic is the loss of the right hand by a right-handed person. B. H.

((By gravy! Now I see.... but, no, that was just a flash that died out before I could catch it.)

Complexion and Physic

Niece has acne and has Ben Told that if she will keep her bowels open her skin will soon clear up, so she is taking.... .... (L. H. M.)

Answer—So Ben is back? I'm sorry for your niece—not because she has acne (blackheads and pimples), which condition is more or less physiological or normal in healthy young persons, but because she is at the mercy of Ben Told, a wicked old gossip who does untold harm, thanks to the hygiene in the common schools of Yankeeland. Send me a stamped envelope with your niece's address on it and I'll send her a pamphlet about acne.

King Edward VIII Gave Up Throne Ten Years Ago

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 10 —(CP Cable) —Ten years ago today King Edward VIII gave up his throne in order to "marry the woman I love." But today's anniversary went unremembered by most Londoners.

Thousands who had wept as King Edward made his dramatic farewell speech by radio, thought of him today only as a man for whom the British government had been unable to find a job despite his talents and his charm.

The former king — now the Duke of Windsor—always makes makes it clear when he visits the United Kingdom that he desires to serve wherever he can. But the crowds watching his comings and goings are growing smaller and interest in his affairs wanes.

The Duke and Duchess now are visiting the United States after spending some time in France. During the war the Duke served as governor of the Bahamas.

His last headlines here came during a recent visit when jewels owned by his Duchess — the former Wallie Simpson for whom he gave up the crown — disappeared. .....

Britons reminded of the anniversary said they remembered their concern about Edward's successor — his shy, little-known brother George. Now King George VI is as much accepted and honored as any British ruler in history.

The slim, handsome, calm monarch has largely overcome his former hesistancy in public speaking and won the rest of his people by remaining in bomb-battered London throughout the blitz.

Even when looking back after the tests of war, Londoners say there never was such a peak of public excitement as during the dramatic days of a drizzly 1936 December when everyone wondered whether the King would leave his throne to marry Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, glamorous social figure from Baltimore.

Some said they felt a sense of unreality about the affair until the dramatic moment at the coronation in Westminster Abbey when the Archbishop of Canterbury faced the gallery where sat the peers and commoners and announced loudly:

"Sirs, I here present to you King George your undoubted King; wherefore all you who are come this day to do your homage and service, are you willing to do the same?"

Then came the answering shout heard outside the old Abbey walls by the waiting multitude and by other multitudes listening at their radios all over the world;

"God Save King George."

There was some fluctuation in the last eight candidates but in the main those elected held their positions fairly strongly throughout. Lattimer and Follwell surged into an early lead and maintained their spots through the evening. There were some slight changes in the first seven midway but nothing of any great importance.

Angus Duffy, war veteran candidate, also took an early lead and held it throughout while his running mate James H. Lazenby hovered around the seventh and eighth spot.

The editorial rooms of the Ontario Intelligencer were hives of telephonic activity as an augmented staff were kept "on the jump" from early until late evening. Five telephones shrilled steadily all evening as a curious citizenry demanded latest information on the election returns.

As a matter of fact, some residents were so anxious for information that they called for returns before the polls closed. The first telephone request for information came in as early as 5.50 p.m. From that time until 7.30 calls were intermittent but gradually increased in number until the phones rang insistently until a late hour.

Credit is due to the operators of the Bell Telephone Company who were just about the busiest people in the city. They gave excellent service and are to be commended on the way the many hundreds of calls were put through to the newspaper offices.

Packed Chamber.

A packed council chamber greeted the candidates shortly after eleven o'clock when the final returns were announced. The majority of those elected and defeated spoke to the electorate over Station CJBQ with the Hon. George H. Dunbar, Minister of Municipal Affairs, Toronto, who will open the first municipal school in Ontario for elected representatives and municipality officials here today.

The Mayor introduced his new council and those who were defeated in the order of their election. In his own remarks he thanked the residents of the city for the honor they had bestowed upon him for the third time, adding that he had asked the people what they thought of progressive action and they had showed they wanted it in no uncertain way.

The fact that the two by-laws had been passed by a 3-1 ratio proved that the people here wanted the city to grow and that they were behind the Industrial Commission which had done such a good job here since the cessation of hostilities.

Plan to Bring More.

"He looked forward," he said, "to Belleville being a real industrial city noting that several industries had already been brought here and plans were made to bring yet more. "Industries must be secured for employment of the people. More industries mean more jobs and more jobs mean a happy contented people. In order to keep people healthy and happy they must be kept employed."

Alderman-elect Bruce Lattimer was proud of the honor bestowed on him and remarked that he had not made any pre-election promises and was not making any now. He would do all in his power for the electors during the next two years and hoped that the electors would be satisfied with him two years from now.

He appreciated the generous support given him, Alderman E. E. Follwell said and was glad to be able to say thanks. He would do the best he could for Belleville the greatest city in the world.

Thanked Supporters

Alderman H. J. Clarke thanked his supporters for returning him to his eighth consecutive year as an alderman. "It is a pleasure to know that you have appreciated the way the city's finances have been run during my term of office. There were few municipalities as financially stable as Belleville, and he would again serve with the best of his ability.

"I am deeply honored tonight," Alderman-elect Angus Duffy said, "and I appreciate the confidence placed in me by such a good city as Belleville." He thanked all who voted for him especially his comrades of the service. "I now have a job to prove that I am worthy and fit for the trust placed in me."

Alderman-elect Mark Vanner thanked his supporters and the Junior Board of Trade for its get-out-and-vote campaign. The business of the city is big, and electors should return business men in order that the city's business be run properly. He looked forward to a good year for "we stand on the threshold of a big moment towards progress. We shall progress further and not be a ghost city."

Many Problems to Face

"We all appreciate the many problems that face a municipality" Alderman Harold Armstrong said. Under the leadership of the mayor the city will go on towards an expansion program to bring it further progress. He congratulated the Board of Trade on the excellent effort in assisting to bring out the voters.

Alderman-elect James Lazenby stated that he would use his enthusiasm and integrity to the betterment of the city. His slogan was "Serve Belleville to the best of my ability."

George Brown, defeated candidate stated that it was the second time he had offered himself for office, but he was not disappointed and would come again. He was sure the people had elected a good council for it proves that the city has got spirit. "It is up to us to talk it up and do the best we can. I am behind the council 100 per cent, so go to it, friends of Belleville."

Coming Back Again

"It was very encouraging to see so many people taking interest in the elections" Clare Ridley said. This was his third attempt at municipal government and this time he finished ninth. He was coming back again and next time hoped to find himself at the council table.

Thomas "Derby" Jeffery thanked his supporters and felt that the city had elected a good council and a good leader in Mayor Follwell.

At this point the mayor paid tribute to the Junior Board of Trade for its assistance in getting out the large vote. "The weather may have had something to do with it, but I feel that the Board is deserving of a lot of credit. I hope they continue this good work so that the city can have the choice of the people and the people's choice."

He then introduced the Minister of Municipal Affairs, the Hon. George Dunbar who paid complimentary tribute to the mayor, the elected aldermen and the city in general. History would be made for Belleville this week, he said, inasmuch as it was selected as the locale for the first Municipal School to be held in Ontario this year. He wanted to see all elected representatives and municipal officials attend the school and "give my staff questions they could not answer."

Extends Invitation.

He felt it was a better plan to clear up certain phases of the Municipal and Assessment Acts by bringing the school to the municipalities, and extended a cordial invitation to all to attend it.

Expressing pleasure at the success of the by-laws, the Minister said he had always favored decentralization of industry. By bringing it to outside centres it was providing healthy environment especially for the children. The incinerator was another health measure, he said, adding that Belleville was one step ahead of the capital city of Canada in installing it.

Alex Nathan, trustee-elect was the only member of the Board of Education to speak. He thanked his supporters for the confidence placed in him and in 1947 and 1948 would endeavor to prove that confidence was not misplaced.

Hastings County's grand old man, Byron Lott, stated that it was a pleasure for him to come to Belleville as he now felt he was a bona-fide resident. "He had always taken an interest in the city," he said, after reviewing his career as a county municipal official. "I don't expect to be here many more years," he said, "but I am going to stay as long as I can."

In conclusion Aldermen E. E. Follwell and Harold Armstrong, moved a vote of thanks to Radio Station CJBQ and its staff for the co-operation shown during the evening.

ELECTORS RETURN

The mayor, who backed the United Steelworkers of America (CIO) in their strike against the Steel Company of Canada last Summer, rolled up 37,954 votes to Mr. Clarke's 26,395. Heading the race of Hamilton Board of Control was Nora Frances Henderson, who asserted her right to cross picket lines during the strike.

Reaume Scores Victory

At Windsor Mayor Reaume scored an overwhelming victory over Arthur L. Mason, receiving 32,666 votes to his opponent's 10,549. Ottawa's Stan Lewis completed his first decade as the Capital's chief magistrate by getting himself re-elected by an almost 20,000 majority over his only competitor, Sydney T. Checkland.

At the Lakehead mayor Anderson, C.C.F. member of Parliament for Fort William, defeated Alderman Wilfred Rutledge, his only opponent, by 4,124 votes to 1,601 to enter his third two-year term at Fort William's chief magistrate.

Belleville's Mayor Follwell had a tighter fight but finally came out ahead 2,878 votes to 1,774 over H. G. Woodley. At North Bay an even closer battle was waged with J. C. Shaw winning with 1,864 votes over Ald. Arthur Beattie, 1,559 and Ald. Jack Grainger, 1057.

Another fairly close fight occurred at Woodstock, where D. A. Thompson defeated W. A. McLeod, 2,046 votes to 1,596. But the closest contest was waged at Cornwall. There Mr. Gallinger inched out a decision over Dr. Elzear Emard by 380 votes.

Lawrence Returned

Hamilton's Mayor Lawrence was returned to the mayor's chair for the fourth time. He was competing in his 28th election. Controller Henderson received 27,523 votes yesterday. Second position in Hamilton's Board of Control contest also went to a woman, Alderman Helen Anderson, who ran up 24,568 votes.

Third and fourth places on the four-member board went to Controller Andrew Frame and Hugh McIntyre, with 24,349 and 23,146 respectively.

Both A.F.L. and C.I.O.-affiliated unions backed an energetic "Lawrence for Mayor" campaign. The defeated mayoral candidate, "Don Clarke, termed the campaign a "clean fight, hard fought".

In Ottawa, there was genuine satisfaction among the boys of the Knockers' Club that genial Stan Lewis was starting his second decade as mayor of the Capital. The Club meets in a one-arm Sparks Street restaurant, and Mayor Lewis is a member. Its main function is to take a dim, though voluble, view of the way things are going.

Ottawa's electors gave Mayor Lewis 22,534 votes to 3,150 for his only competitor, S. T. Checkland; returned the four-man Board of Control and most of the 22 aldermen.

Leap Year Baby

Mayor Lewis, who grew up in the Capital, became the first person to hold the chief magistrate's post there for more than 10 years.

A "Leap Year baby" he was born Feb. 29, 1886, and on his 12th birthday, in 1940, he was formally initiated as a tenderfoot Scout by high officials of the Boys Scouts of Canada. He is president of the Ontario Association of Mayors and Reeves and a past president of The Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities.

Windsor's Mayor Reaume was returned to office in a vote representing more than 53 per cent of the 58,236 eligible citizens—the best cast since pre-war days.

Mr. Reaume's nearest rival, Controller A. L. Mason, received 10,549 votes. Cyril Cooper, former Controller, polled 5,857 and Dr. G. T. Bailey trailed with 352. J. S. Gow was re-elected to Board of Control and W. E. Atkinson won the other vacancy on the four-man Board.

Alderman Ernest Davenport, whose recent charges of "maladministration of justice" in Windsor have led to a City Council investigation, was defeated in his first Control Board bid.

Biggest Essex County landslide was J. O. Cahill's return as reeve in Sandwich West. He polled 1,188 votes to 301 for his opponent, J. P. Marentette.

WEDDINGS

RYMERSON—ARTHURS

The marriage of Doris Pearl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Arthurs, Belleville, to Garr Pelton Rymerson, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Rymerson, Orkney, Sask., took place at seven o'clock, Saturday evening, Dec. 7, at Tabernacle United Church parsonage with the Rev. J. W. Houston officiating.

The bride was charming in a dress of heavenly blue wool, with navy accessories, and she carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses, white baby 'mums, and forget-me-nots.

Mrs. Stanley Kerr, Belleville, was her sister's matron of honor. She wore a becoming dress of Wintertime white wool, with blue and brown accessories, and carried a nosegay of American Beauty roses, and white 'mums.

Mr. Bob Arthurs of Hanover, Ont., a brother of the bride, assisted the groom.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 22 Brassey Street. Mrs. Arthurs received the guests, gowned in marine blue figured crepe, and wearing a corsage of Talisman roses and fern. She was assisted by Mrs. Rymerson Sr., who wore a dress of gold crepe, with a corsage of Talisman roses and fern.

A delicious buffet supper was served to about forty guests by Mrs. Harold Arthurs, Mrs. Cecil Arthurs, Miss Gerry Murray, Miss Rita Ellis, and Miss Nora Armstrong. A nicely decorated three-tier wedding cake adorned the bride's table which was very attractive with a color scheme of pink and white.

The groom's gift to the bride was a wristwatch; to the matron of honor, a pair of sapphire earrings; and to the groomsman, a leather billfold.

For a motor trip to Kingston and Peterborough, the bride chose a burgundy velvet dress with muskrat hat, coat and muff. Mr. and Mrs. Rymerson will reside in Peterborough, where the groom has a lucrative position.

NELSON—BAILEY

In Cambridge Street United Church, Lindsay, with Rev. Harold B. Neal, uncle of the bride, officiating, the marriage took place at twelve o'clock, on November 30, of Helen Jane, only daughter of Mr. Ewart S. Bailey and the late Mrs. Bailey, Stirling, to Mr. Gordon Stephen Nelson, Stirling. Mr. Harry Moss provided the wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white slipper satin gown made with molded basque, sweetheart neckline and long sleeves tapering to points. Her shoulder-length veil fell from a Queen Anne headdress and she carried a cascade of red roses and pink carnations. Her attendants chose gowns of soft blue silk jersey, made with a long torso bodices. They wore headdresses of deep pink carnations and carried cascades of the same flowers. Two cousins of the bride were her attendants, Miss A. Jewell Bailey, maid-of-honor and Miss Gwendolyn A. Neal, as bridesmaid.

Mr. George Nelson was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. James Bailey and Mr. Allan Bailey.

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner for thirty-eight guests was served at the Benson Hotel, Lindsay. Mrs. H. B. Neal, aunt of the bride, wearing mist grey with black accessories, received the guests with Mrs. Warren Harlow, sister of the groom, who wore British tan with brown accessories.

Later the couple left on a motor trip, the bride travelling in a gray suit and a top-coat of soldier blue, with black accessories. Her corsage was of red roses.

Guests were present from Wasaga Beach, Warkworth, Belleville and Stirling.

McCREARY—RUTHERFORD

At three o'clock on the afternoon of December 7, St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Campbellford, was the setting for a very pretty wedding ceremony when Miss Mary Eleanor Rutherford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Rutherford, of Campbellford, was united with Mr. Allan James McCreary, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. McCreary, of Belleville. Rev. J. O. Ralston was the officiating clergyman with Rev. J. G. Hornsby, of Belleville, assisting.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride entered the church, which was decorated with pink and white 'mums for the occasion, to the strains of wedding music played by the organist of church, Mr. Albert Hazell. She wore a floor-length gown of white satin and velveteen net, featuring a fitted bodice, long sleeves and full skirt, with a long embroidered veil falling gracefully over all. Her bouquet was of roses.

Mrs. Gerald Stephen, as matron-of-honor, wore a pale pink point d'esprit and carried a nosegay of roses and 'mums, the second attendant being Mrs. R. Muir, of Belleville, in a gown of blue chiffon, carrying a nosegay of roses and 'mums.

Mr. Fred Fisher of Toronto, performed the duties of groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Harry McCreary, brother of the groom, and Mr. Robert Muir, of Belleville.

Following the ceremony a reception for sixty guests was held at "Woodlawn Bridge" where the bride's mother received in a gown of grey crepe with black accessories, and was assisted by the groom's mother in blue-grey with touches of cerise.

For travelling to Montreal and points in the United States, the bride chose a dress of turquoise blue, with sequin trim.

Later Mr. and Mrs. McCreary will take up residence in Belleville, where the bride is well known, having been a popular nurse on the staff of the Belleville General Hospital.

Birthday Party Held For Thurlow Resident

On Monday evening, a surprise party was held at the home of Mr. Clifford Smith, the 2nd line of Thurlow township, in honor of Mr. William Smith, who was celebrating his seventy-fifth birthday. More than thirty guests including sons, daughters, grandchildren and two great-grandchildren were present. The evening was spent playing cards, after which refreshments were served, with a birthday cake made by Mr. Smith's daughter, Mrs. R. C. Soble, of Ameliasburg, holding the place of honor on the table.

After the presentation of some very fine gifts, for which Mr. Smith expressed his gratitude, the guests departed wishing him many happy returns of his birthday.

Fashion Flashes

A BACKBONE of almost every wardrobe is the little black dress that always seems to fit into any but the most elaborate scene. Such a frock is of black silk crepe, with diagonal line from shoulder to opposite hip, where it terminates in side drapery on the skirt. High, rounded, neckline. Heavy white lace cuffs — detachable — are used with the full push-up sleeves.

LUXURY in the form of metallic threaded fabrics give excitement to the winter sartorial scene. Black taffeta, with diagonal stripes in silver and gold thread, is used for a handsome evening frock. The very full skirt is pulled back into a full bustle bow. Halter top is bare almost to waist in back.

AND NOW we have with us the strapless bathing suit. A wired bra top is featured in one new swim and playsuit line. A typical model is a one-piece suit of black rayon fabric, the curved, strapless bra top above a sleek torso. Skirt is slit at the side to show the lime and black stripes of fitted trunks.

CHRIST CHURCH EVENING W.A. MEETING

Members of the Evening Branch of Christ Church W.A. held their final meeting last evening in the Parish Hall at the supper hour. In keeping with the festive season the table was centred with a miniature Christmas tree, decorated with tinsel and sparkling lights.

Following the meal, Rev. J. G. Sparling spoke to the members on "Post War Problems of Missionaries", in terms of difficulties confronting missionaries in India, Africa, and among the Indians and Eskimos of Canada. Mrs. Stewart, leader of the Junior Branch, invited the ladies to attend a concert to be given by the Juniors in the near future. Mrs. H. M. Younghusband contributed two very fine violin solos with Mrs. H. Pitt as accompanist; and Mrs. E. Hickey in her usual pleasing manner told the story of "Mrs. Brown's Change and Rest" by Nellie McClung, responding to an encore with a poem, "Cattle in the Stall".

The meeting closed with the singing of carols with Miss Grace Gillard at the piano.

LARGE TUSK FOUND

Simcoe, Dec. 10 — (CP) — a 23-inch-long tusk, weighing 16 pounds and believed to be the tusk of a prehistoric animal, was picked up by the drag bucket operated by Joseph Vince at a nearby gravel-pit Monday. The tusk, which was dragged from 20 feet of water, is the color of old ivory and extremely hard.

Norwegian Nurse Expresses Thanks For Clothing Gift

Recently letters from abroad have been received by local citizens. Miss Dorothy Moorman, whose name was enclosed in a package of knitted children's garments sent overseas some time ago, is in receipt of the following letter from Norway, which speaks for itself.

October 20, 1946

Dear Unknown Friend, Miss D. Moorman:

I will try today with a few words give you an idea so you can see how the passing out of the American gift clothes that was done. We got a whole bunch this Spring and this Fall we got two automobiles full both with new and old clothes. I would like to pass my hearty thanks to all those who have given parcels and it would have been delightful to have seen their faces when the gifts were given out. It was just like a movie and a good one at that. We got a whole box full of red caps which was very well received.

I am as you would call it, a Victorian Order nurse, and travelling around to the country eight schools, and it is up to me to see that everyone who needs it most, gets it first. That includes the small children, the common school, the high school and the Collegiate, also the teachers.

We also got a box of Finland caps. They were given to people working outside. We also have a box with small sweaters suitable for children from 2 to 6 years. We also got a box of stockings for me, and some new bloomers and blouses which were given to school children. Also shoes both old and new. There were also overcoats for men and women, dress plenty. All this was given out in a hurry. So I would again like to send my hearty thanks for everything. I am sure there are many people anxious to know how all those clothes were distributed. You can not really understand how badly off we were for clothes, especially underwear. I had at times to lend people some of my clothes whenever they were going to the hospital, as the hospitals had no clothes as they were all cleaned out by the Germans.

It is beginning to be a little better to get clothes, but they are awfully costly. We also got thirty parcels with childen's clothes which was needed badly, especially babies. I have seen many bare rear ends sticking out, with no soap, salve or powder, and practically no baby clothes. We had to use fish oil instead of salve. So you can imagine how the clothes looked like.

We also got a big box with First Aid equipment for the schools which I distributed out through the country school, but I kept quite a bit for my own use in my practice. We have to combat scabies and lice during the war, but since we got this new D.D.T. powder it is a pleasure to clean up after the lice. I wish I could have taken a trip to America and could have told you of the life here during the war, and then you'd have had many things to think of. This has been quite a lengthy letter and as I found your address on the floor during the distributing of the clothes, I thought I'd make use of it and write and send our hearty thanks.

If you get this letter and understand it, it would be nice if you could send us a few words so that I will know if this letter has reached over. It is now about the last part of October and the Fall has been very nice, and there are still a lot of lovely flowers in the gardens. I must now stop with a hearty greeting from

WESLEY W.A. MEETING

White's District—The December meeting of the Wesley Church W.A. was held in the home of Mrs. H. M. Rutter, Thursday afternoon, with a fine attendance. Mrs. Fred Denyes presided. The devotional service was conducted by Mrs. Rutter, using "Onward Christian Soldiers", Psalm 46 and prayer. During the business period reports were received from the Canvassing committee, showing that contributions this year were much in excess of last year. The treasurer reported a considerable balance on hand. Mrs. J. Stewart reported for the Visiting Committee.

Rev. A. C. McCallum officiated for the election of 1947 officers with the following results—President, Mrs. Fred Denyes; Vice President, Mrs. J. Wickens; Secretary, Mrs. H. M. Rutter; Treasurer, Mrs. C. Wilson.

The serving of refreshments by the hostess and her assistants was followed with the benediction by Rev. A. C. McCallum.

Malcolm M'Donald Governor-General Of Malaya Weds

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 10 (CP)—Somewhere in Canada today a dark, handsome groom and his blue-eyed bride are on their honeymoon.

Few of the hundreds celebrating their marriage in Christ Church Cathedral yesterday saw the smiling couple slip out the front door and into a sleek limousine which drove off trailing one well-worn moccasin from its rear fender.

Their destination was a secret, but it is known that this Canadian honeymoon will last only a few days as Rt. Hon. Malcolm MacDonald, governor-general of Malaya, and his bride, the former Audrey Fellowes Rowley of Ottawa, soon must start on a longer journey to take them into the Far East. They plan to reach Malaya about the middle of January.

Big names in the social and political register of Canada's capital gathered to pay tribute to the popular couple. Viscount Alexander, Canada's governor-general, and Lady Alexander opened their home for the reception which was attended by more than 450 guests.

Dressed in long yellow silk jersey, and wearing a corsage of orchids and roses on her brown purse, the bride, who is the widow of Lt.-Col. John Rowley, Ottawa, was given away by her father, Kenyon Fellowes chief of the Capital's Income Tax Department.

Sheila MacDonald, sister of the groom and the bride's only attendant, was dressed in "geranium" red jersey with matching cap.

Groomsman was Arnold Heeney, clerk of the Privy Council, who attended Oxford University at the same time as Mr. MacDonald.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King was among the guests at both the wedding and the reception where he paid tribute to the newlyweds, staying it was a marriage "woven on the loom of romance", and was of great intra-Empire and international significance.

PRODUCTION INCREASES

London, Dec. 10 — (AP)—The Moscow radio said today that industrial production in the Soviet Union rose 19 per cent during the first nine months of 1946 "in bold contrast to the situation in the United States and the latest data on unemployment there."

CONSTABLES QUITE AGED

Fort Erie, Dec. 10 — (CP) — In distinct contrast to troubled European election scenes, this city has no fear of lawlessness at its voting booths. Both of the citizens acting as constables in 2 subdivisions, Thomas E. Knaggs and Joseph Goulding, are more than 80 years old.

CONSIDERABLE INCREASE

Niagara Falls, Dec. 10 — (CP) —A total of 367,106 persons crossed into Canada through this port in November, an increase of 88,582 over November 1945, Grayson Gadner, collector of customs here said Monday.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

How Can This Woman Find Out if She Was an Illegitimate Child?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have a sister who has been married a good many years. Her in-laws and our parents have never been very friendly, and we never could understand this because there seemed to be no reason for it.

Some time ago, we heard indirectly that Sis was born before Mother was married, and that her father was a relative of her husband's family. That would seem to clear up the question of the feeling between the two families.

Can you tell us where we could find out if this is true? My sister has always been known by our last name. Is there any place we could write to and see if there was a child born that was given my sister's name or one that was given my mother's maiden name? My sister would like to know her father, but doesn't wish to involve any of the relatives. It would clear up so many things in her married life.

"N. E."

The quickest way to find out what your sister wants to know, of course, would be to go straight to some member of the family who would know the facts and ask a direct question. You do not say whether or not your mother is still living. If she is, I think your sister should put the question to her. There seems no sense in running all around Robin Hood's barn to get information that is right at hand.

Trying to get the facts through other channels would certainly be a time-consuming and complicated business, since the birth took place so long ago and might involve a lengthy search of records in various places. You don't seem any to sure, either, of enough facts to give anyone much to go on in making such a search. You would have to know what town—at at least what state—you think this girl was born in, before anyone could even begin to look.

I strongly urge your sister to take the simple way of consulting some member of her family about the matter.

Lots of People Have Recovered From Broken Engagements

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I was engaged to a girl in a nearby city. I met her while working in her town. We were very much in love and were soon to be married. Everyone agreed it would be a good match.

Then she came to visit me and told me she wanted to go to the big city and be a career woman, and she broke our engagement. She told me there was no one else in her life, but recently I had a letter from her in which she said she had found someone else she cared for. I have written to her but have received no answer. Please tell me if I should take my ring. Should I wait to hear from her or forget her?

"Brokenhearted S. F. W."

I'd hate to venture a guess at actual statistics, "S.F.W.," but I'll stick my neck out this far: I'll bet there are more happily married men and women in the world today who went through at least one broken engagement before they found "the" one than there are people who didn't. They all were sure they were brokenhearted, too. But they got over it. And you will, too, little as you believe it now.

Your girl friend should have sense enough to send back your ring without being reminded, but if she doesn't, by all means write and ask for it. If she doesn't answer the letter by returning the ring, then I guess you'll have to stand the loss and charge it to experience, which is always regrettably expensive.

Do keep your eyes and thoughts on the future. There's another girl headed toward you right now who'll turn the corner any minute. Start watching for her.

Moira

W.I. MET

Moira—The regular meeting of Huntingdon East Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. John Farrell. This was the grandmothers' meeting.

The president, Mrs. Nelson Welsh took charge of the meeting. Some business was discussed and it was decided to apply for the legislative grant; also to hold the Christmas meeting on Dec. 17th.

A poem "Grandmother's Old Arm-Chair" was read by Mrs. Milton Vandewaters. A solo "The Second Minuet" as rendered by Mrs. Nelson Welsh was much enjoyed. A paper "Social Life in Grandma's Day" prepared by Mrs. F. Herity who was absent, was read by Mrs. Wesley Farrell. Presentation of the prize was donated to the only grandmother present Mrs. John Farrell. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

Victory Class Entertained

On Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Farrell entertained the Victory Class. Mr. Ross Ketcheson presided and the program was as follows: A song service, a devotional period; reading by Wesley Farrell; duet by Mrs. Arthur Emerson and Lola; solo by Mrs. Angus Mumby; Bible reading by Mrs. Wallace McInroy; song by Beverley Foster; a hymn and prayer closed the meeting after which refreshments were served.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Vanderwater, Mr. Albert Vanderwater and Mrs. Saylor of Trenton were guests on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Vanderwater.

Mr. George Post has returned from spending two weeks' in Kingston and Montreal.

Sunday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Vanderwater included Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hall and Meribeth, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hall and Lindsay of Belleville.

Mr. Stewart had dinner on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Wallace McInroy.

On Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Harry Holden opened their home to friends and neighbors who gathered to do honor to Mr. and Mrs. Roy Chambers (nee Jean Holden). Mr. George Post was chairman for the evening and musical numbers were provided by Grace McInroy and May Scott, John and Harry Holden.

Mrs. Stephen Armstrong read the address and Mr. and Mrs. Chambers were presented with a cold pack canner and a rug. Refreshments and a social evening followed.

Gifts To "Pay" For Seeing Daughter?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Several years ago my wife deserted me, taking with her our only child, a daughter, who is now twenty-one years old. During these years my daughter has written to me very seldom and has seen me about twice a year, and then only after much pleading. When I write to her I have to write in care of one of her relatives, and when I ask her to give me her address she refuses to talk about it. I found out last year that she lives with her mother in the adjoining city, and that her mother lives with another man. However, I am not interested in what her mother does, we have no court trouble, she never bothers me and I never bother her. I am a man of good reputation, don't drink or gamble, have never done anything my daughter could be ashamed of, and am steadily employed at a moderate salary.

My problem concerns whether or not I should continue to give my daughter presents. Although she has never mailed me a Christmas card or a birthday or Father's Day card, I have always sent her gifts on her birthday and for Christmas. Usually she does not write to thank me for these, and when I ask her why she does not, she says she has "forgotten to write" or "was busy with her friends". Last week when I wrote to ask her if I could see her soon, she replied that she was "very busy at the office", but she did add that she had already spent her week's salary, that she "needed a new outfit" and that she didn't know how she was "going to manage to buy a pair shoes, with shoes so expensive as they are." Now I'm inclined to send her fifty dollars. Or do you think I shouldn't? I have been trying to save money for her, so that when she marries I can give her as many hundreds of dollars as I possibly can for a wedding gift.

I feel that the reason why she doesn't see me oftener is that I don't give her money often enough, or perhaps it's her mother's influence. But always my hope is that if I give her the money she hinted for now, she may be willing to see me again next Christmas. What do you suggest? Your kind reply will comfort me.

S. R.

I wish I had the power to give you the reply that would comfort you. But, for better or for worse, the only comfort really important to your longing heart is your love for your daughter and your holding on to or winning some devotion from her. And although it would be easy to explain your said circumstance with, "How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child", this girl, "the sole daughter of your heart", has obviously had a difficult life, has been made miserable and confused in the most impressionable years of her life. your wife's desertion of you and her living arrangements now are not your daughter's fault, and as her father you should do everything to try to make up for the love and protection she has lacked, even though she seems to be willing to admit only a material need of you. So if gifts are at the moment your only access to her, I would, if I were you, use that entrance to her life, hoping that some day, when she grow wise and is mellowed by life and living, she will show spiritual need of you, will respect your good qualities and good reputation, will show you the devotion for which you yearn.

Matron of Honor in Bridal-Group Photograph?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is the matron of honor included in the bridal-group photograph with the maid of honor and the best man, although she (the matron of honor) has no partner?

M. R.

Yes, of course! It would be cruelly discourteous not to include the matron of honor in the bridal photograph. There isn't any reason why the bridal-group photograph should include only "pairs" of attendants!

Husband's Mother and Money Root of Most Family Quarrels

In-laws cause many a family dispute but it's the husband's mother, rather than his wife's, who is the greatest potential troublemaker in a home.

That's the opinion of an authority on marital problems, Dr. Clifford R. Adams who, in an article in the American Magazine, says that along with mothers-in-law "money is at the root of the largest part of all family bickering."

"A wife can usually get on with her own mother," writes Dr. Adams who is director of Penn State's Marriage Counselling Service, but such is not the case with the husband's mother, especially when "the two women are cooped up all day together in the house."

Other than in-laws, Dr. Adams says family quarrels stem from these major sources:

1. Different ideas about disciplining of children.
2. Dissatisfaction over a husband's failure to get a salary increase.
3. A husband's belief that his wife is extravagant.
4. Stinginess, real or imagined, of husbands.
5. Dominating or dictatorial attitude of some wives.
6. A wife's devotion to outside activities at the neglect of home or husband.
7. A wife's persistence in reforming her spouse.
8. Jealousy, especially on the part of women who feel they're being tied down to the house too much.
9. A husband's lack of appreciation, especially of his wife's looks and clothes.

"In well-ordered homes," Dr. Adams states, "the men and wife have usually learned how to give in gracefully on little issues and how to compromise the big ones."

Lone Woman Rules Social Register

The advisory committee of the Social Register, the membership of which has been a deep secret for decades, is composed of only one unknown woman — Bertha Eastmond of Summit, N.J., the daughter of a railroad conductor who is without regal background, it is revealed by an article in Collier's.

Miss Eastmond, who is said to be unknown even to the oldsters in her New Jersey town, has been a member of the staff of the Social Register for about 40 years, Mona Gardner, author of the article, reports. Her judgment in rejecting or accepting names submitted for listing in the Social Register, is said to be "omnipotent and absolute."

Metropolitan society editors — "most excellent reservoirs of both drawing-room and bedroom news" —have long been "completely baffled" in trying to determine the membership of the so-called Advisory Committee, Miss Gardner declares. The latter followed "innumerable guide posts, hints, suspicions, and downright accusations" in breaking open the secret.

Miss Gardner reports that Miss Eastmond, as of about 40 years ago, was employed as a secretary by the late Louis Keller, who began publishing the Social Register in 1886. When Keller died about a quarter of a century ago, the property was left to a group of heirs, with the proviso that Miss Eastmond should continue as the managerial head.

As the official catalogue of snobbery in the United States, the Social Registrar is now published annually in 12 cities and brings in a pot of gold to the heirs and Miss Eastmond—about $170,000 annually. Under Miss Eastmond's reign it has been capricious in accepting and rejecting names for listings. Once it listed the name of a dog which had been submitted as a member of a blueblood family; another time it listed the name of a Negro wife of a blueblood, but it has with fair persistency denied listings to bluebloods who've gone on the stage or in the movies.

Armed Gunman Ties Up Taximan, Takes Money and Cab

Thorold, Dec. 10 — (CP)—An armed gunman last night held up a Thorold taxi driver, Len Purdy, stole his money and cab and left him tied in a ditch. The hold-up occurred near Green's Corners on No. 3 highway between Allanburg and Niagara Falls.

Purdy was forced at gun point to remove his shoes, then, tied hand and foot, was dumped into a ditch. The cab, with the shoes in it, was later recovered in Toronto where police are holding a man alleged to have been driving the cab, Kindsley Mann, age 34, no fixed address. Police say a revolver was found on Mann and that he is wanted in Brantford and Hamilton.

A. E. Arscott, President of The Canadian Bank of Commerce, Outlines Progress in Reconversion

Unforeseen Difficulties Encountered—Not Yet All Solved

Bank's Progressive Year Reviewed by S. M. Wedd, Vice-President and General Manager

At the Annual Meeting of the Shareholders of The Canadian Bank of Commerce, held in the Head Office of the Bank in the City of Toronto, December 10th, Mr. Allan E. Arscott, C.B.E., President, and Mr. Stanley M. Wedd, Vice-President and General Manager, presented the Annual Statement of the Bank's operations in the past year, together with a review of business conditions. Mr. Arscott's address to the meeting follows, in part:

More than twelve months have passed since the fighting ceased on the battle fronts of the recent World War. The people of many of the countries involved are directing their efforts now towards the achievement of their ideals of peace-time activity, and so it is in Canada.

At the end of our crop year we view a country which has received a full measure of the bounty of Providence. This year's crops over all are among the highest on record. The harvest in the Prairie Provinces has been outstanding. The orchard districts have prospered, although the difficulties of obtaining adequate packing and shipping materials hindered for a time the marketing of many of the products. Forestry operations are the most active ever undertaken in Canada owing to a peak demand at home and abroad for lumber, wood pulp and newsprint. All in all the year now coming to a close can be considered a good one so far as our primary products are concerned.

Canada has so long been considered by many to be a country dependent for its prosperity on the products of the land, be it in agriculture, forestry or mining, or of the sea, that the industrial development which took place during the war years may be overlooked. This development was essential to the war effort, but in the year that has passed we have commenced a noteworthy reconversion to peace-time activities.

RECONVERSION

A year ago we faced a major task of recasting Canada's greatly enlarged productive system to cope with the anticipated needs of peace-time both in Canada and abroad. This changeover involved the cancellation of war contracts of over $1,000 million, the transference of at least 1¼ million people from the armed forces and munition plants to civilian occupations, the reconditioning of overworked industries and the redistribution of available materials. Up to six months ago excellent progress had been made but then delays ensued through a series of employer-employee disputes which crippled the production of many factories and mills during the past summer. We lost among other things during that period a very large volume of industrial production, which might now be regarded as the "unfinished business" of the current year and which must be undertaken anew. In the last two months there has been a resumption of business in all industrial fields and, taking the year as a whole, how well this massive and arduous reconversion work has been done may be judged by a few facts.

Civilian employment during the year reached a record peace-time level, in spite of the difficulties of relocation, and it has been estimated that in the spring of this year 4¾ million people were gainfully employed. Production of civilian goods generally has been high—exceeding, in many lines, the volume established in 1939. Noticeable, too, has been the buoyancy of our exports which have been at an average monthly rate of roughly $175 million, and this without the volume of war supplies that bulked large in exports in the war years. This average in comparison with 1935-1939 figures is about double the pre-war value. Imports of a monthly average of approximately $150 million were the highest in the recent history of this country. I think we can all agree that this record is a worthy accomplishment.

MAIN OBJECTIVES

There have been unforeseen difficulties to cope with in this transition period and they all are not yet solved. New problems and issues that were in the first instance considered of secondary importance now are developing to an extent that commands careful thought and study.

From the maze of ideas and ideals that gained prominence during the war years two stand out: the objective of a high level of employment and the desire for stability. These "targets" are not capable of achievement merely through legislative enactment nor are they capable of precise statistical measurement, yet they well may serve to set the course of economic activity for years to come. To reach these objectives there are a number of factors to be reckoned with and a thorough understanding of these is of prime importance. I have particular reference to the impact of the war-time expansion of money, the cost and price of commodities (both domestic and foreign), and the effects of taxation.

In approaching the problem of retaining a high level of employment we must remember that during the war years our productive capacity and our productive possibilities increased many times—but mainly for war purposes. Now we have the tasks of encouraging and increasing the rate and volume of consumption of our products both at home and abroad. With respect to stability, our efforts must be directed to maintaining a balance between deflation and inflation. Over-all policies must be designed to match consumption with maximum output.

INFLATIONARY TENDENCIES IN THE ECONOMY

There are many definitions of inflation and much attention has been directed to its inherent evils. As an almost inevitable accompaniment of high-level war production, there has been a marked expansion of the volume of money which might be viewed as monetary inflation. On the other hand, by means of price and wage controls, investment of savings in Government bond issues and taxation to meet the costs of war, price inflation has been moderate. However, the increase in money supply brings with it ominous possibilities, the seriousness of which depends on a number of factors. If people decide to hold their cash or savings deposits and to retain Government bonds bought during the war instead of making purchases while goods are in short supply, then to that extent the threat is reduced, but it will still be present until increased production at relatively stable prices brings the post-war supply of goods into balance with the present volume of money.

In interpreting inflationary or deflationary tendencies it is usual to begin with an assumed balance between goods and services available on the one hand, and the purchasing power of the people on the other. Deviations from this balance are viewed as inflationary or deflationary depending upon which factor is in greater supply. The quantity of money available now for consumption purposes in relation to the present supply of goods emphasizes the inflationary potential. In pursuing this pattern of thought caution must be exercised in assuming that people will spend without regard for price or exercise of choice. However, as I have indicated already, the swing of the pendulum depends upon many factors, not the least of which is the attitude of the consuming public—and their attitude cannot be forecast with any degree of accuracy.

Having regard for the above circumstances it is in the interests of all business to consider in terms of current conditions the significance of term "pent-up demand", and what has become known as the "back-log" of unfilled orders. Ordinarily, demand is governed by prices, and upward price adjustments may serve to restrain the volume of replacement demand. Care must be taken, therefore, to avoid the making of commitments which depend for success upon further price increases and free spending. Also it cannot be overlooked that "pricing out of the market" can happen both at home and abroad. Hence it is necessary to keep in mind that increasing costs of production can be the main contributing factor to such a development.

TAXATION

During war time taxes are paid willingly in the main because people are motivated by a sense of patriotism and duty. When this urge subsides the continued heavy burden of taxation becomes noticeable and acts as a deterrent to investment, to risk-taking, to saving, and also to productive activity. It must be recognized that taxes, whether they are levied on goods or services or earnings, in the end fall upon the citizens. It is impossible to appraise the reaction of all individuals concerned, but with the great body of workers the important factor is not the gross income before tax deduction at the source, but the amount of the "take-home" pay. In the individual's mind the question of whether or not he is being reasonably rewarded for his work hinges on the net amount he receives in his pay envelope. Thus the natural incentive of the worker to put forth extra effort to achieve maximum per capita production, with higher gross earnings, tends to diminish when heavily graduated income taxes have the effect of allowing a relatively lower net return for the extra work; consequently production suffers. In like fashion very high taxes have the effect of discouraging venture capital necessary for the development of those assets which have a relatively high rate of depletion.

Taxation and spending in the main are inseparable. It is well understood that taxes are necessary and that no single ideal expenditure-revenue pattern can be outlined. The effect, however, of continued heavy taxation on peace-time activity in all spheres suggests fresh study towards revision of the whole tax structure. Also consideration may well be given to the advisability of turnover or selective sales taxes to a greater extent to allow of a modification of direct income taxes which are having a hampering effect on business and production in general.

PRODUCTION AND WAGES

The task of production has been increased by work stoppages and shortages. Because of the interdependence of all branches of industry a disturbance or dislocation in any one part of the economy causes a wave of disorganization throughout the entire system. This has been demonstrated in recent months. Wage issues cannot be segregated from the well-being of the community.

In this connection I think it timely to point out that changes in rates of pay for certain groups do little more than give these groups greater command over the available supply than those groups not included in pay increases. And an over-all increase, assuming the same rate of production, ultimately completes the cycle with everyone back in his relative position.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Throughout the war years many reports have been received of the high standing of Canada and Canadians. Even in recent months Canada's role as a creditor country has been noted favorably in other countries, perhaps because few, if any, political strings are attached. This is all to the good, and no Canadian can be other than proud of this record. However, war conditions pass, and no less than ourselves are the people in other countries working toward rehabilitation. It is at this point that we must trade not on our record of the war years but on the quality of our products and on our prices relative to competitors. Changing costs of production and other allied factors may well alter our terms of trade to our disadvantage. The test of sustained high domestic employment is the continued willingness of foreign countries to engage in trade with us.

Our stake in world trade is perhaps as high as that of most countries involved in the trade discussions to be carried on in connection with the operation of international monetary agreements. Unless nations work together on problems of trade, efforts to stabilize exchange rates and to encourage the flow of international investment capital will have little chance of being effective. International trade is the keystone in the whole program of economic co-operation. It is obvious, therefore, that our aims must be at least to maintain the current level of exports, to trade with a wide variety of countries, and to achieve a well-rounded balance with all countries. It seems reasonable therefore to support the rehabilitation of European economic areas and their import-export programs.

In conclusion, I may say that in today's transition period it is necessary to recognize the difficulties involved in replacing the war incentive of "self-preservation" with the ideals of individual freedom and liberty. In this task we must not lose sight of the principles of democratic society, as we know them, in spite of the seemingly attractive alternative proposals which ultimately must lead to the subjugation of the individual to the state. It is not my intention to attempt to allocate responsibility but it becomes our business—the business of everyone—when conditions arise which make it impossible to operate as a free people. We Canadians, and I believe I speak for all of us, understood that the recent war was fought to destroy the possibility of control over our lives by the arbitrary exercise of power. Maintenance of this objective through the transition is of equal importance. Let it be remembered that individual freedom and democratic government were recognized many centuries ago as the highest yet most difficult way of life to attain.

GENERAL MANAGER'S ADDRESS

We are pleased to present to you a balance sheet which indicates a satisfactory growth in the business of the Bank and also to report that the number of our individual customers, both borrowers and depositors, is continuing to show a substantial increase, and now aggregates over 1,500,000. This is a gratifying reflection of our useful service.

As you will observe from the Annual Statement which is before you, the total assets of the Bank stand at $1,441,581,728, an increase of $157,260,944 in the past twelve months. Quick assets aggregate $1,116,523,416, or about 81% of the Bank's liabilities to the public.

We have on deposit with the Bank of Canada and in notes of that Bank $140,193,543. Notes of and cheques on other banks amount to $37,421,893. Dominion and Provincial Government securities, of which over 36% mature within two years, stand at $770,381,773.

Public securities other than Canadian now aggregate $63,733,181. These are mostly represented by the obligations of the United Kingdom and of the United States.

Our Call Loans in Canada, which amount to $14,526,710 are down from last year and reflect to some degree the readjustment which has been taking place in the various stock markets. This also applies to the figures of our Call Loans elsewhere which presently stand at $9,024,053.

Current loans in Canada now amount to $237,869,093. There is an increase of $50,978,322 in these figures which is an indication of the general activity of post-war business.

Our current loans elsewhere amount to $27,325,940.

The total of the deposits by the public stands at $1,233,018,308, represented by $536,145,245 in current accounts and $696,873,063 bearing interest.

Earnings for the past year are higher and it will be noted that after providing for increased dividends the amount carried forward into the Profit and Loss Account is $601,239. This is $205,713 in excess of the amount carried forward a year ago.

Our various branches continue to be very busy and in a number of instances are obviously in need of enlargement. However, rather than accentuate the existing shortages in materials, we are restricting our building program to the bare necessities for the time being. Painting and repairs are of course being proceeded with as the situation requires, and as man-power is available.

It is a source of great satisfaction to welcome back to the Bank so many of our staff who were in the Services. We are taking all possible steps to see that the period they have been away has not been a handicap to them.

I should like to emphasize at this time that the satisfactory results of the past year's business are ample evidence that the staff of the Bank are competent and aggressive. They are a splendid group of men and women, of whom the shareholders can be justly proud.

CHEESE PRICES DROP

New York, Dec. 10 (AP) — Cheese prices on the New York wholesale market declined one to three cents a pound. The drop was attributed to decreased consumer demand and trade reaction to the lowering of prices last Friday on the Wisconsin market.

Brother Always Nicest to Slain Woman Says Sister

Leamington, Dec. 10 (CP) — Seventeen year old William (Bill) Jewitt, charged with the hammer slaying of his mother, was described today by his sister, Jewell, 19, as always being "the nicest" to the slain woman.

Jewell, a student at the University of Toronto, said she couldn't understand why the murder was committed. "Bill loved mother very much," she said. "He was always the most generous person. He was always kind and considerate towards her. Of the three of us, he was the nicest to her."

The other member of the family is Bill's twin, Jack, who discovered his mother's body in the kitchen of their home Friday night.

Jewell expressed concern for Bill, now in Essex county jail at Windsor, and said she was anxious to see him.

Keith Laird, Windsor counsel retained by Bill's dentist father, George Jewitt, saw the accused boy shortly after his brief court appearance Saturday. He described Bill as "too wrought up to talk coherently." Young Jewitt was remanded until Thursday.

Choir Loft Empty

The choir loft at Leamington United Church was empty yesterday—the minister, Rev. Sidney Davison said the choir members felt they could not be at their places so soon after Mrs. Jewitt's death. It was from a choir practice that the 50-year-old woman had returned a few minutes before she was slain.

Mr. Davison said: "Friday night she attended one of the loveliest choir practices we had had for a long time. Many of the members of the choir have since commented on the fine friendly feeling which was evident throughout the rehearsal. The choir, the church and the whole community is overwhelmed."

Surviving Mrs. Jewitt, beside her immediate family, are her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Jewell of Cannington, and a brother, Ross, of Toronto. Mrs. Jewitt, a native of Cannington, came to Leamington more than 20 years ago.

Heavy Gales Again Sweep Britain

London, Dec. 10—(CP Cable)—While a gale tore at the coast of Britain yesterday, snow, hail, rain and landslides ruled the land.

The countryside was flooded by heavy rains. Roads in Devon and Cornwall were awash in many places. Snow, hail and three inches of rain fell on Dartmoor. Near Exeter the river burst its banks at several points and at Newton, Abbot, a landslide blocked the road for three hours.

Because of the gale single-decker buses were substituted for double-deckers on the coast road from Torquay to Paignton. At Torquay cars and buses ran a gauntlet of mountainous waves breaking over the seawall.

Flood warnings were circulated as the river Wavney reached the danger level at Bungay after 24 hours of rain. The mountainous seas, whipped up by the gale which sometimes reached hurricane force, disrupted ocean shipping.

The Air Ministry said the gales probably would continue several days.

Many vessels were in difficulties during the weekend and several sent out calls for help. Some cross channel services were halted by the storm.

LIGHT BULB MYSTERY

Niagara Falls, Dec. 10 — (CP) —Thorold township police are trying to throw light on the light bulb mystery. Thieves broke into the garage of Charles Rungeling Saturday night and stole eight 42-inch fluorescent light bulbs and fixtures valued at $160.

EXPORT CLOVER

London, Dec. 10 — (CP)—District farmers may gain more than $2,000,000 this season from the export of 500,000 pounds of clover to Europe, B. Hillier, Dominion government plant inspector said yesterday. All the clover is the "double cut" type, and will be used in Europe for pasture and hay.

Fire Destroys Landmark In City of Montreal

Montreal, Dec. 10 — (CP) — A historic landmark, and once the source of a $100,000 a year income for the city of Montreal, Bonsecours market in the heart of the city's business district was gutted by a two-alarm fire Sunday and authorities today were attempting to estimate damage, expected to run into five figures.

Built in 1841, the market looked a sorry sight as firemen chopped away whole sections of the wall to bring their hoses into play.

Almost every window in the 3-storey building was smashed by firemen in a successful effort to prevent smoke from accumulating and causing an explosion.

The block-long structure, built on the site of the Palace of the Intendant of the King of France, was the target for tons of water directed from at least 12 hoses by firefighters from a dozen stations.

Several firemen were slightly injured and one, Lieut. Lucien Matte, received hospital treatment for an arm injury but was allowed to return home.

At an early hour this morning, smoke was still billowing from the gutted market, and floodlights were used in a final effort to extinguish the embers.

Thousands of dollars worth of food and other stock was soaked beyond salvage.

Built in Doris style and once the seat of the municipal government, the market brought the city $100,000 from stall rentals in 1942.

It was once the residence of Sir John Johnson, commander of Indian troops during the American Revolution.

Marmora

Marmora (Special)—R. J. Scott was elected president of the Marmora Badminton Club at is enthusiastic reorganization meeting held in the Council Chambers on Friday evening. MILK SALES DOWN AT KIRKLAND LAKE

Kirkland Lake, Dec. 10 —(CP) —Dairy officials said yesterday that they estimated district milk sales had decreased by five per cent since the price of milk rose three cents Oct. 1. They predicted an upswing in milk sales in the near future if the present price is maintained.

U.S. Govt. Seks No-Strike Pldge From Industes

Washington, Dec. 10 (P) — The United States goverent today sought an iron-clad-strike pledge from key industr in the wake of its victory ovehn L. Lewis in the coal strike.

Officials opened the ive in the hope that the adminition's handling of the mine down might persuade other ns to seek peaceful settlement labor disputes in vital indus or risk painful punitive sures.

The initial no-strike pe effort was directed at thublic utility field. Representes of unions and managemen the gas, power, light, and nicipal transportation industriewere summoned to a meetin this morning to consider a for voluntary arbitration of utes without resort to strikes.

Additional "peace" mees in other industries where kes could imperil the country conomy are planned soon the committee, which functionder auspices of the labor depant.

Some labor leaders coed privately meanwhile that tdministration's stand againsr Lewis may discourage a round of strikes in the steelomobile and similar majondustries which have coct agreements expiring in thext few months.

Union leaders said they renize, too, that the coal ste served to heighten the de among many members of gress to enact strike controlgislation and laws limiting u powers.

The labor men cite another son for believing that there be fewer strikes in the mon immediately ahead. Most them had expected Mr. Lewis get a handsome wage increase his miners.

They would have put pressu on other unions to strike in ord to win similar concessions f their members.

JUST THINNING OUT AREA

Stouffville, Dec. 10 —(CP)—Three carloads of Scotch pine trees — 3,000 trees in all — are on their way to the United States where they will be used as Christmas trees.

As the pines headed south, Reeve A. V. Nolan, chairman of the York County Reforestation Committee, answering critics who said the trees should be left to develop in the bush.

"Removal of the trees is a thinning operation which rids the forest of a type of pine which has practically no commercial lumber value," he said.

UNUSUALLY MILD WEATHER AT TIMMINS

Timmins, Dec. 10 —(CP)—Timmins streets lay almost bare of snow and ice after one of the most unusual December thaws ever to strike this district.

Lawns lay half-bare as temperatures sky-rocketed and the light covering of snow and ice melted rapidly. Temperatures were in the 40's over the weekend and yesterday the mercury registered 42 degrees at 8 a.m.

Have you ever thought of Life Insurance as PROPERTY?

BECAUSE Life Insurance has no visible form to be seen and admired, you may not have thought of it as "property"—and yet it is one of the most desirable forms of property that anyone ever possessed.

In what other form, for instance, can you buy property that increases in value every year and is guaranteed against depreciation? What other property is realizable in full and without delay by your dependents in case you die and with all future instalments cancelled, yet guarantees you a guaranteed income if you live?

Life Insurance is "property" that always has a guaranteed capital value and a guaranteed income value.

Just Endure Prairie Cold

(By W. L. C. in Windsor Star)

Winter has come to Western Canada and that means temperatures that go down to as far as 50 below on the prairie. If there is a wind with that sub-zero weather, the best place is right at home by the radiator or the stove. A person can take turns. For ten minutes he keeps warm by the stove and then for ten minutes he keeps the stove warm.

That old fable about being so dry you never feel it makes fine telling in Ontario. Also, in British Columbia where so many folks go to escape the rigors of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta winters, the prairie people delight to talk about the weather and the snappy air on the plains and how it is so dry, you never feel the cold. But, you notice none of them ever wants to get back across the Rocky Mountains until the last blizzard has blown itself out and the thermometer has ceased going down below zero until the next October or November.

Snap Fingers.

There is not always so much snow on the prairie, but that never discourages the cold. Jack Frost can snap his fingers and make them crack like Northern Lights in January.

How do people stand it?

They don't. They just endure it and manage to get along somehow. They dress warmly, far more warmly than people in Ontario.

There is none of this going around for long in the outdoors without heavy underwear. People get into woollens in November, or sooner. And, they wear the heavies until March, and sometimes it is along in April before the weather is fit to change to lighter clothes.

Men wear heavy sox. They have to or their feet will freeze. And, they wear either heavy boots or heavy overshoes. Some wear spats and rubbers, but these are the men who are not outdoors for long. They just have to walk from their cars to their offices, and perhaps one day a week at noon they walk to the Rotary luncheon.

Coat sweaters are in style. Many a man gets all togged up in heavy underwear, heavy clothes and then dons a coat sweater for good measure. On days when it goes away down below zero the sweater is welcomed.

Scarves have their place, too. Thick woollen scarves come in handy to keep warm and to help break the wind, which can sweep across those flatlands to beat the band.

Coon Coats.

It used to be that prairie farmers and prairie city people aimed to have a coon coat. That was the mark of progress. A beaver coat put a person up another peg, but nearly everyone was willing to settle for a coon coat. A lot of us never got to the coon coat stage, but that didn't prevent having the ambition to own one.

The prairie wheat grower always looked forward to buying a coonskin coat and then spending his winters in Florida or California. Just what good a fur coat would do him in either of those tropical regions was something that was never explained, but that was the mode of life.

Since the depression when trips to Florida and California became mere memories of a better age, the fur coats have not been so popular.

Farmers have been willing to settle for even a trip to the south occasionally without a fur coat as extra equipment.

It was something to see a couple of hockey teams playing on an open air rink with the mercury at 35 below zero. When the rest between periods came the players would take off their boots to find their feet frozen stiff as boards. That would be only a detail, as faces and ears would be frozen, too.

The only thing to do was to get a lot of snow and rub the frozen members briskly. Rub and rub and rub and try to transform the deathly whiteness of the frozen skin into some semblance of life. Ears that were stiff were rubbed until they were pliable.

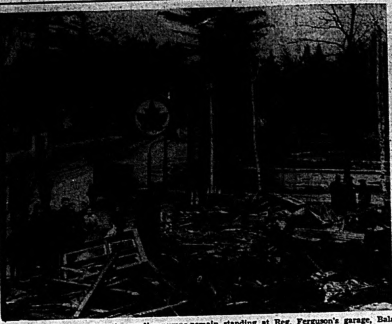
Then, after the players were all set, they would go out again to play another period and get all frozen once more. Those were days of real sport, when the few spectators kept up a constant stamping to keep their own feet from freezing, and not always succeeding.

Official Sign.

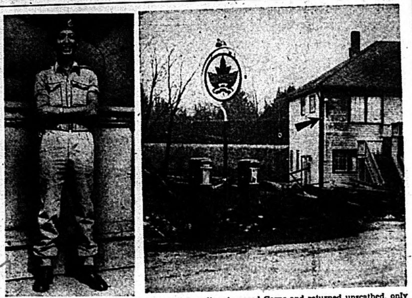
With many of the boys and girls winter was never official until an ear or nose was frozen. The worst trouble was that once an ear or nose was frozen, it did not take such a terrific cold snap to freeze it all over again.

It is easy to tell when frozen. It is like a lot of red-hot needles piercing into the flesh. And, then there is a dull and numb feeling. Best thing to do is get busy at once with snow and rub.

But, the West needs that cold weather to grow the fine bread wheat that comes from the prairies. The cold penetrates 15 and more feet into the ground to hold the moisture. Without the severe cold and the snow, the West would not be the bread-basket of the world.



Bala Blast Scene — Only the gasoline pumps remain standing at Reg. Ferguson's garage, Bala, which was wrecked by an explosion heard ten miles away yesterday. The body of Joseph Dewasha, Indian apprentice, was found in the ruins. In background (right) are the tennis courts of Bala Bay Lodge, where 22 windows were shattered.



Dewasha, who served overseas with the Canadian Armored Corps and returned unscathed, only to lose his life in his home town, is seen in a snapshot taken in home. At right is the blast scene as viewed from No. 69 Highway. Home of A. O. McNeil, was saved by the town's fire department. Arrow points to scorched paint.

Paris as You Find It

(By Carlyle Morgan in The Christian Science Monitor)

Paris — My French? Ah, messieurs! What is it the French say for excuse-it-please? But I got those opera tickets.

Now, however, until I had fallen into the hands of the Military Police. You can walk all around the Paris Opera House in daytime—and it's a fair walk—without spying Sesame. But at last you come to an open gate at sidewalk level.

The day I did this an American M.P. was sitting on a ledge of the foundation. I told him I was trying to find the entrance to the Opera ticket office. He said, quite helpfully and politely: "Oh, this isn't an opera house, sir, this is a police station." I said: "Maybe, but in that case the station is in the opera house."

This seemed a new idea to him. It started him looking around. He came back, escorted me into a room with desks and Americans at them to whom I evidently looked suspicious. A few questions. Then he handed me over to a Frenchman who seemed quite able to understand a person's desire to get opera tickets, especially for that evening's "Boris Godonuff."

At the box office, it turned out that a lot of other people — French people whose taxes help to support the Opera—had an idea similar to mine. They would say something to the ticket seller, get "Non!" for an answer, and resignedly walk away. When my turn came, the woman at the desk smiled at my efforts, then asked me if I could wait a "couple of minutes"—in good American like that. In five minutes the phone rang, she talked over it, then gave me three precious slips of paper. I walked off feeling quite stimulated by the stares of onlookers—Frenchmen, no less, who frankly envied me my American accent.

People repeatedly ask a returned traveller for comparisons between postwar Paris and postwar London. They hear that London is still grim and drab, but that Paris is light and gay. They suppose this has a special meaning, that it is somehow indicative of what the two cities have gone through in recent years and of what they are facing now.

Paris does seem to be having more fun than London. But I suspect that it is because the French have more fun having fun than the British do. I can hear someone saying, "And what about Americans?" All the Americans in our box at the Theatre des Champs Elysees left at ten o'clock, the cold having crept up to their knees by then. The French were still having a good time as we went out.

One place in Paris to see France — as distinguished from Parisians—having a good time is in that strange mixture of aspiration and sheer machinery that is the Eiffel Tower.

It was a cold and foggy day. I knew I should not see much of Paris in the chilly mists that had settled over the city. But I sensed I would see something of France in the elevators. And there it was—provincial France, made up of families of five or six or more, all very insular in their family feeling, laughing quietly to each other, exchanging intimate and happy looks and speaking in those codes that families always have.

Every time the elevator started or stopped, the announcement of the attendant was lost among these people greeted the event. Everything was fun in those visitors to Paris—the great gears, the cables, the dizzy angles of the tracks on which the car rode up almost perpendicularly, even the increasing cold as one went higher and the increasing certainty that no one was going to get much of a view even at the top.

Maybe London theatres are as cold as those in Paris. But the tray of hot drinks and sandwiches that you have put on your lap by an obliging British usherettes between the acts helps you to keep your mind off the weather.

The French seem to take their pleasures — cold as they may come — blithely for granted. The British just now seem to be taking them grimly, as a hard-won right. You get the impression that for this right they are prepared to suffer now somewhat as they did in the recent past for freedom.

Possibly it is presumptuous of an American even to notice such things. Americans take their ticket-buying as seriously. But it is interesting to watch that various thing called "national character" at work on the small problems of living, wherever one happens to be.

I am sensitive to the American aversion to European ideas. But more Americans ought to see those little models of theatre interiors that stand conveniently beside most Paris box offices. While you are wondering what seats are available, you can look as if from the stage of the theatre at the entire layout of seats in the auditorium. Everything is labeled and numbered. You can ask for what you want, and take what you get, just as you do anywhere else. And you even have some idea of the color of the upholstery.

American box offices furnish charts or maps of the auditorium. And some people may prefer these. All right; the French have them, too, in addition to the models. So you can see the models from where you wait in line, and thus prepare to pounce masterfully on an exact spot on the chart when you get to the window. This adds to ticket-buying an exhilartion such as a general must feel when mapping strategy. (P.S. — Victory consists in getting any tickets at all.)

Consecon

ANNUAL BAZAAR

Consecon—At the Masonic Hall on November 27th, the annual bazaar of the United Church was held under the auspices of the W. A. groups. Sales booths and refreshment tables were attractively decorated with miniature Christmas trees, and candles in red and white and blue colors.

The sales tables held many articles of needlework, suitable for Christmas gifts, as well as products of the farm which found ready buyers. A pleasant social afternoon was spent, the proceeds amounting to $175.00.

W. I. MEETING

The Women's Institute held its December meeting on Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Alex Rattray.

There was a large gathering at which Christmas gifts were drawn. Rev. W. H. Bartlett of United Church, Consecon, was gunest speaker on the subject "Bells" and his address was most inspiring. After the devotional period and the business were conducted, carols were sung followed by refreshments and a social half hour.

One of our local war veterans, Jack Adams, who had been a prisoner in Germany was a patient in Peterborough Hospital which was destroyed by fire last Thursday. He wired his sister, Mrs. Clark, that he was safe, but had lost all of his personal belongings and effects, including the radio sent him recently by the Women's Institute.

THERE IS A SHORTAGE

Bottles and glass containers of all kinds are urgently needed—particularly at this season. Bottlers are unable to secure enough new bottles from glass manufacturers. They must look to you for the return of your empty bottles and cartons for refilling. This is vitally necessary—the holiday season is at hand.

Thank You!

Brief Presented by Cheese Producers Recommends Co-ordination of Milk Supply Similar to That of Britain

Royal Commission on Milk Opens Hearings in City

Recommendation of a scheme similar to that now in operation in Great Britain, for the co-ordination of the supply of milk produced by all the milk producers in Ontario having in mind that so far as cheese is concerned there is an export problem, while there is little or no such problem affecting the British industry which means that the return to the Ontario producers must to a large extent depend on prevailing foreign prices, was included in a brief presented to the Royal Commission on Milk which is sitting in Shire Hall, by the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association.

Commission Officials

The commission is headed by Mr. Justice Dalton Wells, Toronto, with Beverly Matthews, K.C., Toronto, as commission counsel; Donald Keith, Osgoode Hall, commission secretary, and John Entwhistle, commission accountant. Present, also, are Joseph Sedgwick, K.C., representing the Milk Distributors' Association; C. H. Kemp, the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association; Wilson McLean, K.C., Ontario Fluid Milk Association; J. O. Trepanier, K.C., Concentrated Milk Producers' Association and Kelso Roberts, K.C., M.L.A., representing the consumers of his riding of St. Patrick's, Toronto.

The commission is enquiring into and will report on the producing, processing, transporting and marketing of milk including whole milk and such products of milk as are supplied, processed, distributed or sold in any form; the costs, prices, price-spreads, trade practices, methods of financing, management, grading, policies, and any other matter relating to them, but not as to restrict the generality of the foregoing, the effect thereon of any subsidies paid or imposed.

To Inquire Into Scheme

The commission will also inquire into and report on the scheme contemplated by the provisions of the Milk Control Board as amended and the administration thereof by the Board.

The scheme submitted by the Cheese Producers' brief will assure an adequate supply of whole milk for consumption in Ontario without unduly affecting the supply for other purposes and at the same time reduce the cost now incurred by the producer of whole milk in forcing production during periods of short supply.

It will also assure proper prices to all producers and will fix and assure the proper differentials between the prices paid for milk produced for different purposes with the assistance if and when necessary to maintain proper price differentials of government subsidies.

The brief, also, suggests, again following the British scheme, that these purposes be effected by the creation of an organization or agency representing the whole body of Ontario producers, rather than by a government board with price-fixing powers, although the acts of such an organization or agency will be subject to the supervision and approval of a government board.

Want Controls Limited

It is felt, the brief states, that any further extension of direct government control of the milk industry is not desirable at the present time. Such a producers' organization could not, of course, operate with any continued success if it failed to consider consumer interest in its deliberations and decisions.

The brief suggests that the present system of inspection might be improved by the introduction of a general system of uniform inspection with uniform requirements, instead of leaving questions of health requirements and local inspection to be dealt with by municipal corporation.

It outlines districts of producers, cost of production, marketing, other matters pertaining to the association and submits on the basis of this information that it is essential that the cheese industry be maintained at a high level both as to quality and quantity of production and that the export market for cheese be retained and increased.

Require Adequate Returns

It also states that not only must the producer of milk for cheese manufacture receive an adequate return for his product but there must be a proper differential or relation based on different costs of production, between the prices paid to the different classes of milk producers.

The producer of cheese milk is not receiving sufficient return to pay the cost of producing such milk, the brief submits, and the present differential between prices paid to these producers and the producers of whole milk is out of all proper proportion and that the continuation of this situation will affect the milk industry as a whole with adverse results which will ultimately be felt by the consumer of whole milk.

Several witnesses were called by the Commission when it opened its sitting on Monday morning. Included were S. L. Joss, secretary of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association and a number of dairy farmers and others.

Questioned and cross-questioned by the various counsel farmers explained their costs of production and the amount of milk produced per cow per year.

Clem Ketcheson, dairy farmer and secretary of the Sidney Town Hall Cheese Company, outlined the activities of his farm and the plant. E. Masse, Trenton Road dairy farmer, and Norman McConkey, Peterborough dairyman, along with Ketcheson were unanimous in their feelings that a 30 cent price for cheese would be acceptable. At the present not many were being made at prevailing prices

Favor Pool System

Messrs. Ketcheson and Masse told counsel that they would be in favor of a pool system whereby milk standards would be raised and all milk pooled to be distributed by a special board to various sources. Earl Finkle, Sidney township farmer, also agreed.

Messrs. Masse and McConkey who own large herds of purebred cattle told the commission that the money derived from breeding offset losses sustained in milk production. "If we could get United States prices for our cattle I would quit the dairy business tomorrow," Mr. Masse said.

He stated that his cost of production was $20.89 cents daily for a return of 400 pounds of milk. His cost estimate included depreciation.

Mr. McConkey stated that as he sold milk direct to the consumer, he could not express an opinion on the pool question. Mr. Finkle agreed with others that sidelines of the farmer helped financial losses on milk production.

The Commission resumed its hearing this morning and this afternoon inspected the U. E. L. Cheese Manufacturing Company situated near Glenora, Prince Edward County.

FORM REVERSALS IN BOTH SENIOR AND JUNIOR GAMES

Staffords Defeat Owen Sound and Hamilton Szabos Take Oshawa

(By The Canadian Press)

Form reversals marked both O.H.A. games last night as Toronto Staffords bounced back from three straight losses to down Owen Sound Mohawks in a senior tilt at Maple Leaf Gardens and Hamilton Szabos stunned even their hometown supporters by defeating the second-place Oshawa Generals 3-2 in the Junior A loop.

The Mohawks, tied for last place in the senior group, threatened for a time to repeat the drubbing they handed the Staffords in Owen Sound last week, taking a 1-0 lead in the first period and pushing the locals around considerably before they faded before a three-goal outburst in the final game.

Cece Shears put the locals one up in the first period. Then Staffords took advantage of a one man advantage in the second as Kasburn and Blute scored, only to have Reid knot the count while Knipfel of the locals was serving a major for fighting.

Johnny Blute scored what proved to be the winning marker at the 10-minute mark of the third stanza. Jim Williams added another and Jack Stafford stick-handled through the entire Mohawk team to add the fifth goal.

Second Place Tie

The victory moved Staffords into a second-place tie with Hamilton Pats, eight points back of the league-leading Hamilton Tigers. Mohawks and Stratford Indians are tied for last place another four points behind.

In Hamilton the Szabos, who looked almost helpless against the lowly St. Catharines Athletics Saturday night, caught the powerful Oshawa sextet on an off night. Establishing their superiority with a one-goal lead in the first period, they never let the visitors catch up and looked the better team on the night's play.

Pierre Cadieux scored the first Szabo goal and set up the other two for Bill Wysynski to take individual scoring honors. McKay and Hildebrand counted for the Generals.

Galt Red Wings have a chance to take over second place by a generous margin when they entertain Toronto Young Rangers in to-night's only game—a four-point encounter. They've beaten the Rangers handsomely in their last two meetings.

Don Mogard, promising Toronto heavyweight who is featured in the main bout with Keith Prosser of London, Ont., at Mountain View on Wednesday night. Mogard is under the wing of Vic Bagnato who is well known in these parts. The big fella is highly regarded in Toronto fistic circles and the bout is attracting a lot of attention. Seven other bouts complete an attractive card.

MIKE JACOBS LITTLE BETTER

New York, Dec. 10 — (AP) — Unless complications set in, boxing promoter Mike Jacobs is expected to be taken off the critical list in the next 36 hours, according to his physician, Dr. Vincent Nardiello.

The stricken impressario has shown steady improvement and yesterday heavyweight champion Joe Louis was permitted to see him in hospital where he was admitted a week ago suffering from a cerebral hemorrhage.

OUTSTANDING OARSMAN

Philadelphia, Dec. 10 — (AP) — Jack Kelly, Jr., 19-year-old United States single sculling champion, was declared the outstanding American oarsman of the year by the Vesper Boat Club last night.

The youthful Philadelphian, son of a one-time Olympics champion, was defeated in the 1946 finals of the Royal Henley Regatta in England but won the Open singles event at the Royal Canadian Henley at St. Catharines later in the year.

BILLY TAYLOR STILL LEADING SCORING RACE

Teeter Kennedy of Leafs and Richard of Montreal Have Scored Most Goals

Montreal, Dec. 10 (CP)—Billy Taylor, smooth-skating forward of Detroit Red Wings, continues to lead the National Hockey League scoring race, according to league statistics released today.

Taylor has accumulated 25 points as a result of his eight goals and 17 assists. His 17 assists place him well in front of the loop's playmakers.

Maurice (Rocket) Richard holds down second spot with 23 points made up of 13 goals and 10 assists while Roy Conacher of Detroit is third with 22 points and Ted (Teeter) Kennedy of Toronto Maple Leafs fourth with 21 points. A three-way tie for fifth place has Elmer Lach of Canadiens, Syd Abel of Detroit and Milt Schmidt of Boston Bruins with 18 points each.

Maurice Richard and Ted Kennedy have sniped 13 goals apiece to lead the circuit's goal-getters.

Pudgy Bill Durnan, Canadiens is leading the goalkeepers in the battle for the Vezina Trophy, having allowed 45 goals past him in 20 games. Turk Broda of Toronto tops the shutout artists with three to date.

Wild Bill Ezinicki, Toronto's fiery right-winger, is the League's bad man with 49 minutes spent in the penalty box. Johnny Mariucci of Chicago is next with 45 minutes in the box.

With one-third of the N.H.L. schedule over Toronto Maple Leafs are atop the league with 26 points, one more than the second-place Montreal Canadiens. New York Rangers moved into a contending position after winning five of their last six games. The Blueshirts are deadlocked with Detroit for fourth place with 18 points each, one less than the third-place Boston Bruins.

Sports Roundup

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 10 —(CP)— Ed. Sadowski, suspended playing-coach of the Toronto basketball Huskies, may go to Boston Celtics of the Basketball Association of America . . . Sadowski, you'll remember, walked out some 10 days ago after expressing dissatisfaction with his deal in Toronto . . . The Huskies signed Red Rolfe as coach yesterday and that leaves Sadowski available—unless the B.A.A. cracks down on him for breaking his contract— . . . According to rumors flying around New York, Boston would trade any five players for Sadowski, one of the highest scorers of the league . . . The only exception would be Al Brightman . . . One report has it that the B.A.A. wants to help Boston, an important city in the circuit, and may arrange the Sadowski deal . . . Sadowski's status will be clarified later this week at a meeting of the B.A.A.'s board of directors.

Incidentally, remember the report from the National Basketball League that this corner carried a couple of weeks ago? . . . It was to the effect that all was sweetness and light between the older pro cricuit and the B.A.A. . . . Now we hear that a player war is imminent — involving those same Boston Celtics . . . Celtics are said to be planning to lure away a name star from the N.L.—probably Jack (Dutch) Garfinkel of Rochester . . . The talk is that the B.B. battle will be as hot as the smoking conflict between pro football's National League and all America Conference. . . .

Jim (N.Y. World Telegram) Burchard gives out with an interesting piece on the shifting tides of boxing promotion in Britain and Europe . . . Seems that before the war the Big Man of master-minding was a Londoner named Jeff Dickson . . . Dickson was killed while serving as an R.A.F. navigator and the mantle fell upon Jack Solomons of London and Jo Longman of Paris—whom Jim calls "the Mike Jacobs of post-war Europe." . . . Longman, a native of England, is a long-time resident of France . . . Longman is tied up with Marcel Cerdan, the European middleweight champion who out-pointed Georgie Abrams in New York last Friday . . . Burchard reports that the Longman-Cerdan tie-up has been similar to the Jacobs-Joe Lewis union in bringing the Frenchman to the top of the promotion heap . . . In short, Longman, like Jacobs, controlled the one fighter everybody wanted to see. . . .

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

Ernie Cook, a wiry little man with thin white hair is the trainer of the World's Champion Montreal Canadiens hockey team. He is also trainer of the Little World Series Baseball Champions, the Montreal Royals.

Cook, with a varied career as a trainer is one of the outstanding men of his profession. Energetic Ernie has been attending to the woes of athletes for close to 40 years. He became trainer of the Canadiens at the start of the 1944-45 season succeeding the late Bill O'Brien. Cook had been O'Brien's assistant for several years before Bill's death.

Although he is a successful trainer in both baseball and hockey, Ernie freely admits that he prefers hockey players to baseball players. The reason for this is because the hockey players are tougher. Occasionally he has found ball players as tough as hockeyists, but the general trend seems to find the ball player more inclined to be a prima donna.

Ernie is a first aid man, a nursemaid, a banker, a baggage-handler and a clubhouse lawyer. He looks after all cuts and bruises of the athletes, tells certain players when its time to change their socks, looks after their wallets and valuables when they are out on the ice, takes care of the club's trunks and is often called upon to settle dressing room disputes.

On the day of a practice Cook reports to the Canadiens' dressing room in the Forum at nine o'clock. He checks over the equipment and lays out the practice uniforms so that they will be all ready for the players when they arrive around 9.30. The players usually require some minor attentions before they take the ice at 10 o'clock. After the practice is over and the players have showered and left, Ernie rechecks the equipment and puts it away in its proper place. From noon until four in the afternoon Cook looks after the five sets of Canadiens' sweaters, mending those that are in need of it and seeing that all sweaters are kept neat and tidy. If there is no game at night, his work is finished at four.

On game nights he is at the rink at six o'clock, with the players reporting soon after 7 o'clock. After the game he repacks the equipment and tidies the dressing room.

As far as remuneration is concerned this past year has been a very good one for Trainer Ernie. The Royals baseball team voted him a full share of the playoff money which came to $1,300 and last spring he pocketed $2,000 as his share in the Canadiens' Stanley Cup lucre. Add the regular salary cheques and clubhouse dues he collects to those bonuses and it will total an amount that would put him in the same income bracket with most of the star athletes that he handles.

Sergeant "Hub" Smith, who is no mean shakes as a leather-pusher himself has lined up a neat and natty boxing card at Mountain View tomorrow night headlining Don Mogard, crack Diamond A.C. Toronto heavy, with Keith Prosser, London slugger in the main bout.

The bout heads an attractive array of boxers and the card looms up as being the best ever offered in this district. The show takes place in the sports hangar at Mountain View Air Station with the first blow being fired at 8 bells. Buses will leave the four corners here at 7:30 to take and bring back the fans. Lovers of the game should not miss the entertainment for the sports laddies of Mountain View have spared nothing to make the affair outstanding.

In the five-round semi-final LAC Eddie Leury, smart young Mountain View welter will cross gloves with popular Glen Dafoe who is no stranger to local fight fans, while Darky Brooks, Kingston heavyweight will clash with "Smilin" Sammy Ellis, Trenton A.C., brother of the "Jiber".

Billy Westfall meets LAC Eddie Senos, Mountain View, while Joe Duggle and Gene Battista, Toronto, tangle in another bout. Joey Wilson, Belleville and Al. Rowand, Toronto, round out a fine ticket of slug and slam entertainment.

An added attraction is the Dominion champion weightlifters headed by Stan McBride and company from Peterboro which is said to be an outstanding attraction in its class. The sports officials at Mountain View are starting off on the right foot and deserve all the support they can get in this, their first ring venture.

SELLS CUTTER FOR $8 MORE THAN IT BROUGHT 37 YEARS AGO

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

When the 1947 Canadian National Exhibition gets under way at Toronto, one of the sports events lined up for the customers may be a world's champion sculling race between representatives of Canada, Australia and possibly England. The suggestion was raised yesterday following a Sydney, Australia, report that Evans Padden, star Aussie sculler, might travel to Canada to meet Australian-born Bobby Pearce, now a lieutenant in the Royal Canadian Navy.

Pearce said at Halifax he would be willing to meet the Australian champion but would prefer to step aside and let his protege, Jack Gaudaur, have a crack at it. He said he would prefer a race between the three countries.

Normie Burns, New Haven Ramblers centre ice player, still leads the American Hockey League's individual scoring race, official statistics showed yesterday. With 17 goals and 18 assists, he led the parade for the seventh straight week.

Chicago Black Hawks yester day announced exchange of forward Pete Horeck for Adam Brown of the Detroit Red Wings in a straight player deal, and they also brought forward Tom Fowler up from their Kansas City farm club.

When Detroit Red Wings take the ice at Madison Square Gardens Wednesday night against the Rangers, former Vezina Trophy winner Johnnie Mowers will be guarding the nets. Manager Jack Adams said yesterday at Detroit that Mowers would replace the youthful Harry Lumley, who was a standout among N.H.L. netminders while in the Red Wings' nets.

Jack Dempsey gave the old one-two yesterday to a report he might take over the Madison Square Garden promotorship from ailing Mike Jacobs. The old Manassa Mauler said he was interested in forming another boxing syndicate and erecting another Stadium in New York to break Jacobs' monopoly.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Dec. 10—(CP)—University of Montreal, whose athletic prowess in the past has been shaded by that of McGill University, has served notice this year that it will be more than just a push-over in intercollegiate hockey competition.

The carabins are comparative newcomers to the senior college ice loop. They haven't shown much in the past to warrant McGill or University of Toronto, usual rivals for the college crown, losing many hours of sleep in worry, but around McGill at least they are being regarded today with more than usual respect.

The French-speaking Canadians outplayed the Redmen by a considerable margin Saturday night in the opening game of the college season here and although McGill won 3-2 it was due more to the brilliant net-minding of Jack Gelineau than to the superiority of the Redmen's team.

Displaying a scrappy, if somewhat ragged style of play, the U. of M. six led for more than half the game and but for the work of Gelineau, who some day may turn up in the uniform of Canadiens of the National Hockey League, might have won. Certainly McGill, defending league champions, were given a scare.

U. of M. went all out this year to build a good hockey team. They hired Alcide Hebert, a shrewd judge of hockey talent, as coach and every student who could play hockey was given a chance to make the team.

Carabins may not come up with a title this season — on Saturday's showing McGill may not either — but the other teams will know they are in the league and they may turn in some surprising victories.

Keep an eye on Montreal's junior hockey teams this season—word from the folks who have seen them in action is that the calibre of their play is mighty high. Canadiens, last year's provincial champions, are riding the top of the expanded, eight-team city loop with seven victories in 8 games. Nationals are right on their heels with five victories and two ties in seven games.

Canadiens, incidentally, are the team which made such a good showing last spring in the eastern Canada final against Toronto St. Michaels. And young Howie Morenz, son of the immortal Howie of the professional Canadiens, is still with them.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You may not tell all about your hand in one bid. Nor scoop up all that partner has in one fell swoop. So, you swap advices on the installment plan, learning a little more at each turn.

Take back this hand:

♦Q J
♣A Q 9 3 2

Your opening bid was one club. You admitted having at least five tricks, four high cards, two sure tricks. You have more in some items.

Partner responded with a diamond. Besides his biddable suit, he admitted having at least three tricks with two high cards among them. He may have more in some items.

His takeout to a new suit is a one-round force. It signals you to bid again. Of course, you would have bid again anyway to reveal unshown values. What and how much will you show next?

Bids follow the order in T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump. So, you will now takeout to your other biddable suit; hearts. With two different length suits, you correctly showed the longer first.

Now that you have decided your next bid is hearts, will you bid one heart or jump to two hearts. If you jump to two hearts, you will say you now see tricks enough to help make a game.

Your hand contains seven tricks. Although your partner may have more, he has so far shown only three. At the moment you can discover only ten tricks in your pair. How about a game?

Has the trump suit been decided? No. Then to assure a game in any trump suit, it may take 11 tricks. With only ten, you must not jump. Consequently, your second bid here is one heart.

Will you still be able to show unrevealed values, if necessary? Sure. The chain of new suit takeouts has not been broken. A one-round force still exists. Partner must bid again.

Hold your horses in Horse Sense.

The Movie Column

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Deanna Durbin, the Winnipeg-born singing star who was scheduled to step before the technicolor cameras in "Up in Central Park," will make "For the Love of Mary" instead, with shooting starting in January. Trouble in getting technicolor prints made is the reason.

Miss Durbin's new picture is a romantic comedy by Fritz Rotter and Charles O'Neal which will be directed by Irving Pichel for producer Joseph Sistrom for Universal-International.

The uproar between the United States production code administration and the British censors over cleavage in the feminine antomy hasn't quite died down. Gainsborough Studios, producers of "The Wicked Lady," had to reshoot considerable footage of Margaret Lockwood and Patricia Roc with the stars clad in higher dresses, but the trailer advertising the film in New York, where it is scheduled to open soon, is compiled from footage from the original film. The wolves in the audience are having a field day, but when the picture opens these shots will be missing or retaken.

Franchot Tone and Joan Leslie, who was educated in Toronto and Montreal convents, will co-star in "Repeat Performance," which goes before the cameras Dec. 18 ...Judy Garland will follow up her co-star role in "The Pirate" with Gene Kelly by co-starring with him again in "The Good Old Summertime."...Cary Grant and Dorothy McGuire are vanguard films' choices for top spots in the screen version of Vicki Baum's story, "Conspiracy."

TRAPPED IN ICE

Gananoque, Dec. 10 — (CP) — Trapped in the ice at nearby South Lake, a deer was reached Sunday by Game Overseer Walsh and two local residents, before a crowd of more than 100 persons. The men went out in a boat, broke the ice into shore, and led the deer, a large buck, to safety. After a thorough rubbing-down, the animal revived and was last seen galloping over the crest of a hill close by.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was getting supper ready on account of being Nora's Thersday off, and I was back in the kitchin watching her and looking around and ma said, Be careful of those pots, Benny, they're hot.

Yes mam, I just want to see what's in them and see if it looks as good as it smells, I said.

And I started to lift up a lid and yelled, Owitch, heck, it's made a blister alreddy, gosh shang the luck.

Luck had nothing to do with it, I warned you and you didn't heed the warning, I'll put some butter on it, she said.

Which she did, saying, I'm sorry you berned yourself, naturelly, but at the same time you should be grateful that it's taught you to listen to advice in the spirrit in which it's intended, and not as something that goes in one ear and disappears.

Well jimminy, ma, I mean G wizzickers, you didn't advize me I'd get a blister, I said, and ma said, What did you expect to get when you touched that red hot pot for land sakes?

I just expected to get a look inside, I said. Heck, ma, never even mentioned a blister, I said, and ma said, Now look here, young man, are you implying and inferring that the whole incident was my fault?

No mam, I said, and she said, Then what are you inferring and implying?

I'm just trying to tell you that you didn't give me enough advice, I said, and ma said, Then here's some more, right now. I advize you if I hear another werd from you on the subject I'll give you a rousing slap that will make your blister seem like an innocent bagatelle. Now is that advice plain enough? she said.

Yes mam, only G, ma, heck, why didn't you make it that plain about the blister? I said.

Saying it from a safe distance half ways through the dining room.

Important Experiment In Prison Reform Carried Out in Britain

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Bretton, Yorkshire, Dec. 10 — (CP)—In the heart of a Yorkshire woodland stands a rustic arch with the sign: "New Hall Camp, 27 May 1936." Since that date more than 2,000 men under sentence from the courts have passed through the gate. All have had ample freedom to escape. Only one has done so.

"We have conducted an important experiment in prison reform," the camp commandant said. "It has proved successful."

New Hall camp was cut out of 110 acres of woodland. A tree-lined road, built by the prisoners, leads to five wooden huts in which live 100 men, chosen to form this community because of earlier good conduct in prison. At no time does their guard exceed five men. Occasionally it is only three.

Around the edge of the camp is a neat path, lined by trees with painted white rings. This is the camp boundary; and only one man has gone beyond it without permission.

The prisoners' huts resemble army barracks but they are more spacious. Low beds stand around the walls and over them are lockers. Down the centre of the room is a long table, freshly scrubbed. Each hut is split into two messes of 10 men each.

At night the hut doors are fastened only by thin wooden laths which any prisoner could break if he desired.

The men start work at 8 a.m. There is a half-hour lunch break at noon after which they carry on until 5:30 p.m. or dusk. Each three parties go to work on local farms. They breakfast at 7 a.m., make their own way to the main road, are picked up by transport and returned in the evening.

Other prisoners run the camp's own farm, with root and cereal crops, fruit plantations, pullets, ducks, pedigree pigs, horses and rabbits.

"Some men come here feeling bitter against society," said the camp commandant. "They lose that in hard work, fresh air and pleasant surroundings."

Mohawk Reserve

Mohawk Reserve—Recent visitors at the home of Mr. Claud Hill were Mr. and Mrs. Bert Maracle, Mrs. Lillian Stewart, Hamilton, Mr. Albert Maracle, Mr. Harold Maracle and son, and Mr. Alex. Hill, Hamilton.

Mr. Nicholas Hill and Mr. Russell Maracle, who were injured in a collision with a Navy truck a few days ago, have returned home from Belleville General Hospital.

Rev. Rural Dean Herbert Pringle has returned from Kingston General Hospital.

Mr. Staples, Belleville, was in charge of the service at Christ Church Sunday morning; and Messrs. Clayton John and Leslie Claus officiated at All Saints' Church in the afternoon.

HALL—SMART

Reverend Canon W. E. Kidd, M.A., M.C., Rector of St. Mark's Church, Deseronto, officiated at the marriage of Velma Helen Smart, Point Anne, and Lawrence Herbert Hall, Toronto, which took place at Christ Church on the afternoon of December 3rd. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Smart, and the bridegroom the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Hall. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was a picture of girlish loveliness in her floor-length gown of Queen's blue taffeta. She wore the traditional bridal veil, falling from a floral headdress. Her colonial bouquet was of pink and white carnations, and she wore the bridegroom's gift, a gold wrist watch. The bridesmaid was Miss Mavis Maracle, of Buffalo, N.Y., who wore an attractive frock of pink taffeta and net, with matching shoulder-length veil. Her bouquet was similar to that carried by the bride. Mr. Aurel Smart, Point Anne, attended the groom. Mrs. Gordon Joyce, sister of the bride, presided at the organ. After the ceremony, a bounteous wedding dinner was served to a large number of guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Sero, uncle and aunt of the bride. In the evening a reception was held at the Council House where a large number of gifts were displayed. Mr. and Mrs. Hall will make their home in Toronto.

Northport

Belleville Couple Honored.

Northport—On Friday evening friends and neighbors of the Northport community gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smith to honor their daughter and her husband, a recent bride and groom, with a miscellaneous shower.

When Miss Shirley Read read an address Mary Norton and Pauline McDermid presented a basket decorated in pink and white, which was filled with beautiful and useful gifts. After opening the packages the bride and groom expressed appreciation and gratitude to their friends and invited all present to visit them in Belleville.

Refreshments were served by the young people present, and a social time spent while music was rendered by Mrs. Dufferin Folkard of Bethel.

May Take Year To Repair Europa

Le Havre, Dec. 10 — (AP) — The 49,746-ton Liberte, once the German Europa and now France's greatest ocean liner, lay storm-wrecked on a harbor mudbank today while maritime authorities mapped salvage and repair work expected to take at least a year, if the vessel can be saved at all.

She was down about 40 feet as the harbor quieted after an 80-mile-an-hour gale which seamen termed the most destructive on the English Channel in a quarter century.

Jules Moch, French Minister of Public Works and Transport who inspected the Liberte yesterday, said "it will be a year before she can be returned to service."

No lives were lost in the wreck.

HOBBLED AWAY

Windsor, Dec. 10 — (CP)—Police and firemen were unsuccessful in an attempt to find a frightened doe reported inside the city limits yesterday. A motorist said the animal was struck by an automobile and hobbled away on 3 legs towards the river.

Careless Smoker May Have Caused Atlanta Fire

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 10 —(AP)— Definite cause of the devastating fire which took 120 lives in the Winecoff Hotel Saturday may never be established, Fire Marshal Henry Phillips told an investigating city council fire board last night.

But, he said, a careless cigarette smoker under the influence of alcohol may have started the fire. Liquor bottles were strewn around many of the hotel rooms, he added.

So far the investigation has pointed to a charred mattress in a third floor hallway as the possible starting point.

Meanwhile, 117 bodies have been identified. Three bodies of young women, charred and mutilated beyond recognition, remained nameless.

Of the 100 injured, 49 still are under treatment in Atlanta hospitals.

BURNED FINGERS

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 18.

She took possession of them instantly, as was her royal right. Everything seemed brightened, irradiated by her presence; the little stove glowed, the rain played a symphony on the roof. Jennifer, busy immediately with bread and butter and kettle, felt that teatime was the pleasantest hour of the day and the big dim studio the most wonderful place in the world.

"This is what I came about," said Julie when they were settled in a comfortable half circle about the stove. "Muriel Hollister is a friend of mine and Muriel is a buyer for Vogelsang's. You know Vogelsang's?" she asked Jennifer.

The girl nodded, her eyes wide. Every girl in the city knew Vogelsang's windows: those windows where one exquisite sable coat was flung across a beautiful Italian chair or one dazzling gown displayed in imperial splendor. Vogelsang's window dressers gave only the most conservative hints of the frocks, furs, hats, gloves, purses that were to be found in its silver-gray salons upstairs. In the windows there might indeed be plaster horses, Chinese screens, bursts of multi-colored spring blooms, Victorian parasols, or tethered silver balloons, but in its decorative setting only one precious article was exhibited for sale.

"One of the girls is leaving Vogelsang's," Julie explained, "and I wondered if I could get you in there. Do you think you'd like it?"

"Saleswoman," Monty opined.

"No, not at first! Hear him!" Julie scoffed. "It takes years to reach that dizzy height," she said. "No. Stock girl, getting things out and putting them away. Modeling, perhaps. 'Miss Ethel, go slip on this frock, will you, dear?' That sort of thing. They pay twenty a week to start with—"

"Twenty a week!" Jennifer gasped.

"That's what Muriel said. She wants to see you tomorrow. I thought perhaps you'd meet me downtown....."

Vogelsang's girls rang a time clock at half past eight o'clock every morning, although the shop, which consisted actually of a dozen small and separate shops under the one name, did not open until an hour later.

The first hour was divided into three quarters of hard, swift work and fifteen minutes of strict attention to a lecture delivered by one of the department managers. In the first period linen covers were removed from glass showcases, stock segregated and checked, dusters quietly operated. Enormous boxes and crates just arrived were stacked on the stockroom floor; the girls gave quick admiring glances at the coats and sweaters, frocks and nightgowns, hats and perfumery that were brought upstairs. They lived in a world of beauty and fragrance and tempered soft light; they walked on plushy carpets soft as moss; all day long they handled rich brocades, filmy chiffons, sleek furs, and lengths of liquid velvet sparkling with brilliants or heavy with embroidery, and they knew more of fabrics, luxuries, fashions than some of Vogelsang's patrons did.

Many of these patrons were young women timidly making a first approach to the temple after long awaiting the semiannual bargain days. Many could only sigh as they listened to the prices quoted to luckier women and answer a gracious "Is someone taking care of you?" with a nervous "Just looking." Many came hungry with desires that never could be satisfied, torturing themselves with calculations; a hundred dollars could be squeezed out by having the butcher add twenty to his bill, by coaxing Mama for another twenty....

It meant scenes and humiliations, and Tom in one of his rages. But on the other hand there was the green dress with the shoulders cut as only Gasconette in the whole wide world could cut them, and the rhinestone belt.

Thus the occasional visitor. The girls on the fourth floor pitied the scared voices and wistful, hopeles eyes as they flitted to and fro modeling garments that represented two months', three months' pay to the pleasant-mannered, low-voiced, gracious women whose business it was to sell them.

Quite different was the regular trade, the exclusive list of women who bought their frocks by threes, fours, half dozens at a time, who never looked at a price tag, who trusted Vogelsang's to keep them in touch with the great designers, furriers, perfumers of the world, and to keep their own particular intimates gasping with admiration and envy.

Jennifer was not immediately classed with the models. She did humbler things: she carried great armfuls of garments back from the sales floor and hung them carefully on racks; she ran errands for the head saleswomen and the buyers. These had their own special customers and seized certain articles from incoming stock for their exclusive inspection, or occasionally went down to great country places with boxes of the latest creations and sometimes sold four or five thousand dollars' worth of delectable costumes at a single session.

But she was presently promoted to model, and initiated in the long drafty hall where the lockers and washbasins, showers, dressing tables and mirrors were, where old Mrs. Kohler, affectionate, fat, sentimental, would help her into whatever frock, formal, coat, or hostess dress was on display.

Printed rules on the wall informed the girls of what was expected of them. A morning shower was imperative; soap and towels were supplied, but somewhat sparingly. After the bustle and chatter of the showers the girls fussed with their hair, helping each other with good-natured interest. By this time each one was wearing scanties and a bra; afterward simple short black silk dresses were put on, all basically alike, but with endless varying touches of frills, collars, cuffs, pins, and belts.

Among the printed rules was one requesting that no remark be addressed to the customer while the modeling was going on. Another directed that the gaze of the model be always kept upon the possible buyer's face with "a look of pleasant concern." Models were occasionally to revolve without being asked to do so. Severe fines would be exacted for merchandise injured by lipstick or cosmetics, though the responsibility for this was usually charged to Mrs. Kohler, who superintended the dressing. Frequently a soft cloth mask was snapped over Jennifer's face before some particularly delectable confection went over her head; always a rapid wiping of her hands with a damp cloth preceded the process. There were racks of high-heeled shoes—mere webs of delicate straps and bands—and there were variegated slippers; the model must be very careful to put on the appropriate footwear.

Jennifer obeyed orders scrupulously. She was dazzled, thrilled, absorbed by her job. The fourth floor at Vogelsang's was as full of gossip as an army camp; she went home at night with her head full of it, and Betty listened to it enthralled. Betty came to know the names of the important saleswomen and the buyers of whom Jennifer spoke with awe. Betty knew, too, that two or three girls of rich and important Peninsula families were employed in the stocking and handkerchief departments as a sort of protest against debutante idleness and uselessness. These girls treated the regular saleswomen with quiet, well-mannered scorn.

The great mass of the other employees also had their fine gradations and differences: the stockroom girls, the alteration room girls, the bookkeepers and clerks, the telephone girls and the girls in the mail-order lofts were all conscious of caste. The models, Jennifer was surprised to find, ranked rather high. There were only about fifteen of them. Harriet Morse was the most photographed and successful; Jennifer never forgot the shock of the moment when she learned that Harriet was the mistress of young Otto Vogelsang, son of the president. Some of the others were girls of no particular moral scruples; a few were nice, simple young things filling in the few years between school and marriage.

Sometimes the talk in the little upstairs cafeteria sandwich bar was coarse and careless, sometimes shocking. Jennifer heard much that startled her; she contributed little; they thought of her as a silent, shy person. But at home with Betty she found enough to say, and when she was not too tired to cross the roofs to the studio she could always keep Monty amused.

Fresh from her new world of glamor, beauty, spaciousness, she saw the five crowded poor rooms that were home with new eyes. But there was little she could do about it. Into her tiny box of a hall bedroom she could introduce new order. Two thirds of the jumbled old dresses, sweaters, stockings webbed with runs, torn, flimsy underwear rolled into raveled coils, she did indeed throw away. In Sunday leisure she took down her window curtain, washed an ironed it, washed the dingy windowpanes themselves, above the dingy street. And every Sunday she shampooed her bright hair; every night put her head down almost to her knees as she brushed it and tossed it about.

But otherwise things went on as before. The little girls devoured chocolate bars, comics, and movies with their old savage intensity, gabbled over their homework, reluctantly surrendered their grimy little paws to Jennifer for occasional scrubbing and grooming. Betty was the same good, busy creature with her limited interests, her limited ambitions, her good-natured grumbling as to the "breaks" she got and the breaks Seely got. And the house was the same odorous poor place, nothing new or clean or fresh about it; chipped dishes, closed windows, smelly icebox, dark kitchen.

"Betty, did you ever hear of a place called Giddings Manor?"

"Yep." Betty looked up curiously. "Where'd you ever hear of it?"

"Did we ever live there? I know I've heard that name before."

"I think maybe your father and mother did. But that was before they moved to Nevada, before I knew them. Why?"

"We have customers there. I think it's a sort of development over Piedmont way."

"I guess it is. I don't know. All I know is that your mother had a book with 'Mary Jennifer Richie, Giddings, California,' written in it. And now and then your father would say something about things at Giddings."

"Old Mrs. Giddings is a fat sort of bossy old lady," Jennifer said. "She comes in with her niece — great-niece maybe—Nancy Newell. They're Miss Hollister's customers. I wish you could see what she buys for Nancy! They come to all the private showings. She got her that whte dress I was telling you about. And sables! She wears a regular tangle of them."

"I bet you'd like them," Betty said thoughtfully with a long look.

"Me?" Jennifer asked, surprised. "Well, some of the girls are crazy for them," she admitted. "But most of us—well, we just like to handle the things and show them; that's enough. Miss Cosgrove — she's divorced — she has a little girl named Donna Gloria; she says that there's no use wanting things in Vogelsang's; you have to keep changing to other things every time the New York trunks come in; you can't keep up. They had an evening coat there today—I think Miss Moffatt said the price was ten thousand dollars; it was chinchilla. She said the first woman she showed it to bought it."

"For the Giddings girl?"

"Oh, no; she's only about seventeen. No; and she's kind of silly too. She sort of spits—she bubbles," Jennifer said on a sudden giggle, in which Faddy and Elna delightedly joined.

"But all the money in the world, I suppose?" Betty suggested.

"Tons, Miss Cosgrove was telling us. It seems that there were two or three big Giddings estates over there back of Piedmont, and the old lady let them divide off a piece and that's Giddings Manor. But she lives in the old Giddings place herself. She told Miss Hollister that Nancy's mother is an invalid and she wants us to send over some hostess dresses and negligees and so on. Miss Hollister said she'd take me when she went."

"You modeling hostess dresses?" said Betty.

"Oh no, I'll just be the helper to pack them back in the boxes. And we'd take a litter ...."

Jennifer had been dressing while she talked, dressing in Betty's room where there was more space and a better mirror. Faddy and Elna sat in rapt attention on one bed; Betty, tired after a long day, lay flat on another.

"What's doing at Monty's tonight?" Betty asked.

"Music. Lichtenstein. It seems that he and Monty lived together in Paris when neither one of them had a cent, and even though he's so great he's as devoted to Monty as ever. He's playing with the symphony on Friday and he gives a concert Tuesday night."

"Jew, of course?"

ABSORB SHOCK, PREVENT DAMAGE

Windsor, Dec. 10 —(CP)— Oil safety switches absorbed the shock and prevented more serious damage Sunday night as hydro employees worked in a smoke-filled sub-station to repair a broken main feeder-line. The city was "blacked-out" for 20 minutes to decrease the power load for the safety of men working to restore service.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 10 (CP)—The gold group; registered a sizeable gain and other groups were steady to lower at mid-day on Toronto stock exchange. Trading was quieter than on Monday at 796,000 shares for the first three hours.

A "street" report that Anaconda Copper Company was getting control of East Sullivan pushed the price of that issue up to $4 for a gain of 40 cents while trading actively. Sullivan firmed about 10 cents. Other strong mining issues were McIntyre, Pickle Crow, Slyvanite, Preston, Detta and Marlon. Smelters and Nickel added fractions.

In the industrial section prices were up for the papers, textiles and the miscellaneous industrials. C.P.R. a 15 was up 1-2. The western oil share market was quiet and mainly unchanged.

HOGS

Toronto, Dec. 10 (CP)—Peterborough reported prices up 15 cents at $20.15 plus transportation and Brantford reported an increase of 15 cents at $20.25 delivered, in bacon-hog markets with settled grade A prices early today.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, Dec. 10 — (AP) — Many stocks made further recovery headway in today's market although profit cashing on Monday's bulge put a number of leaders in the minus division.

Dealings, speedy in the first hour, tapered later. A little support arrived after mid-day.

Canadian issues were irregularly lower at midday. Losers were Hiram Walker off 3/8, and Dome Mines and Distillers Seagram each off 1/8. Canadian Pacific gained 1/8 and McIntyre 1/4

Descriptive Report of Motor Trip To St. Petersburg, Fla. Given

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer

After a trip from Belleville to St. Petersburg, a distance of 1560 miles, as registered on my motor car, we look back over the extent of country we passed over and marvel at the great diversity of the scenery. At the top of the highest part of the Ivy Lea Bridge over the Canadian channel and at the top of the still higher bridge over the American channel what an extended view we obtained of river, islands, cottages and luxurious homes! Through the level land of New York State, which extends south of Syracuse, with its herds of Hereford cattle and fine farm houses painted white, we come out above Cortland into the Allaghany Mountain section. On either side of a deep valley, two mountain ranges run parallel with farms and stretches of woodland reaching to the summits. As the highway follows the eastern range near the top we see far below us the valley in shadow and the distant mountain bathed in sunshine with the reddish autumn leaves tinged a deeper red. To the east the glow of the rising sun is seen in the sky long before its light bursts upon us. As we drive south west from Cortland, the hills become higher and the valleys deeper as we approach Ithaca, which is built from the mountain top down into the valley. As we drive down the main street leading to the business section, we must drive carefully down the several steep inclines. I thought that to pass through Ithaca up the mountain side on our return journey would be still more difficult. The fine buildings of Columbia University are on the eastern outskirts of the city. We ate our breakfast at a large cafeteria in the business part of the town, surrounded by college students. From Ithaca to Elmira the scenery is not different, but beyond Elmira on highway 14 we leave the farms behind and pass through the heart of the mountains. The highway follows the winding valley and later above Williamsport it follows a branch of the Susquehanna. Sometimes the mountains are low and wooded to the summits, sometimes they are wooded half way up and the mountain crown is a step perpendicular cliff of rock. When these high rocky cliffs tower into the sky to the west of the highway, we drive for some time in deep shadow although it is only mid afternoon. At one place high on the top of a lower mountain we saw a peach orchard and on the edge of the valley we saw the farm buildings on the brow of a steep wooded cliff. Throughout this section are little scattered settlements and lonely wayside taverns and eating places. Above Williamsport, Pennsylvania, the country is more level, but after we pass through the city and reach the top of a very high mountain which looks down upon it from the south we pass through mountains again. From the highway which curves sharply around this high mountain, we see far below us the great Susquehanna river winding through level land below with the mighty city of Williamsport spread out far to east and west along its banks. A cross country road, a new highway, brings us out to the very banks of the Susquehanna above Harrisburg. We follow its low western banks while the mountains tower above its eastern shores. The houses along the road here where the land is steeper are built on high terraces of earth and stone close to the highway but often the land slopes gently towards the broad river whose waters are yellow with soil. The highway follows the western shore and passes through dull mining towns where great trains of coal cars move slowly along.

We leave the city of Harrisburg on the eastern shore and pass out of its western suburbs into the good farming land of lower Pennsylvania. With relief we leave the mountains behind, but they are not left behind entirely for far to the west, the grayish blue outline of the Blue Ridge extends north and south along the horizon.

Not far south of Harrisburg we come to Gettysburg where the famous battle of the Civil War was fought. The whole battlefield, which is a large flat-topped hill south of the city, is preserved as a memorial. The hill slopes down on all sides, and was an excellent choice of battleground by General Lee, the Southern general, after he with his army had overrun Maryland and all this southern part of Pennsylvania. Here the northern army rallied for the battle and won it after a long hard fight. Lee was forced to retreat back to Virginia. High above all the other monuments on the field stands the Lincoln memorial for it was here he made his famous speech, dedicating it. Uniformed guides meet your car as you pass through the city and offer to give you all information and show you over the battlefield. All along the highway are monuments to the fallen of many of the Northern regiments.

The farming land in this part of Pennsylvania is excellent although more hilly than farms in Southern Ontario. Throughout Maryland especially we see many fine homes, not humble farmhouses, but mansions built by the gentlemen farmers of the early days when slaves tilled the soil and waited upon their masters. Maryland remained neutral during the civil war and therefore her homes were not destroyed or her land devastated.

On the border of Washington we enter the District of Columbia and here we found the price of gasoline to be 18 1-2 cents. After passing through this great and beautiful city, and crossing the Potomac River we are in the old city of Alexandria and in the state of Virginia. Now we are in Dixie for the Mason and Dickson Line runs south of Maryland. This line was decided on during the struggle against slavery as the line marking the boundary between the slave states to the south and the free states of the north. Now we are on No. 1 highway, one of the finest paved roads in the world. The four-lane highway continues for over 125 miles, through the old city of Fredericksburg and through Richmond, and Petersburg. At Richmond we cross the broad new Roosevelt bridge over the James River which is very shallow though its banks are far apart. From Washington to Richmond the highway runs up and down hill through an open forest of young trees. We see no colonial homes here and no plantations. A Virginia man once told me that in these forests under the present growth could be traced the long low mounds of earth where the tobacco had been planted before the war destroyed homes and plantations.

This wonderful four-lane highway becomes the regular two-lane one south of Petersburg. Here the land is more level and we see the cotton and tobacco fields on which a second growth of each is growing green this season on account of the very warm fall weather. At places we see the cotton as a large white flower on the low green bush, at others we see its fluffy whiteness where it has burst forth from the flower and from the large round pod beneath the flower. As we enter North Carolina, we leave behind the dull skies and see the clear blue sky of the south. We pass through Raleigh, the capital, a smaller city than Richmond. It has a fine large hotel called "The Sir Walter Raleigh" hotel. We used to have many a good dinner here when we came south in the cooler days of December. Sir Walter Raleigh of England, founded the first American colony in this state during the reigh of Elizabeth and took home to England, the potato and tobacco.

We leave North Carolina not far south of Southern Pines which is a pretty town built among the pines. We always aim to stop to rest here where the highway runs through the outskirts of the town which provides benches in the shade in the open pine glades. West from Southern Pines nine miles is the famous hotel and winter resort caled Pinehurst.

When we leave North Carolina, we leave behind the red clay soil for South Carolina has the white sandy soil of Georgia and Florida. In South Carolina we see along the highway the small cabins of the negro tenant farmers. Some of them are poor buildings and when the front doors are open upon the front verandahs under the projecting roofs one can see that the furniture is scanty. Often the mattresses and bedding are seen airing over the railing of the verandah for there is no glass in the windows and the wooden shutters are closed at night. If it should be Monday when we pass through this part of the country, the big black pot would be seen over the fire in the back yard and the negro women would be washing outdoors.

South Carolina has the big city of Columbia, and between Columbia and Augusta is a country of hills and valleys covered with a growth of small oak trees. When we are halfway across the large bridge over the Savanah River at Augusta, we are in the state of Georgia. In South Carolina we have passed many peach orchards and pecan groves and in Georgia these continue and are more extensive. We also see many vineyards in these states and of late years, they have begun to grow grain in Georgia. We saw the fall wheat growing green and in the spring, I have often seen the oat fields here. In central and southern Georgia we see large tracts of pine forests tapped for turpentine. In south western Georgia we pas through a desolate country. It is low and swampy on each side of an excellent new highway. No villages are here. A solitary car may be seen miles away for the land is very level. The Spanish moss hangs in great streamers from trees. But here near a service stations and a few houses is a small modest monument. It is a monument to Stephen Foster, that immortal singer of southern songs. We pause to gaze upon the monument and think of his greatness and of his sad later life, separated as he was from his lovely southern wife and heartened by seeming failure. Just beyond the monument we cross a white bridge, below which flows a muddy stream called "The Suwanee River."

Not till we reach the border of Florida do we see the palm trees. Half way down the state, we come to the orange and grapefruit groves. Then through increasing traffic, we reach Tampa, a city of 300,000. From Tampa we follow the bay shore drive out of the city, past mansions of the rich and great. Then we cross Gandy Bridge, 6 miles long, and drive leisurely along a broad highway into St. Petersburg.

Nellie Arthur.

Personal Notes

Mrs. Edith Donaldson arrived in St. Petersburg on Nov. 7th, after a journey by train via New York City.

Miss Nora Hayes, Miss Margaret Hayes and Miss Mae Hayes arrived in St. Petersburg the third week of October after a journey by motor car via Washington, Savannah and Jacksonville. They report that they would prefer not coming so early as it is too hot here in October.

King Announces Major Changes in Cabinet

Ilsley Assumes Justice Portfolio; Abbott for Finance

St. Laurent Now Full Time External Affairs Minister

By JOHN LEBLANC

Ottawa, Dec. 11 — (CP) — A major shuffle of portfolios effected, the cabinet turned today to other top-priority national business that spotlighted Dominion-Provincial finances, the government's stabilization program and its heavy legislative agenda for the impending session of parliament.

A cabinet reorganization announced last night by Prime Minister Mackenzie King was still in process also, it was learned, and at least one more new appointment was to be added shortly to the three disclosed by Mr. King.

The changes announced by Mr. King were Finance Minister Ilsley's assumption of the Justice portfolio held by Rt. Hon. Louis St. Laurent; Defence Minister Abbott's addition of finance to his present portfolio, and Mr. St. Laurent's dropping of the justice post and devoting his full time to the External Affairs Ministry, which he took over recently from the prime minister.

In making public these switches at a press conference, Mr. King forecast more for an early date, and later it was learned the next move will be transferring of Mr. Abbott's double defence portfolio —army and navy — to another minister.

Fisheries Minister Bridges and Air Minister Gibson have been mentioned as prospects for the defence job. One suggestion was that the air minister might take them over before their formal consolidation into one portfolio at the next session, to be followed by Mr. Bridges' move to that ministry and Col. Gibson's appointment as Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario.

The new alignment as announced by Mr. King contained no changes from the shifts that had been predicted for some weeks.

Mr. Ilsley's departure from the finance job was understood to be of his own asking. It has been reported his next move will be to the Nova Scotia Supreme Court.

On Mr. Abbott as his successor in finance now devolves negotiating with the provinces for Dominion-Provincial agreements as his major immediate task.

Two appointments were announced by the prime minister. E. K. Williams, K.C., of Winnipeg, Special Counsel to the Royal Commission on Espionage, was named Chief Justice of the Manitoba King's Bench. J. B. Coyne, also of Winnipeg, was appointed Judge of the Manitoba Court of Appeal. Both are natives of Ontario.

With these appointments out of the way, cabinet was expected to devote today and tomorrow to drafting its 1947 legislative program and working out immediate moves in such matters as rentals and price controls, adjustment of labor surpluses and shortages in different parts of the country and assistance to marginal gold mining operations in Quebec and Ontario.

Plane Carrying 32 Overdue At Destination

Portland, Ore., Dec. 11 (AP) — An earlier report that a missing Marine Corps plane with 32 men aboard had been sighted south of Toledo, Wash. is erroneous, Maj. Carl Ernst, Portland Army Air Base Operations Officer, said today.

He added that a farmer had reported hearing what seemed to be an explosion late yesterday. This is being investigated, Ernst said.

Fog is hampering the aerial search and the operations officer said he understood that planes in the vicinity were flying on instruments, unable to see the ground.

Seattle, Dec. 11 — (AP) — A twin - engined United States transport plane carrying 32 men, last reported flying in foul weather, was sought today in rugged terrain skirting the Cascade Mountains.

Missing since 7:13 p.m. E.S.T. yesterday, the plane was one of six which left San Diego, Calif., on a non-stop flight to transfer a marine corps contingent to Seattle. The flight encountered bad weather in Oregon and Southwest Washington. Four landed at Portland. One made it safely to a naval air station here.

The missing plane last was in touch with a station sout of Chehalis, Wash. Thereafter it was silent despite frantic efforts of navy, army and radio stations.

Authorities said the plane had fuel sufficient to keep her in the air some 4½ hours beyond her scheduled arrival time — 8:06 p.m. last night.

Storm Sweeps N.E. From Texas Bringing Rain on Thursday

Toronto, Dec. 11. (CP)— A storm sweeping east today from the Prairie Provinces will reach Ontario but is expected to remain north of Lake Superior, forecasters at the Dominion Public Weather office here predicted at noon.

By late tonight the storm will move through the Kapuskasing area and head toward James Bay, they said. Its only effect on Southern Ontario will be an increase in wind velocity.

But the Toronto area can expect rain tomorrow, turning to snow late in the day, from another storm, forecasters said. That disturbance is moving northeast from Texas.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Dec. 11—(CP)—Synopsis: The weather is clear and rather cool throughout Ontario this morning. Much colder weather has moved into the prairies this morning in the wake of an intense storm now centred in central Manitoba. The storm is expected to move eastward through northern Ontario today and Thursday, colder weather will move into northern Ontario tonight and spread through the province on Thursday. Another disturbance centred in Texas is intensifying and will likely move northeastward to cause rain in the lower lake regions by Thursday afternoon.

CARRY OFF SAFE

Ajax, Ont., Dec. 11 (CP)— Thieves today broke into the post office of the University of Toronto's Ajax division and carried off a safe containing more than $1,500 in cash, stamps and postal notes. The robbers used a truck to haul away the safe.

Nazi Doctors Singled Out Victims To Undergo Tests Until They Died

Nuernberg, Dec. 11 — (AP) — Prosecutor James McHaney today introduced records showing that Nazi doctors singled out certain concentration camp victims to undergo experiments until they died.

Letters from Dr. Sigmund Rascher, who committed suicide, implicated at least three of 23 physicians now standing trial before a united States war crimes court for the inhuman experiments.

McHaney told the court the victims were put under high-altitude conditions in pressure tanks at Dachau. The aim was to see how much a German air force pilot could stand if he had to bail out.

One record stated that the heart of one Jewish victim continued beating for some time after the brain was removed. This led Heinrich Himmler to suggest in a letter that those who could be revived should be 'pardoned' to life imprisonment provided they were not Poles or Russians.

One subject named Wagner lived through tests simulating a height of more than 10 miles without oxygen. Rascher wrote that Wagner was put through some more tests, however, and eventually died.

TABRIZ, CAPITAL OF AZERBAIJAN, HAS SURRENDERED

Iranian Central Govt. Troops Welcomed In Province by Governor Djavid

Tehran, Dec. 11 (Reuters). — Tabriz, capital of the autonomous province of Azerbaijan, has "surrendered" to Iranian Central Government troops, it was learned today.

Dr. Salamullah Djavid, governor of Azerbaijan, sent the Shah of Iran and Premier Ahmed Qavam a message which said "The Iranian army is welcome in Azerbaijan".

The Azerbaijan move came after the Central Government had sent four columns of troops into the province and clashes had taken place between Iranian soldiers and Azerbaijan militiamen.

The troops were sent to Azerbaijan and other provinces to ensure free voting in forthcoming general elections, the government announced.

By EDDIE GILMORE

Moscow, Dec. 11 (AP). — Reports on the Iranian situation — including a dispatch asserting that the United States handed Iran's army 40 four-engined bombers— were emphasized today in Soviet foreign news.

The Russians followed with mounting interest the developments in the neighboring country on the southern frontier, but little editorial comment has been made in the last 48 hours.

A Tehran newspaper was credited with the report that the United States started delivering forty bombers to the Iranians Nov. 22.

Suspect Held In Girl's Slaying

Burtonsville Md., Dec. 11 (AP) —State's Attorney Joseph B. Simpson, Jr, supplied the name of a "definite suspect" today to police investigating the brutal hammer slaying of pretty Florence McAllister 29.

Simpson made his announcement soon after questioning a 30-year-old man from nearby Laurel, who told of seeing the suspect threaten Mrs. McAllister with a knife several weeks ago. Earlier police said two men were detained.

The men were picked up a few hours after Mrs. McAllister's body, clad only in brassiere and panties, was discovered in a second-floor bedroom of a gloomy and supposedly deserted frame dwelling belonging to her family.

Relatives said she had been missing since Nov. 19 ,but police estimated she had been dead only two days when found late yesterday.

DANDELIONS BLOOM

Niagara Falls, Dec. 11 — (CP) — Recent unseasonal warmth has tossed nature for a throw in this district. Only 10 shopping days to Christmas and dandelions are blooming, flies and mosquitoes buzzing, fruit trees, lilac bushes and spring-shrubs are budding.

Ilsley St. Laurent Abbott

In Dominion Cabinet shift, Finance Minister J. L. Ilsley becomes Justice Minister as Louis St. Laurent leaves that post to devote full time to external affairs. Defence Minister Douglas Abbott adds Finance portfolio to his own.

Stolen Car Black Market Operated From Hamilton And Montreal is Broken

Hamilton, Dec. 11 — (CP) — Climaxing weeks of intensive investigation, police disclosed today that a black market of stolen cars operated from Hamilton and Montreal had been broken.

The racketeers, investigation has shown, were stealing cars from Hamilton and various other points throughout the province, then re-selling them in Hamilton to an agent who arranged their shipment to Montreal, where they were sold at fancy prices, three or four hundred dollars above prices set by the Prices Board.

Detectives Albert Chennery and Clifford Dean, two of the younger men in the city detective department, are given credit for breaking the stolen car ring. During the course of their investigation, the two detectives have spent much time throughout the province and in Montreal. Since last July and up to the middle of November, car stealing, not only in Hamilton, but elsewhere has increased at an alarming rate. The thefts usually involved better-class cars.

150 to 250 Ontario Cars Involved

Det. Chennery revealed this morning that the ring operating here might be responsible for the theft and disposal of anywhere from 150 to 250 Ontario cars. "We know at the present time that in Montreal there are at least 400 Ontario cars being used in the taxi business and of this number at least 100 of them were stolen machines. We still have much investigating to do in order to clean up this mess," said Detective Chennery.

The officer explained that at the present time they had recovered three 1946 stolen cars from Hamilton and another from Niagara Falls. He further stated that the ring employed certain men to steal the cars both in and out of Hamilton and bring them to the dealer. These men received a minimum of $200 per car, sometimes as high as $300. The dealer then took the machines and turned them over to another group whose duty it was to drive them to Montreal, for a handsome fee. The dealer himself then went by train to Quebec City where he completed the deal with the black market gang in Montreal. Cars were grabbed up several hundred dollars above ceiling price. It was estimated that the stolen cars cost the dealer a maximum of $400 and were being re-sold any-

WARSAW TRIBUNAL CONDEMNS SIX MEMBERS OF NSZ

Six Others of Underground Organization Sentenced to Prison Terms

By LARRY ALLEN

Warsaw, Dec. 11 —(AP)— A military tribunal yesterday sentenced six members of the NSZ (National Armed Forces) underground organization to death on charges of attempting to overthrow by force the provisional Polish government and of being financed, directed and armed by intelligence officers of the army of Lt.-Gen. Wladyslaw Anders, operating from the United States zone of Regensburg, Germany.

Those condemned to die include Michael Pobocha, chief of the NSZ staff in the Warsaw district, and Tomasz Wolfram, adjutant to the Polish General Broniewska, whom the prosecutor charged commanded the NSZ in Poland.

Broniewska's wife, Stefania, was sentenced to eight years' imprisonment and five men were sentenced to seven to 10 years' imprisonment.

The prosecution charged that the 12 defendants carried out orders of Gen. Anders' agents in an attempt to overthrow the Warsaw regime through the assassination of government officials, sabotage and terroristic acts.

As sentences were passed, reports of new attacks by NSZ forces reached Warsaw. One band was said to have raided a village near Krasnystaw, burned nearly all the homes, looted properties and severely beaten families and Polish military personnel, seriously wounding 36.

DAMON RUNYON, FAMED BROADWAY CHRONICLER, DIES

62-Year-Old Reporter Convulsed Thousands of Readers With His Mirth

By PAT USSHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 11. (CP)— Damon Runyon, whose tales of eccentric Broadway characters convulsed thousands of readers and caused moviegoers spasms of mirth, died last night.

The 62-year-old reporter, newspaper columnist and writer of stories with a magic final twist succumbed in hospital of a liver ailment.

He had been ill for many months and during the last year a throat ailment had prevented him from speaking. He kept up with events by reading—and by writing notes instead of talking.

Readers of Runyon stories— whether they lived in Moosomin, Sask., in London or in Manhattan itself—felt they knew the "guys" and "dolls" that peopled his short stories.

Runyon got his material for these extraordinary human types as he sat in a popular Broadway cafe (he called it Mindy's) drinking coffee copiously. He was a teetotaller.

He gave them names like "Harry the Horse", "Spanish John," "Madam La Gimp" and "Dave the Dude". Some were lovable, some chisellers and swindlers—but they turned out to have hearts of gold before his tales ended. Their lives always centred around "Mindy's".

Familiar To Thousands

His story titles were as adroit as the names of his characters— "Blue Plate Special", "Guys and

U. S. MAY BE FORCED TO REVEAL ATOMIC SECRETS

Proposal to Inspect Reports Verifying U.N. Raised by Britain Arms Reduction

BY JOHN A. PARRIS, JR.

Lake Success, N.Y., Dec. 11. (AP)— The United States today faced the "dangerous" possibility of being forced to disclose vital atomic secrets immediately.

Members of Britain's delegation to the United Nations said the United States could forestall immediate disclosure by using the veto in the U.N. Security Council. But American representatives did not share this view.

The issue was raised as Russia and Great Britain agreed "in principle" last night in an assembly plenary session on a vast program enveloping arms reduction and a world-wide troop census with on-the-spot verification checks of all forces and armaments.

In a resolution calling for all members of the United Nations to report on armed forces at home and abroad by Jan. 1, Britain submitted an amendment to establish an inspection commission to verify these reports.

Russia insisted that this include armaments also, to which Britain agreed.

Foreign Minister Molotov argued that Britain's proposal would in effect "revise the charter" by abolishing use of the veto.

British Delegate, Sir Hartley Shawcross explained the proposal meant the veto could not be used after the commission had been established and said Russia previously had agreed in the armaments reduction proposal that control and inspection would be free of the veto.

Molotov then declared that the British proposal was "acceptable to the Soviet Union in principle" but said the wording was not clear and suggested that it be sent to a committee for clarification.

But Sir Hartley then said he was prepared to let his latest amendment go to a committee only if a vote was taken then on the original troop census resolution and his original amendment calling for verification.

Senator Tom Connally (Dem.-Tex.) said he would like both British amendments to go to the sub-committee on armaments reduction. It was finally agreed to turn the matter over to the subcommittee.

Connally told The Associated Press the British proposal as it stands is "dangerous" and would mean the United States would have to disclose the secrets of the atomic bomb without being able to invoke controls.

Meanwhile, the Security Council prepared to begin debate tomorrow on a Greek border complaint against Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania. Russia yesterday attempted to delay action on this question but was voted down.

WANTS TO STAY HERE

Goderich, Dec. 11 — (CP) — When he applied in county court for naturalization papers, Joseph Baker of Brussels, told Judge T. M. Costello that he was a native of Russia and that "Baker" was his second name. His other name, he said, was Sofong Dydowski. In Canada since 1913, he uttered an emphatic "No" when asked if he wished to go back.

Tiny Plane, Built for 1,700 M.P.H., Successfully Flown at Leisurely Rate

Los Angeles, Dec. 11 —(AP)— Tiny plane with which the United States army air forces expects to delve into the uncharted realm of supersonic speed has successfully completed its first tests.

With 23-year-old Chalmers (Slick) Goodlin, at the controls, the plane was cut loose Monday from the bell of a bomber. Seconds after the first United States rocket-propelled plane dropped away, Goodlin turned on the power, and the craft darted away with a momentum which the pilot compared to the thrust from a catapult aboard a carrier.

The plane is designed to fly at 1,700 miles an hour, but Goodlin made no attempt to step it up that high. He loafed along at a mere 550. He flew for 19 minutes and made a perfect landing with his fuelless engine idle.

The plane's engine burns ethyl alcohol, oxidized by liquid oxygen. Without fuel it weighs only 210 pounds and its over-all length is 56 inches.

Hotel Proprietor Forced to Open Safe at Gun Point

Trio Makes Getaway With $4,560 in Hotel Receipts

Windsor, Dec. 11 —(CP)— Three masked robbers, one a woman, forced their way into the International Hotel, here today and forced the proprietor, George Bolohan, to give up $4,560 he had just put in the safe.

Bolohan told police he was sure one of the men carried a nickel-plated revolver and the woman had a black automatic pistol, but he was not sure if the third member of the gang was armed.

Police believe Bolohan was watched just before the robbery, as he had been counting the money in the cash register and making up his deposits for delivery to the bank.

He said he was in the office just completing his money count when he heard a woman's voice at the front door calling: "George —George."

"As soon as I opened the front door one of the masked men stepped forward, pushed a revolver into my ribs and told me to get back into the hotel," Bolohan told police. "He entered the hotel and was followed by the other two."

In the office Bolohan was forced to re-open the safe and was told to stand facing it while the one gunman, who was in charge of the robbery throughout, scooped up several bags containing the hotel receipts.

While the robbery was in progress, Bolohan said, the masked woman stood guard in the lobby and the other man watched at the bottom of the stairway leading to the second floor.

After the money was taken from the safe the three thugs slowly backed out of the office towards the front of the hotel. Near the door the one who did all the talking and kept Bolohan continually covered with his revolver missed a short step and almost fell.

As they were leaving the hotel they warned Bolohan to remain as he was, facing the rifled safe, or "it won't be healthy for you."

When he heard them leave the front door Bolohan ran to the door, but the trio had disappeared.

British Troops, Military Police Badly Beaten Up

Padua, Italy, Dec. 11 —(Reuters)—British troops and military police were beaten up, their cars overturned and set on fire and the Union Jack was torn to shreds in anti-British demonstrations here Tuesday.

The disorders broke out after a British automobile had knocked down three persons in the centre of town.

Demonstrators besieged the British military headquarters in the Hotel Storione, tore to pieces the Union Jack hanging at the entrance and ill-treated a number of British officers.

The disorders were touched off when a car driven by a British soldier passed a red traffic signal, ran down a policeman, a motorcyclist and a cyclist.

Another policeman jumped on the running board of the car when it careened into a cafe. An angry crowd dragged out the driver and beat him up badly until he was rescued by a British military policeman.

Jewish Refugees Evacuated From Lonely Island

Jerusalem, Dec. 11 — (AP) — The Royal Navy announced today that 742 shipwrecked Jewish refugees have been evacuated from the lonely Greek island of Syrnia by two British warships and now are en route to Suda Bay at Crete, where the immigrants are to be transferred to a hospital ship and thence to Cyprus.

The refugees were marooned on the barren, waterless isle Sunday when their vessel smashed to pieces on the rocks in a Mediterranean storm.

Jewish agency sources here said Cyprus detainees now are being sent to Palestine in a gradual immigration progress and said the shipwrecked refugees probably will have to "take their turn in the immigration mill."

In Palestine, military authorities announced that two Jews were taken to hospital with bullet wounds when a British soldier accidentally discharged a Bren gun at a bus. The bus driver and a passenger were wounded and 6 others suffered shock.

Defence Opened In German Case

Cobourg, Dec. 11—(CP)—The Crown Monday closed its case in the trial of Judge J. C. M. German of Cobourg on trial of drunken driving and dangerous driving and the defence started to call its witnesses. The charge arose from an accident here last Sept. 5 in which an automobile struck and injured Mrs. Jeanne Taylor of Cobourg who still is in hospital.

Last Crown witness was Professor Joselyn Rogers, provincial pathologist, who said he examined a blood sample taken from Judge German after the accident and found it contained alcohol to the extent of 3.1 per cent per thousand.

Dr. William Avery of Toronto, first defence witness, said that he knew of three cases in which the alcoholic content of the blood had been more than three per cent but the men were not intoxicated, but in one case an error had been made in technique.

"A trained doctor and an experienced police officer concurred in this case that Judge German was under the influence of alcohol," commented Crown prosecutor E. C. Wallace. "Should that not be conclusive enough?"

"The doctor did not differentiate enough," replied Dr. Avery.

FARM LABOR HOSTELS

Chatham, Dec. 11 — (CP) — Farm labor hostels here and at Fingal and Centralia should be kept in good condition so that they can be used in the event of an emergency in the farm help situation, the Kent county Federation of Agriculture urged in a resolution adopted last night.

German prisoners of war occupied the camps until recently. Federation members praised the work of the prisoners and said that in 1946 they raised enough sugar beets for the processing of 7,000,000 pounds of sugar.

Extensive Alterations to County Buildings Recommended by Jury

Extensive renovations to the county buildings, particularly to the county court house, were recommended by members of the Grand Jury at the completion of their duties at the General Sessions of the Peace now being held.

Following their inspection of county buildings the following recommendations were brought in by the Grand Jury, with Frank Domenico as foreman:

To His Honor Judge Lane.

We the grand jury of the Court of General Sessions of the Peace for the County of Hastings, beg leave to report as follows:

We desire to thank your Honor for your very able, clear and explicit instructions in the law in reference to the consideration of the criminal cases coming before us and also in reference to our other duties.

We desire to thank Sheriff O'Flynn for his kindness, also the Crown Prosecutor Mr. Davis and the Crown Attorney Mr. Donnan for their efficient and valuable assistance. We also thank Mr. Robertson and Mr. Cushing for their assistance to us.

We desire to thank the Governor, Mr. James McCaw for his kindness and courtesy in conducting us through the county buildings.

We looked through the different rooms of the court house, and the following are some recommendations, which we, the Grand Jury suggest:

The Grand Jury room is in a very deplorable condition, floors very bad, long table required, with proper seating accommodation, windows tightening up, with new stops installed and new glass.

Main corridor decorated and new lighting.

Particularly all windows should have new stops.

New lighting in Sheriff's office.

New floor covering in Mr. Donnan's office

Curtains in judge's office (lower floor) should be cleaned and room decorated.

Toilet (lower floor) redecorated and new lighting installed.

Magistrate's office decorated and new wall plugs.

Suitable accommodation for three witnesses' rooms, new floor covering. Rooms decorated and new lighting installed.

New paint job on exterior of building. Pillars on west side. (Pinnacle Street entrance) should be repaired as soon as possible.

Registrar's office should be redecorated.

Public lavatory in court house very dirty and in deplorable condition and should be completely overhauled and all basement walls should be whitewashed.

Local master's secretary's office redecorated and new lighting.

Barristers' room decorated and new lighting and new office furniture.

Ladies' washroom decorated. Judge's room (upper floor) curtains cleaned and room decorated.

Main court room decorated and new covering for the balance of the floor. Roof leaks in court room in three different places.

We recommend fire fighting equipment and strongly suggest that all main doors should open outward.

We inspected the gaol and found 25 male prisoners. We interviewed six regarding living conditions and meals. They were all quite satisfied.

We visited the Governor's residence and found that the exterior needs a new paint job, new eavestroughs and we also find that the sidewalk is in a dangerous condition and should be repaired.

We found the Church Street entrance to the court house badly in need of repair.

We visited the county home and found everything in a very satisfactory condition under the excellent supervision of Mr. and Mrs. Sandercock. We found 41 females and 46 male inmates. We found the buildings in first class condition and everything in excellent order and in a state of extreme cleanliness. These buildings are a credit to the county of Hastings.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

(Signed) Frank Domenico,
Foreman.

Dept. of Municipal Affairs Conducts School in City

Appointed officials and elected representatives of municipalities throughout the Central Ontario district from Oshawa to Kingston and north to Peterborough are in attendance at Belleville at a special two-day school in municipal procedure which is being conducted by officials of the Department of Municipal Affairs.

The school opened on Tuesday and is expected to conclude some time this afternoon. Approximately 70 municipal officials from the surrounding district attended the Tuesday sessions while on Wednesday there were about 50 in attendance.

In charge of the school is Hon. George H. Dunbar, minister of municipal affairs, and A. J. B. Gray, deputy minister of municipal affairs, and three other officials from the department.

Municipal matters of interest to officials are dealt with at the school, which is one of a series which is being conducted throughout the province.

The length of time for nomination meetings was one of the topics which was discussed at the Wednesday morning session with Mr. Gray stating that although the time set for filing nominations was one hour, potential candidates must have the opportunity of resigning when nominated for more than one position. If the meeting adjourned at the end of the hour the candidate would in some instances have no opportunity of resigning.

Hon. G.H. Dunbar Guest of Club

Hon. George H. Dunbar, Minister of Municipal Affairs, was a guest of the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon held at the Hotel Quinte on Tuesday. Himself a Kiwanian of the Ottawa club and members of his department have been in the city for the past two days conducting a municipal school in the city hall. In being introduced to the club, the speaker stated the government was trying to improve the lot of the underprivileged boy and girl by opening schools throughout the province, staffed by competent teachers. He described the school recently opened in Galt, where 114 boys are now quartered and they now have a band of 32 pieces and are behaving themselves admirably. He claimed a foundation for the boy should be started in the home and instead of building schools for wayward boys the money should be spent on the home and half of the trouble will be over.

Harry Brown, chemical engineer at the Canada Cement plant at Point Anne was admitted to membership in the club. He was introduced by Herb Fox and initiated into the organization by Cliff Baragar, past lieutenant governor for the district. The speaker of the day, Major Victor Underhill of the Salvation Army, was introduced by Dick Kuntze and Kiwanis appreciation expressed by Bert Reid. Major Underhill has served as missionary in many posts including Egypt, Trinidad and British Honduras. The school operated by the Army in British Honduras was described by the use of slides and in a very able and interesting way the speaker presented the life of the boy in the school and how his teaching served in after life.

C. Bateman Named Pres. Hungerford Junior Farmers

Popular young Hungerford Township farmer Carl Bateman was named president of the Hungerford Junior Farmers at their December meeting held at the home of Stanley Bateman. Carl acted as secretary during 1946 and succeeds Don Sills as president.

Possibility of restricting the members participating in the various club trips should the need arise for such a policy was discussed by the members. It was moved by Carl Bateman and seconded by Don Martin that a roll call be taken at every meeting and those not attending 80 per cent of the meetings be barred from taking free trips. The motion carried unanimously.

In future the club members will meet on the first Tuesday of each month while a program committee was named to act for the next six months. Each member will take part in the program at some meetings, all of which will be held at members' homes. Efforts will be made to secure a special speaker for each meeting to talk on some subject of timely interest.

Guest speaker for the December meeting was Harry W. Burns, assistant agricultural representative, who showed a set of slides on "Profitable Poultry Keeping".

Vice-president for 1947 will be Don Martin with Earl Gray as secretary and Parkyn Richardson as treasurer. Directors are Harold Meeks, Gerald Bateman and Stewart Elliott with Don Sills as auditor.

Installation of Gasoline Service Tanks and Pumps Discussed by City Council

Some Members Feel Too Many Permits Are Being Granted

The existing city by-law regarding restrictions and regulations concerning the installation of gasoline service tanks and pumps for retail use, came up for considerable discussion at council Tuesday evening following the report of a special committee which recommended that a party on Cannifton Road be permitted to install pumps.

In opening discussion on the matter Alderman Thompson declared that if the present procedure was maintained everyone in the city will have a gas tank in their back yard. "It will lead to an extremely dangerous situation," he said.

Alderman Armstrong felt that if the present by-law does not give the protection needed, then it should be amended to give the city jurisdiction in the matter. Alderman Chamberlain interjected that the present by-law applied only to wholesale storage tanks, while Alderman Thompson declared it should refer to all types of tanks.

Favorable Report

As one of the special committee which investigated the application of Halloran Bros for permission to install tanks, Alderman Trudeau stated a favorable report had been made because of the by-law which is in effect. "We had no way to prevent the installation of the tanks," he said. "However, I feel that the by-law should be repealed and that a stand should be taken soon."

As result of the discussion Alderman Armstrong brought in a motion that the by-law regulating the installation of gasoline tanks, including retail outlets, be referred to the city solicitor for revision. The motion carried.

Council voted to pay the city's share in the cost of the proposed program for publicizing the county. Both Alderman Follwell and Alderman McDougall spoke to the recommendation, the latter assuring the project had Chamber of Commerce approval, and that the program would do much good in advertising the county.

Call for Tenders.

Authorization was given for the call for tenders for the supply of needed equipment for the public lavatory now under construction on the city market. Under enquiries Alderman Trudeau wanted to know the expected cost of the project and was told it would be in the neighborhood of $3,000 without the heating installation.

An engineer of the Canadian National Railways will be invited to come to the city to confer with city officials on the possibility of constructing a subway at the Frank Street crossing. The matter of the crossing had been discussed at a previous council meeting.

Four open air skating rinks will be prepared for flooding as soon as possible, while a committee was appointed by Mayor Frank Follwell to investigate the possibility of removing trees and poles from West Dundas Street in the vicinity of the "Devils Elbow" where numerous accidents have occurred.

Laid Over Till Spring.

As a result of only one tender being received for the proposed repairing of the retaining wall on Campbell Street, it was decided to lay the work over until the spring. In the meantime the sidewalk will be barricaded as a protective measure for the safety of pedestrians, while "no parking" signs will instruct auto drivers not to park on that side of the street.

A qualified land surveyor will be employed by the city to survey the Ponton property for which the city had made an offer for use as a flying field. The number of acres and the exact site and dimensions will be ascertained.

Sewers which had been proposed for Coleman Street, Ridley Street and Benjamin Street, will not be proceeded with during the winter owing to the added cost of construction during the freezing period.

Boxing Day Observed

The mayor will proclaim Boxing Day as a public holiday, it was decided, while council members arranged to hold their last meeting of the year on December 19th, this to take place in the form of a joint committee and open council meeting. A group photograph of the entire council together with the city clerk, was taken, with each member of council to receive a print.

And while council members were in a photographic mood, one of the members inquired as to what had become of many of the photographs of former city officials which previously had hung in the council chamber.

As chairman of market and city property Alderman Butler replied that when the chambers had been redecorated, it had been felt that the appearance of the walls would be lowered had many of the older ones been replaced. Another council felt that names of the officials appearing in the picture should be ascertained and still another recommended that all photographs be brought to a standard size and placed on the walls in some degree of order.

Will Arrange Pictures

At this point city clerk Wilfred Holmes assured that during the summer months the pictures were the object of considerable interest by out-of-town persons. A committee of Aldermen Butler, Chamberlain and the city clerk was appointed to look into the matter of arranging the pictures.

When it was mentioned by the mayor that the Armouries laneway had been re-opened for pedestrians, Alderman Thompson stated he was surprised that the alleyway had been opened before the necessary lights had been placed for night use. In passing Mayor Follwell paid tribute to Aldermen Tice and Harvey for their efforts in having the lane re-opened.

Alderman Chamberlain enquired as to the progress being made regarding the installation of the ice plant at the arena and was told that the necessary sleepers were being prepared for creosoting.

Soon Have to Instal Pipes.

Alderman Tice declared that the pipe would soon have to be installed or it would be practically impossible to have natural ice this winter, while Alderman Clarke wondered if the Canadian Ice Machine Company which has the contract to instal the ice plant, has any pipe to instal.

"There is still nothing on the ground here to show that anything has been done by way of commencing installation," commented Alderman Thompson.

"I had heard rumors that the pipe is already at the arena," said Alderman Allin. This, it was pointed out, was merely a rumor.

Alderman Harvey enquired as to a hole in the roadway at the eastern end of Victoria Ave., and also expressed the appreciation of residents of Samson Ward for the re-opening of the Armories laneway. This was concurred in by Ald. Tice.

Alderman Armstrong wanted to know if anything further was being done this year in regard to harbor developments and asked if the work of dock extension would be proceeded with.

To this Alderman Chamberlain, as chairman of the harbor committee, replied that he had no information, but stated the committee would go to Ottawa to ascertain plans and to "get things ironed out." He stated there had been a misunderstanding.

Wants Inner Harbor Dredged.

Alderman Hyde asked regarding the dumping of garbage toward the proposed dock extension, while Alderman Tice stated that the inner harbor should be dredged out as its present condition was a disgrace. "The city should be kept after the federal government until the work was done," he said.

To this Alderman Chamberlain stated that the city had understood the work of dredging the inner harbor had originally been promised for this year but when the estimates came through the work had not been included. "That is quite true," interjected Mayor Follwell, "but the legislators apparently saw things differently and threw it out."

Appreciation Expressed.

Appreciation to the local radio station for their broadcast of the election results was expressed by council in a motion, while under general business Mayor Follwell expressed his appreciation for the support of council members during the past year. Special appreciation was tendered to Alderman Thompson who as an ex-mayor of the city, had given much advice to the Mayor. The Mayor also expressed regret at the retirement of Aldermen Trudeau, McDougall, Thompson and Woodley and expressed the hope that these men would make themselves available to various city committees in the future.

These men have left a real mark of progress as members of city council, stated the Mayor.

Judge German Takes Stand In Own Defence

Cobourg, Ont., Dec. 11—(CP)—At the conclusion yesterday of Crown evidence in the trial of Judge German on charges of drunk driving and dangerous driving, the Judge took the stand in his own defence. He said he had been taking insulin treatments for two years and was on a diet.

On the day of the accident last September in which it is alleged a car driven by Judge German struck and injured Mrs. Jeanne Taylor, the Judge said he had taken a drink of rye whisky at the apartment of a friend whose daughter was being married that day. He left soon afterwards for another appointment.

"I drove to Mr. Maher's home and remained from 8:10 to 8:45. While there I had some rye and water, less rye than earlier," he said. "I left with the intention of meeting the first train at Port Hope."

He said as he drove he felt tired but otherwise in good condition.

"I did not see Mrs. Taylor before my car and she came into collision," he testified. "I felt the bump and I thought it was on the right rear door of my car. I swerved away from it and came to a stop. I don't remember much until I was sitting beside Mrs. Taylor in the ditch."

Removal of Fixed Prices To Consumer Might Result In Chaotic Conditions of '30s

George Graham Says Milk Cannot be Sold for Less Than 15 Cents Quart

Predictions that if the supply and demand conditions in milk production resumed normalcy and that if the price to the producer remained fixed with that to the consumer becoming free, a black market between distributor and producer might result, were aired today by district milk distributors before the Royal Commission on Milk sitting in Shire Hall under Mr. Justice Dalton Wells.

George Graham, Montrose Farms, Belleville; Sherman Graham, Riverside Dairy, Trenton, and K. Moncrief, Hemlock Park Dairy, Kingston, told the Commission that removal of fixed prices to the consumer might result in the chaotic conditions of the early thirties.

Asked by Commission council, Beverly Matthews, if the distributors had the right to fix the price to the consumer, could they sell it less than 15c per quart, George Graham said "no". "Prices would go up to between 15 and 21c. the latter being the consumer price in the United States."

Does Not Know

"If we had legislation with teeth in it, backed up by producer organizations would the farmer suffer if the fixed price was removed?" counsel asked.

"I would not know", replied Mr. Graham.

He was of the opinion that the high prices paid by the United States consumers together with the handpicking of Canadian milch cows by American dairy farmers was one of the main factors to conditions of supply in Canada.

"Eighteen years ago," Graham said, conditions were confusing; there were no controls of any kind; there were all kinds of prices. Milk production was cheaper and there was no control board. Milk was paid for on all kinds of basis, so to protect his large farming interests he went into dairying.

Decrease Labor, Feed Costs

"Decrease of labor and feed costs were two ways to get the cost of milk down to the consumer," Mr. Graham said. Essential feeds were practically impossible to get including oil-cake and bran and soy bean meal.

Bran was impossible for the Canadian producer to secure because so much wheat was being exported. United States producers could get it because they are getting prices high enough to pay the ridiculous charges asked for the feed. Canadian producers, he said, would not be able to get bran unless more wheat was milled in Canada. Two years ago, he could get two bags of bran only if he took two bags of flour with them.

"The American producers", he said, "are not raising calves. They buy springer cows in Canadian backyards, feed them concentrates, milk them, then fatten them, sell them to the butcher and come back to Canada for more cows.

"We used to buy six or seven replacement cows for our herd every year," Mr. Graham told the Commission, "and bought them for $100 each. Now Americans who get $5 and $6 per hundred for their milk come over here and buy the same type of cow for $200."

No Brewery Grain

Years ago he could purchase brewery grain by the carload at a nearby distillery. Now he cannot get it only in small quantities because big milling interests are buying it up for mixed feeds. He thought the government should be approached to see that local producers get this type of grain before the millers get it.

He had seen, he charged, hay being ground up and put into mixed feeds in one of the large milling concerns. "The hay used was not good bedding. I would rather get my own grain, use my own hay and make my own mixed feeds."

Asked if the lack of adequate supplies had affected the producer of milk supply any extent, Mr. Graham told the Commission that the milk flow, due to this reason, had definitely decreased by 25 per cent.

Answers in Affirmative

"Then there would be an appreciable saving to be producer of these ingredients could be secured locally at a reasonable price?"

"Yes."

The cost of production was much more than $3.35 per 100 as set by the Control Board. In Graham's opinion there had been some sort of control all along the line but with variations, sizes of farms, etc., there will always be big and little producers. Conditions were such that it has not been possible to lay down a basic rule. He was of the opinion there should be fewer but larger dairies.

Sherman Graham, questioned by Kelso Roberts, K.C., representing the St. Patrick's riding Toronto consumers, regarding his opinion of emulating the British Food Ministry's system of pooling milk for all purposes, stated that the plan might be feasible here if there were centralized factories where milk could be pooled and sent out to the different categories. He agreed with Mr. Mathews suggestion that a survey of the province would be necessary with regard to location of the suggested centralized plants.

Agrees With Witness

Graham agreed with the former witness that the milk business was chaotic in 1932-33. Milk came into Belleville and Trenton at less than $1.00 per 100 and he had delivered milk to stores at two pints for five cents. The Milk Control Board had stabilized prices to some extent since its inception and this had proved fairly satisfactory.

He agreed that the Board should have sufficient power to remove any doubt between producer and consumer and to fix the price if these two could not agree. If the fixed price to the consumer was removed conditions would go back to those of 15 years ago.

If conditions were such that it meant breaking the law on one hand or "going in the red in business on the other", Mr. Graham told the Commission "I would not starve to death."

"Zoning of Trenton had been discussed," Mr. Graham said, "and the expense was found to be the same. His company had effected several economies in war time in accordance with WPTB requests. Additional dairies would increase the cost of unit distribution at a higher cost to the consumer and lower profit to the distributor. If the distributor suffers a loss, it would be passed on to the producer.

Threat of Black Market

Counsel remarked that a threat of black market loomed if the fixed price to the producer was in vogue and a free market to the consumer was inaugurated, Graham agreed.

Mr. Moncrief, Hemlock Dairy and Farms, Kingston, told the Commission his company supplied only one-third of its needs. He explained that the fourteen company wagons and three trucks were loaded to capacity daily and while the basic price was 15 cents per quart boarding houses who used six quarts and over received a one-cent decrease in price.

Board Refuses

He had endeavored at a group meeting held in Kingston to have this clause removed but the Milk Control Board refused. The idea of using two-quart containers had been turned down by the Milk Distributors Association as it meant a complete refitting of all dairies. There have been very few demands for these larger containers and it would be a reversal of the economic trend suggested by government agencies.

Six-day delivery had been discussed but there had been no unanimity among the distributors. Most demands were on religious grounds. He did not think it would be sound economy for it meant a double delivery on Saturdays, and as wagons are loaded now it would call for "feeders" to be sent out. Then there was the 48-hour labor question involved.

If the producer price was fixed and the consumer price free, Mr. Moncrief, said that if the supply and demand regained normalcy there would probably be 'under the table deals' with the producers, and the farmer faced with no sale of his milk would be no less amenable to talk with distributors."

"Partition" Still Hot Issue in Eire

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Dublin, Dec. 11—(CP)—Thirty years after the Irish Republic was proclaimed, "partition" is still a burning issue. The avowed aim of Prime Minister De Valera's government is to absorb Northern Ireland — but it doesn't expect success in the near future.

"So far as I can see, there is going to be no short-cut to the end of partition," said Sean MacEnter, minister for local government, in a Dublin speech.

At the outset, he acknowledged that many things said about partition and how to end it "do more harm than good." The people of the six northern counties had their traditions and sentiments. It was no use being bellicose or intolerant.

"Achievement is the best propaganda," Mr. MacEntee said, and then he gave his recipe for bringing Northern Ireland into the Republic of Eire:—

"Let the Northern people come amongst us, and let us welcome them, be they of the flaming orange or blackest purple in their views.

"Let them see that here in the 26 counties of our common country they will find, as at home amongst themselves, thrift, industry, self-reliance and enterprise.

"These are the rooted virtues that make a people great. Let our neighbors across the border see . . . that here we are fit to be free, because each and all of us can stand on our own legs and do not look or expect to be spoonfed by another government.

"These are things that will appeal to their own sturdy minds, and it is by the practice of these virtues that we will make political union attractive to them."

Prodigal's Return: Although the latest official figures list almost 50,000 unemployed in Eire, there is a growing hope that some skilled Irish workers soon will be attracted home from jobs abroad.

The unemployment among carpenters, cabinet makers, painters, bricklayers and others in the building and furniture trades is "practically negligible," union officials report. Already the homeward trek of men who went to Britain for war work has begun.

Food supply: Visitors from Britain look on Eire as a land of plenty in the ration line, but Sean Lemass, minister for industry and commerce, has his difficulties in making food supplies go around.

Sugar will be rationed through 1947 and butter, because of a winter production drop, will be rationed at least until next summer. Fresh eggs will be scarce until the spring because Eire has never gone in for big winter production.

The best prospect is for tea, with a small increase likely after next March.

TIME-HONORED CURE GETS TESTED AGAIN

London, —(CP)—A doctor's prescription, radioed to a ship at sea, saved the life of a man bitten by a poisonous spider concealed in a crate of bananas.

In answer to a radio telegram, the doctor replied: "Give patient stiff dose of whiskey neat every two hours."

Next day the captain replied "Patient cured."

Canadian Vessel In Tow of Tug In Heavy Seas

Hamilton, Bermuda, Dec. 11—(CP Cable) — The British Admiralty tug Restive had the 7,500-ton Canadian cruiser in tow and was expected to reach here today after wallowing through 40 miles of heavy seas.

Two injured members of the crew of the Canadian National Steamships vessel were taken off by a United States crash boat yesterday and brought to Hamilton where last night they underwent operations.

Steward Napoleon J. Arsenault of Summerside, P.E.I., was operated on for acute hernia at the United States naval hospital soon after being brought ashore. Able Seaman Thomas McLaughlin of Verdun, Que., had foreign matter removed from his eye.

Damage to the ship, on her maiden voyage to Bermuda and the West Indies from Halifax has not been determined. American naval authorities said she had lost her rudder but C.N.S. agents

Busy Season

City elections over, thoughts can now centre upon fast-approaching Yuletide, the merriest time of the year which requires preparation for much of the joy of the year is gathered into these festivities. Housewives who took time out to vote are now able to give attention to the series of plannings that go into the celebration two weeks away. With the passing of the days will come a great deal of buying, then entertainments which cluster around this season in churches and church halls and other places will occupy attention of many lives, those of the children and their parents and relatives.

Despite elections business has been very active in these days. Trade did not hesitate or halt but has gone forward, gaining momentum as day after day passes reducing the time between now and December 25.

Customs of Yuletide

The people of the English-speaking world as the time draws near the great occasion of Yuletide have their thoughts on Britain from which came so many of the customs and which has contributed so much to the midwinter celebration of the birth of Christ.

Christmas is and always has been Britain's greatest and gayest festival. Even back in the Middle Ages a visiting French priest, Pere Cyprian, marvelled at it declaring that in Britain Christmas was kept "with greater ceremony than any other realm in Europe." It has always been the feast of the family and the fireside. In olden times hospitality was extended to all a landlord's tenants too. The great noblemen and landowners were at this season allowed to dress their heralds in their own livery—forbidden all the rest of the year; and they kept open house for all their tenants. The Yule log was brought in from the woods with dancing and rejoicing, and the thick Christmas candle lit. Then there was singing, games were played, and the mummers performed plays. In many places a Lord of Misrule was elected to direct the festivities, and everyone, including the nobleman himself, was subject to his commands. One of the oldest Yuletide traditions is the singing of Christmas carols. Many English carols are very old and very beautiful. And groups of young people from clubs, schools and churches still go round singing them in the weeks before Christmas. Usually the money they collect is given to charity. Some localities have their own carols. For instance, much bombed Coventry, England, is the home of "Lully, lulla Thou little tiny child," and after the terrible raid of 1940 the people of Coventry gathered among the ruins and sang this hymn. Christmas bells are rung by the churches on Christmas morning. Houses are decorated with holly, mistletoe and evergreens, the traditional mince pies and plum pudding—so far as they are available today—are still eaten. And presents are exchanged.

The second Christmas since the end of World War II finds a sense of release and relief of which women are, apparently, prepared to take full advantage. It is odd that the "Britain Can Make It" Exhibition in London has been, in some ways, responsible for this. For one thing, the amazing coiffures which a wellknown hairdresser designed for the figures wearing the clothes in the Fashion Hall have aroused immense interest. Women are demanding to have their hair dressed in some of the styles shown and are making appointments already so that they will be able to appear at Christmas parties with hair elaborately dressed. Meanwhile, the dressmakers report that clients gave orders as early as the spring for gowns which they want to wear during the festivities, and for the first time some of the elaborately low-cut dresses we saw in the collections will be worn at restaurants and private parties.

Public Health in W. Africa

Technical international cooperation is now being extended over the whole of West Africa. The Medical Conference which met recently in Accra, Gold Coast, and at which the Chief Secretary to the British West African Council presided, was attended by medical experts from French West Africa, French Equatorial Africa, the French Cameroons and Togoland, the British Colonies of Nigeria, Gold Coast, Sierra Leone, and Gambia, the Belgian Congo, Portuguese Guinea and Liberia. It was agreed to establish practical cooperation in many aspects of public health and medical work. Arrangements will be made for using pathological laboratories in the area according to geographical convenience rather than international boundaries. It is hoped to organise, during the coming year, experiments in joint campaigns in the frontier areas where such diseases as sleeping-sickness and smallpox or yellow fever occur on both sides of the borders. Arrangements will be made for an emergency supply of drugs, equipment and personnel from neighbouring territories.

Oldest Peer

Britain's oldest peer, Lord Hayter, who was christened in his mother's bedroom because the doctors gave him only a few hours to live, has died at Chislehurst, aged [illegible], says London Daily Mail.

He had been refused a life insurance policy, at the age of 21, because of his delicate health. Eventually he became deputy chairman of the company that refused him.

He was the ninth man in London to have a telephone number—London 9.

Knighted by Queen Victoria, Lord Hayter was the oldest knight bachelor (1875) and the oldest baronet (1900) as well as being the oldest peer. He was so far as is known, also the oldest volunteer in the Kingdom, having been a cadet in one of Lord Truro's London regiments at the age of 12.

Doom of London Tram

As a relief to another of London's traffic problems the London Passenger Transport Board have announced their intention to scrap the old London tram, and replace its services by modern oil-fuel buses. The passing of the old London tram will bring about a change of character in the London streets they serve. Instead of the rickety tramcar careening down its track swaying from side to side, a silent running and no doubt streamlined bus will be seen; and the traffic holdups caused by trams having to cut across main traffic routes will be abolished. The routes the tram serves are mainly south of the Thames, according to London Times.

Sugar From Wheat

The sugar refinery of Sucrest Corporation in Brooklyn is processing wheat instead or raw cane sugar. The announcement states that more than 2½ million pounds of wheat syrup will be produced for use in the food industry. Company officials said they had previously produced this syrup when allocations of raw cane sugar were exhausted but in the present instance it was necessary due to the marine and trucking strike, Farmer's Advocate points out.

Nazis Faithfully Kept Their Files

The Nuremberg trial saw the biggest haul of unpublished documents that the historian has known. More than five thousand documents from enemy archives were submitted in evidence, and these are only the small fragment of the mass of material that was captured from the Nazis. For the Nazis were true German bureaucrats in that they faithfully kept their files. Snippets were given in papers during the course of the trial, but we may have to wait long for proper historical handling. It is a job that will exercise scholars for generations, says Manchester Guardian.

Newspaper Facts

"Never before has there been such a means for the gathering and dissemination of facts as the press of our day. Its role in determining the future of the world is in calculable." . . . The Rt. Rev. Msgr. Howard J. Carroll, General Secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

The largest commercial drydock in the world is at Southampton—1,200 feet long, 135 feet wide, capacity of 58,000,000 gallons of water, which can be emptied within four hours after a ship enters. Built in 1932, 2,000,000 tons of earth were removed—750,000 tons of concrete poured, the British Magazine notes.

SPENDING MONEY

Let her have it while you may.
Keep that smile forevery sunny.
Best of all that's earned, I'd say,
Is the stuff called "Spending Money."

Just relax the grasping hand.
Grief is closer than you think it.
Throw away the rubber band.
Let her have that wanted trinket.

Toss the money in her lap.
Let a kiss or two attend it.
As you loose your wallet wrap Say: It's yours! Go out and spend it!"

Some for clothes and coal must go.
Some must pay for bread and honey.
Dollars saved are good, but oh!
Best of all is "Spending Money."

Harry Brown of this city has gone to Houghton, Mich., to play hockey this winter. He should play the game of his life this season; he is fast and heavy, has played in the swiftest kind of company and made good. The Houghton management has surely gathered in a star cover point. Many a lightning forward in the pro league will find his speed considerably lessened after a "gentle" body check from Harry.

The Belleville O.H.A. Juniors have been placed in group one by the executive. They will go up against the Kingston Frontenacs, the Brockville Crescents and Picton. It will be seen that the teams in group one have some pretty long jumps to make. The boys will need generous support in order to stand the expense it is to be hoped that they receive it. Hockey in this district will never be what it used to be when Belleville, Peterborough, Port Hope and Kingston were all in the game with strong teams.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why was the Turkish cap called a fez?

The red felt or woolen skullcap formerly almost universally worn by Turkish men received its name from Fez, a city in Morocco, where such caps were first made.

Fez was long a seat of Arabian learning in Africa and is still one of the sacred cities of Islam. It contains a hundred mosques, one of which, the Mosque of Karueein, is the largest in Africa. Until recent times Fez had a virtual monopoly on manufacturing fezzes. It was supposed that the crimson dye used to color the fez, made from a berry growing in the vicinity, could be obtained nowhere else.

The Arabs call this picturesque headgear the "tarbuzh," (English "tarboosh"). A typical tarboosh consist of a close-fitting, brimless truncated cone of red felt or wool with a black or dark-blue tassel hanging from the middle of the top nearly to the bottom of the edge.

Among the Arabs of the Near East the tarboosh is worn by men of the upper and middle classes either alone or as part of the turban (Turkish "tulbend"), which consists of a sash or shawl twisted about the head. Some Oriental turbans contain as much as 20 or 30 yards of the softest and finest muslin.

This type of head-dress was probably adopted because the Moslem religion requires the worshipper to bow his forehead to the ground while praying in the mosque. Mohammed enjoined all the faithful to make a pilgrimage to Mecca at least once in their lifetime, and those who have made the pilgrimage indicate the fact by wearing a tarboosh or turban of a special color—a green one in the Near East and a white one in the East Indies. Lord William Bentinck was recalled as British governor of Madras in 1807 for prescribing sepoy beards and turbans.

Sultan Mahmud II, Ottoman emperor from 1808 to 1839, made the fez part of the Turkish dress. It was considered the special badge of a Turkish subject, who was compelled to wear it even though not a Mussulman. The fez has been abolished as part of the national costume in the Republic of Turkey, although such caps are still widely worn by Moslems in the Balkans, North Africa, the Levant and other territories once under Turkish control. As early as 1908 the Turkish army began the change in headgear by adopting a more modern cap.

On November 25, 1925, the national legislature at Angora, under the direction of Attaturk, declared: "The members of the Grand National Assembly of Turkey and the official and unofficial personnel of the departments of public administration, general and local, as well as of all institutions or establishments in general, are obliged to wear the hat adopted by the Turkish nation. The hat being the headgear of the Turkish population, the Government is opposed to all contrary usage."

The counselor of the Turkish Embassy in Washington who supplied this translation said the edict indicated the tendency of his more progressive countrymen toward the adoption of the ways of modern civilization. As the fez symbolized the Turkey of the sultans, the hat symbolizes the Turkish Republic. No other single change in Turkey eliminated so much color from the street scenes of the cities as the passing of the fez.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

HERE WE GO AGAIN

No medical or other scientific authority or author or practitioner can or will define "resistance" in terms that any one else can understand.

If there is any scientific truth to support the notion of "resistance" as a state of immunity or non-susceptibility to all or many diseases, say diseases caused by germs or viruses, it should be a simple matter for the medical or other scientific authorities to enlighten us about it and stop my intolerable yawping.

Wait, wait! I do hope sophomoronic readers will spare me their stereotyped comments. After all I have been studying this subject for quite a while and I have found there are just two substantial facts one can accept as undebatable, namely, (1) that what "everybody knows" about "resistance" is nothing, and (2) the belief, opinion or view of a medical authority or a scientific authority has as much weight, but no more, than the belief, opinion or view of Ol' Doc Brady or even a real doctor who never quacks it at all.

One medical dictionary (Dorland's) published last year, defines resistance, particularly vital resistance in the way too many medical charlatans explain things: "The resistance of the individual to the untoward affects" (sic) "of bacteria, infections, fatigue, etc." If that isn't funny or phony, will some one please tell me what it means?

Another medical dictionary (Stedman's, published in 1933, defines resistance as a passive force exerted in opposition to another and active force, etc., but makes no allusion to illness or disease or susceptibility.

Then the old reliable N. Webster rushes in where angels . . . telling us that resistance is "the opposition offered by an animal or plant to a disease—opposed to susceptibility." As usual Noah gives us the run-around—susceptibility, he explains elsewhere is "state or quality of being.... affected....as having susceptibility to colds"—so there we are right back where we started from—Ol' Webster, too, thinks it is silly to define what "everybody knows" and takes little stock in the idea that we catch three-fourths of our everyday illnesses from our ignorant, careless, impolite or vicious friends, neighbors, fellow passengers, fellow workers, teachers, pupils, doctors, clients et cetera. It is not just my guess, but the conclusion reached by U. S. Public Health Service investigators who conducted a survey of the sickness rate in various urban and rural areas, and found that three-fourths of all the illness attended by physicians was directly or indirectly due to respiratory infection.

Immunity, to the best of our present knowledge — the knowledge of physicians and medical scientists, is always specific, never general. That is to say, immunity to diphtheria, smallpox or tuberculosis has nothing whatever to do with the individual's susceptibility to or immunity to typhoid fever, lobar pneumonia or measles. If I am right about this—and I ask medical and health authorities to stop me if they know something I don't know about it—then it is not only absurd but downright wicked for any one purporting to inform or advise the public to sound off on the hackneyed theme of "proper food, fresh air, rest and proper clothing" to "maintain good resistance." Anyway, that's the way it looks to me—and would you believe it, I think proper food, fresh air, sufficient rest and suitable clothing are good for one's health.

My advice to the medical student who provoked this tirade is that she study aseptic technique as this is practiced in theq operating-room, in the delivery room and in the contagious ward or hospital and follow the principles of asepsis in all laboratory or clinical study or work, just as though she knew she were not immune to any disease. Aside from meticulous asepsis she should keep always at hand a vial of Mild Tincture of Iodine, U.S.P. (not just Tincture of Iodine), and pour or drop, not paint, swab or brush, it on any accidental cut, puncture or abrasion instantly.

Scrambling to make a Will when danger threatens is probably better than not making one at all but the preparation of such an important document should not be left to the confusion of a last minute rush.

Making a Will is something that can easily be attended to before emergencies arise. This duty should not be neglected. The logic and advantages of appointing a Corporate Executor and Trustee are obvious and well recognized.

All that is needed to get the job done, and done well, is to ask us to help you plan your Will, which we shall gladly do without charge. You can then have it drawn in proper legal form, naming The Royal Trust Company your Executor and Trustee, execute the Will and file it with us for safekeeping.

PICTON

Equality of Price For Agriculture Thought Essential

Picton, Dec. 11—"Equality of price—not parity—for agriculture is essential. People of the world must be fed if war is to be prevented and that 75 per cent of the world's population interested directly in agriculture must get their cost of production," declared V. S. Milburn, secretary of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, addressing 300 members of Prince Edward Federation here last night.

"The farmers' greatest problem is to get a correct relation of income as between capitalists, industrialists, labor and agriculture" he declared.

He urged that farmers keep records so that costs of production could be secured. "Every farmer should fill out income tax forms. Proper figures would justify the federation's claim that agriculture is not getting a fair share of the country's income. Barnyard philosophy won't do. It is awfully near right at times, but the trouble is to prove it."

Drop in Standard

"Unless they get a fair cost of production farmers will gradually drop their standard of living," Mr. Milburn declared. He advised farmers to take their sons and daughters in as partners, instead of considering them free hired help. Unless this is done, young people cannot be kept on the farms, he said.

County President Morley Williams reviewed the work of Prince Edward Federation, especially mentioning organization of a Cream Producers' Association, Junior Farmer activities, showing of films and securing army trucks for sale to farmers. He advocated a campaign to have all farmers' names displayed on mail boxes.

County Warden Earl Brummell urged an even greater membership in the federation.

Carson Scott, a director of Radio Farm Forums told of their growth in this district. H. McNish, Belleville sang solos. Misses Betty and Shirley Pickering gave a duet and H. A. Rawlins gave an exhibition of illuminated clubs.

Directors from which officers will be chosen, are Wm. Nightingale, Malcolm Wallbridge, Harmon Montgomery, Ameliasburg; C. Kinnear, J. Taylor, Hillier; D. O. Reynolds, L. Allison, M. Williams, B. R. Baxter, Hallowell; H. Spencer, J. I. Thompson, Sophiasburg; Sam Dodds, M. Brooks, Athol; D. Walker, M. Dulmage, South Marysburg; Brian Dodds, Picton; J. Cleminson, Wellington; Rodney Vader, Bloomfield. Representatives of each commodity group will be named to this list.

J. Mason Elected President Of Kinsmen Club

Picton — Mr. Jesse Mason was elected president of the Kinsmen Club at the annual meeting Monday night He succeeds Dr. K. E. McQueen. Vernon Lockwood was re-elected treasurer and Arthur Hamblin, secretary. Directors chosen were Fred Stafford, Jack Le Heup and Dr. E. D. Fyffe. New members initiated were Ted Folds, R. Hayes, Douglas Strong, Ambrose Gannon, Don Hill, Conger Allison.

Plans were made for a dance and a children's Christmas party.

Unrra to Spend 200 Million Before End of the Year

By CLYDE BLACKBURN

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Dec. 11 (CP).—A race to spend about $200,000,000 before the end of the year today faced U.N.R.R.A., which now is in process of liquidation.

That amount approximately is what remains unspent and since all of it constitutes a part of the final United States' contribution it is subject to the Congressional restriction requiring that it be spent within the year 1946.

The task of winding up the humanitarian world agency was started at a formal council session here yesterday.

Since it will be impossible to obtain in the time remaining the relief goods represented by $200,000,000, even if much of it is bought in Canada and outside countries, an appeal will be made to the United States to permit procurement to continue into 1947.

The problem will largely be left for solution to the general committee on policy and procedure, headed by Canada's L. B. Pearson, Under-Secretary for External Affairs.

General debate on this point, however, is scheduled for a plenary session today when the report of the director general, Fiorello H. La Guardia, is to be discussed.

Canada is understood to have spent all her two annual appropriations of $77,000,000 in contributions, and to have far exceeded that amount in contribution other than those assessed under terms of the U.N.R.R.A. charter.

In this respect Mr. La Guardia yesterday said Canada was always "alert" and "always doing its bit and a big bit more".

Protesting Troops Who Jumped Ship Held in Open Arrest

Liverpool, Dec. 11 — (AP) — One hundred and seventy-five British soldiers who scrambled off a troopship bound for the Far East were held in open arrest today amid press demands for a parliamentary inquiry.

Protesting troops jumped the vessel three times within 24 hours.

The soldiers clambered down landing nets crying "We want justice and better accommodations" just before the troopship, Empress of Scotland, sailed last night, hours late, with the remainder of her 2,300 service personnel aboard.

In London, the Daily Herald, Labor party organ, termed the affair a "very serious matter" and urged further ventilation in parliament of the "general question of accommodation in troopships."

Leaders of Vets' Housing League Fined by Court

Ottawa, Dec. 11 — (CP) — Activities of Ottawa's short-lived squatters movement — The Veterans' Housing League — seemed concluded today with F. E. Hanratty and George Bleakney, its ringleaders, each $200 poorer.

Hanratty, a former R.C.A.F. air observer, and Bleakney, an Ottawa barrister, were convicted yesterday on a joint charge of forcible entry and detaining in connection with seizure last Sept. 24 by house-hungry families of a barracks at H.M.C.S. Carleton, naval reserve station at the southwestern edge of the city.

A 12-man jury deliberated two hours before reaching a verdict and Judge John P. Madden levied on each man the $200 fine.

Hanratty, who organized the league and led its occupation of five buildings in the capital before court action was taken, closed the case from the prisoners dock with a dramatic promise "to shake the dust of this country from my feet forever to seek true democracy elsewhere."

The fiery little 115-pound veteran of 46 sorties overseas expressed amazement that "two men whose interests were the interests of the people at large were being prosecuted by a government who doesn't care what happens to the people." Later, however, he told a reporter he would "probably not" leave Canada.

Bleakney, who was overruled in an attempt to bring into evidence the background of the squatters concerned, quietly expressed "complete sympathy" with Hanratty's sentiments.

FIVE KILLED

Milan, Italy, Dec. 11 — (Reuters) — Five persons were killed and a girl was seriously injured Monday when a volley of shots from a tommy-gun was fired through a window of a hotel in the Alpine town of Vetriolo, it was reported today.

Police are searching for the murderers, believed to be men anxious to avenge the death of an S. S. trooper killed by a member of one of the families during the last days of the war.

REMANDED TO JAIL

Thorold, Dec. 11 — (CP) — Kingsley Mann, held in connection with the armed robbery of Leonard Purdy, Thorold taxi driver, was remanded to jail for a week when he appeared before Magistrate J. B. Hopkins at Niagara Falls today.

Police Chief Dennis Harold of Thorold township yesterday placed Mann in a lineup. Police said Purdy identified him as the man who held him up.

Juvenile Sent To Certified Industrial School

Sharbot Lake, Dec. 11 — (CP) —An 11-year-old Sharbot Lake boy who killed six-year-old Gerald Dusharm and tossed his body into a creek last October yesterday received an indefinite term in a certified industrial school from Magistrate J. L. Lloyd of Northbrook.

Coroner J. C. Whytock of Sharbot Lake testified the Dusharm boy died from a severe skull fracture caused by heavy blows on the head.

Alfred Sorenson, 10, and Norman Wahn, 14, both of Sharbot Lake, told the magistrate the young accused had told them he had "killed a boy" and thrown his body into the creek.

Dr. John Pratten, associated with Kingston General Hospital, described the accused as of borderline mentality, able to distinguish right from wrong but lacking any real sense of social responsibility. The accused's foster mother said he had been uncontrollable, and it might be to his advantage if he were placed under closer supervision than she had been able to exercise over him.

46 Million Eggs Arrive in Britain To Help Shortage

Liverpool, England, Dec. 11 — (CP Cable) — Forty-six million eggs—one for every person in the United Kingdom—were welcomed on their arrival here today with ceremony usually reserved for potentates.

Dr. Edith Summerskill, parliamentary under-secretary for food, and Norman Robertson, Canadian high commissioner to the United Kingdom, were among those who came to Liverpool to meet the freighter Saxon Star from New Westminster, B.C., with what was reported to be an all-time record egg shipment.

Mr. Robertson read messages from Food Minister Gardiner, Trade Minister MacKinnon, Premier Ernest Manning of Alberta and Premier John Hart of British Columbia promising increased egg shipments to bolster the British breakfast ration in 1947.

Mr. Gardiner's message said Canada expects to clear another 2,500,000 dozen eggs before the end of the month with a faster pace later and "we anticipate no difficulty in shipping more than 30,000,000 dozen between now and May."

Mr. MacKinnon's message said he was hopeful that Canada increasingly would become a major and permanent source of foodstuffs for the United Kingdom.

Mr. Hart's message said that British Columbia plans in 1947 "almost to double the 3,500,000 dozen eggs which the province sent to Britain in 1946."

The vessel's egg cargo was about equally divided between Alberta and British Columbia products.

Dr. Summerskill said at the luncheon that she wanted to "thank Canada for what she has done in providing food supplies through the war and to express the hope that she will continue."

BATTLE SHAPING UP

Nanking, Dec. 11 — (AP) — Manchuria's long-awaited battle for Harbin appeared to be shaping up today.

Unconfirmed newspaper reports said eight government divisions opened a three-pronged offensive in the direction of the city and that 10,000 Communist troops crossed the Sungari River from Hsiushuitientze, 80 miles southwest of Harbin, to attack government positions on the south bank. The Sungari generally is the dividing line between government and Communist territory in Manchuria.

Every FATHER

...should answer these questions:

"How much are my savings really WORTH?" The cash value of your savings is not what counts most. What is important is the amount of continuous income they would provide, if your wife and children were left without other means of support. In most cases ordinary savings can't provide enough! That is why you need life insurance . . .

"Is it important WHICH life insurance company I choose?" It is! Life insurance companies are much alike as to policies and rates, but actual long-term results vary widely. We invite you to compare The Mutual Life of Canada's record with that of any other company.

Evidence of the satisfaction of our policyholders is furnished by the fact that whole families and succeeding generations have entrusted their life insurance programs exclusively to The Mutual Life of Canada, and each year approximately 35% of its new business comes from policyholders. Ask your Mutual Life representative to explain the special features of this Company.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Morch wish to announce the engagement of their daughter, Mrs. Doreen Baker, widow of Flight Lieutenant K. C. Baker, to Douglas Chant, formerly Captain in the Governor-General Horse Guards, son of Dr. and Mrs. J. Chant, of Belleville.

Mr. Thos. A. Ashman, 14 Lattimer Street, underwent an operation this morning in the Belleville General Hospital. His friends hope for his speedy recovery.

Mrs. R. B. Sinclair, Napanee, attended the wedding, Saturday, in Forest Hill United Church, Toronto, of her niece, Miss Margaret Curran, B.A., to Chester Dodd Beatty, B.A., son of Professor and Mrs. Samuel Beatty, Toronto.

Mr. Andrew Gray, Jr., 100 West Bridge Street, underwent a serious operation at Western Hospital, Toronto, on Wednesday last. His conditions is much improved.

Miss A. Crouter, spent the weekend with her brother, Mr. Aubrey Crouter in Oshawa, and attended the funeral of Mrs. Rogers, mother of Mrs. Aubrey Crouter.

On Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. J. B. Hanly, 219 Charles Street, entertained eight small friends of her five-year-old daughter, Alice, who was celebrating the fifth anniversary of her natal day. The rooms were festive with Christmas decorations. Entertainment was provided with singing games and floating balloons. In the dining-room, the tea table, centred with an attractive birthday cake was made doubly charming by the addition of candles and Christmas crackers. Dainty refreshments were served with chocolate milk as the accompanying beverage, the children all thoroughly enjoying the party.

REGAL is the best we can do to describe a mink cape seen at the theatre. A sanding collar is worked own into the jacket-like front, which must have an elasticized band to fit it in so snugly. The jacket is rounded off at the bottom to blend with the scalloped hemline of the deep cape.

BIG THREATER SUCESS has been the long, slinky gown of black, brown or dark blue crepe worked all over with matching beading in a soft scroll design. Fitted through the waist; long tight sleeves; and a deep V neckline is the usual formula. We've seen dozens of 'em lately!

MOST EFFECTIVE for smart daytime wear is the simple dark wool dress with a touch of glitter. A simply made one-piece frock is fitted through the waist and has curved hipfolds to accentuate the curved, long torso line. At the upper part of the molded top as a padded dragon motif in multi-colored sequins, gold and copper thread and tiny pearl beads.

SPLENDID with a long skirt, or to spark up a simple black wool suit, is a black crepe blouse with a deep V section—at the high, round neckline—of hand-painted gold vines and grapes accented with green rhinestones. Same details from pointed cuff to elbow on sleeves, and separate self belt circled with matching gold motifs and rhinestones. A blouse production!

NEW IDEA for theater wear is the two-part hat. One model consists of a high pillbox of white ermine worn over a draped snood of white mesh that simply drips ermine tails. When the pillbox is removed, the meshed snood looks ornamental and keeps the hair in order.

TABERNACLE W.M.S. CHRISTMAS PROGRAM

With Mrs. J. Ross, the president, in charge of the Tabernacle W.M.S. met in the ladies' parlor of the Church on Tuesday afternoon for the annual Christmas program. Opening exercises consisted of a well-known hymn "Angels, Shepherds, Sages, Come and Worship Christ, the New-Born King" followed by The Lord's Prayer.

During the business period twelve calls were reported made upon sick and shut-in members, and Mrs. F. B. Jarrell, convener of the nominating committee, presented a slate of officers for the year 1947, which was adopted as the executive for the new year.

The carol "There's a Song in the Air", was followed by the Devotional Service conducted by Miss M. Johns, who used the text "For God So Loved the World", as the call to worship. The Scripture lesson was the Christmas story of the Shepherds as told in the Second Chapter of St. Luke's gospel. In a short but concise paper on the subject "Peace", Miss Johns said in part —"We do not live today as though we truly believe that 'Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people". During the war years we all looked forward to the post-war days of peace; now we wonder where that peace, for which we waited so long, may be In order to find it, individuals comprising the nations must have a change of heart and of living, and so bring back the idea that Christmas Day is a Holy Day, instead of just another holiday". She closed with the poem, "Is My Heart Prepared for Christmas?"

A song "Ring Christmas Bells" was very sweetly sung by little Miss Janice Kiser.

Mrs. F. W. Campbell told a story of "The First Christmas Bell", a legend of "Cashmere", a Jewish lad who travelled with the Shepherds tending sheep on the Judean hills near Bethlehem. Cashmere had no gold, frankincense or myrrh, but he gave his one earthly possession, namely a young lamb with a small bell hung around its neck, to the Baby King lying in a manger. Today, in lands where gifts are presented to that same King, people may still hear the "tinkle, tinkle" of that first Christmas bell.

The carol "Away in a Manger" supposedly written by Martin Luther, introduced a quarter hour of Christmas musical numbers. A piano solo "A Medley of Christmas Airs" played by Mrs. George Wright, and a vocal selection "O Holy Night" rendered by Mrs. H. A. Singer, with Mrs. M. P. Duff as accompanist, were much enjoyed.

Appreciation for the contributions of visiting ladies to a very fine program was expressed, and the meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

Following is the accepted slate of officers for 1947:

Honorary President, Mrs. H. Froats

Past President, Mrs. J. Ross

President, Mrs. A. D. Archibald

1st Vice President, Mrs. W. J. Harrison

IVANHOE MISSION BAND

The December meeting of the Ivanhoe Mission Band was held on Saturday, the members being guests of Ross Twiddy and Clare Hagerman. Several members of the W.M.S. were present and enjoyed the fine Christmas program.

Doris Twiddy had charge and opened the meeting with the singing of "The First Nowell". A business period followed, and the Mission Band Purpose was repeated by the members present.

Wanda Reid read a story, "One Christmas Eve" followed by a poem, "What is Christmas?" The Scripture lesson from St. Luke, 2nd chapter, was read by Doris Twiddy, and prayer was offered. Carol Reid recited, "Christmas Wishes of a Child". Mrs. S. Prest presented the first chapter of the new study book and the offering was collected by Wayne Keeble.

The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction. A bazaar followed with Mrs. G. Wood in charge of the articles offered for sale. Scrap-books which had been made during the year were displayed, the same to be later sent to the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto.

Refreshments were served and a social hour spent.

CHRISTMAS

Oh! let us pause awhile this Christmas-Tide
To hear the angel's tidings once again—
That Christ is born—oh! fling the message wide
In manger rude, in distant Bethlehem.

Oh! let us catch the music of the song
That angels sang that night when all was still—
The song of "Glory to the Lord on High."
"Of Peace on Earth and to all men Good-Will."

Oh! let us tune our hearts that we may know
The strength and beauty of that Love divine,
That sent the Saviour to the earth below—
That in our hearts His spirit e'er may shine
—Helen B. Anderson.

Already the spirit of Christmas is in the air, as seen in the good behaviour of the youngsters expecting Santa Claus, in the secret stowing away of mysterious parcels, in the fragrant odor of delicious viands in the kitchen, and also in the practising for the Christmas school concert. Miss Marion Mikel, Melville's capable teacher, is busy preparing for the annual concert which will be held in the school room on the evening of Tuesday Dec. 17.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Gamble spent Saturday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Weir, Bowerman's.

Mrs. W. H. Anderson returned home on Thursday after spending a few weeks in Gilead.

Hillier friends extend congratulations to Mr. Lancelot Nethery, Picton, on his being appointed as Mayor of Picton.

Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Anderson, Belleville, were tea-hour guests of Mrs. James Morton on Thursday.

Melville Ladies' Aid

The December meeting of Melville Ladies' Aid was held at the home of Mrs. Ross Cruickshank on Thursday afternoon, with the president Mrs. J. Root in the chair and Mrs. Arthur Kinnear, pianist. The devotional period consisted of singing Christmas hymns, and the reading of the Christmas story according to St. Luke, by the president. The election of officers resulted in the appointment of Mrs. Arthur Kinnear as president, replacing Mrs. J. Root, who resigned after completing a successful term of four years.

An interesting feature of the meeting was the exchange of Christmas gifts. The January meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Albert Carley, when refreshments will be served, Mrs. Kent and Mrs. Anderson acting as committee.

Northport

Northport — The Northport young people held their weekly meeting in the Ladies' Aid hall on Tuesday evening with a good attendance. Meeting opened with a hymn and prayer by Rev. I. Cavender. Following a business session, the president read the scripture lesson. a reading by H. Mowbray was followed by Mr. Cavender giving interesting talk on "The Might of Small Things." Meeting closed with the Lord's prayer in unison, after which all enjoyed an hour of games and recreation. Refreshments were served.

Mr. Fred Kotchepaw and son Colin, Mr. Walter Norton and sons Jack and Howard are spending a few days in Toronto and attended the Ice Capades and hockey match at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Simpson attended the anniversary services in Picton and were dinner guests of Mrs. Barber and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Mallett, Helene and Elaine, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Norton were supper guests on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Claude Preston.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Kleinsteuber, and daughter Lois, visited Mrs. J. Sanderson and Mr. Morley Sanderson on Sunday.

Mrs. Barber, Picton, spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. R. Simpson.

Mrs. Mowbray and daughter Lois, Cherry Valley Road, visited Mrs. Claude Preston and Mr. Preston the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ken Neeham accompanied by Mrs. H. Mallett and Helene attended the show Henry V in Belleville on Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Crothers have sold their farm and are leaving this community in the near future. They are life-long residents and will be greatly missed by all.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Denyer, Belleville, spent the weekend with Mrs. Denyer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Baldwin.

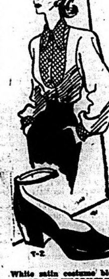
Mr. Alton Rowe is recovering satisfactorily in Prince Edward County hospital after his recent operation. His sister, Mrs. Olive Walmsley of Napanee, is caring for his aged mother during his absence.

Mrs. John Foster, Solmesville, has returned home after spending some time with Mrs. C. Lambert. While here she called on several old friends.

Mr. W. Creeper left on Saturday night for Ottawa, after receiving the message his son-in-law Mr. Arnold had been injured in an accident. No details were given.

Mrs. Martin Foster Sr., spent Saturday afternoon with Mrs. J. Sanderson.

Rev. and Mrs. Cavender, Mrs. R. Ives, Jimmie and little Elaine Mallett attended a supper and bazaar in the community hall at Bethesda, Friday evening.



White satin costume blouse.

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

Quilted detail has marked many of the high-bracket, custom-made blouses for the last few seasons and now we have this ornamentation on over-the-counter models. White rayon satin is the fabric chosen for this handsome costume blouse made with elongated front, collar and cuffs all worked with quilt stitching. Shown here, with a black velvet skirt that is self belted, the two add up to a smart costume. A nice accompaniment to the foregoing might be the new ankle-strap, low-heeled slipper which does double duty for dress or informal daytime wear.

Foxboro

Foxboro — Congratulations are extended to Mr. Horace Palmer, winner of the grand championship prize awarded by the T. ...wer Failure ...Toronto Lasts ...20 Minutes

...ronto, Dec. 11 — (CP)—Big ...power failure in the city's ...y Tuesday paralyzed To... ...e and district industry from ...n 26 minutes.

...e suggestion by a hydro ...e was that the breakdown was due to a short circuit caused by dense fog. Another unofficial source considered the cause might be an overload on facilities.

At the head office of the Hydro Commission one official said: "We are still investigating the reason for the power failure."

All over Toronto lights suddenly went out at 11:01 a.m. E.S.T. and east Toronto and all municipalities from Hamilton on the west, to Oshawa on the east into an electrical blackout. Heavy fog hanging over the Toronto area at the time added to the poor visibility.

Street cars came to a halt on Toronto streets. Elevators in buildings stopped running. Newspaper presses stopped and in the head office of The Canadian Press the news wires fell silent.

Power was recovered at 11:27 a.m. in the downtown area.

The power failure came before the Toronto Evening newspapers started the press-run of their noon editions although page make-up which is done by hand was virtually completed. By ignoring idle linotype machines and using hand-set type, the Daily Star was able to get into its edition a 45-word item under a 3-line heading, "Worst power failure ever ties up city."

The Telegram, on the street slightly later, carried a story in regular type.

BOY SCOUT INVESTITURE

Marmora (Special) — Deloro Hall was almost filled to capacity on Friday evening for an entertainment by Deloro Boy Scouts and their investiture. Opening with "O Canada" the program went from a talk on "Scouting" by Rev. A. Poulter, Madoc Scoutmaster to a song by the troop "McNamara's Band" and then to several three-round boxing bouts under direction of Rev. E. M. Cadigan.

Matched in the bouts were:— Harry Brooks vs Troy Corrigan, Robert Borland vs John Brownlie, Blair Whittemore vs Tom Wiley, Bert Gray vs Robert Sanderson, William Bonter vs Robert Sweet, Allan Mumby vs Geo. Mantle, William Brown vs Tom Brooks.

An exhibition of elementary first aid came next. Wayne Brown, Sydney Brooks and Tom Brooks took part in this with George Mantle and Charles Clemens taking the role of patients.

The awkward squad in charge of Syd Brooks then demonstrated "How Not To Do It".

This was followed by a skit "Rule Brittania" in which John Brownlie, Tom Brooks and Robert Borland took part.

The Cubs then executed the "Dance of Kaa, the Python", at the conclusion of which they gave their howl.

After the troop had rendered some songs, their investiture took place. This was carried out by Scoutmaster Rev. A. Poulter, assisted by Assistant Scoutmaster Stanley Hawthorne and Patrol Leaders Burris, Hatch and Spry, all of Madoc. Those sworn in were:

Troop Leader—Syd Brooks;

Patrol Leaders—Wayne Brown and John Brownlie;

Scouts—Tom Brooks, William Brown, Allan Mumby, Geo. Mantle, Robert Sweet, Ivan Lavender, James Dikun, Clayton Barnett, Charles Clemens, Paul Lumsden, Albert Gray, Robert Sanderson and William Bonter.

During the ceremony the Scout laws and promise were recited by Tom Brooks.

The closing song, "Onward, Boy Scouts, Onward" was followed by a dancing party for those who wished to stay.

New Soapless VEL Helps Save Nylons

Says Frances Thompson noted homemaking authority

Unless you're unique, you are just like the rest of us whose stock of lingerie is at an all-time low. This means more frequent, more careful washing of girdles, panties, slips and stockings. So along comes VEL to the rescue.

VEL is not a soap and does not act like a soap. It's a wonderfully gentle new cleansing agent which is safe for the most delicate garments : : : yes, even for precious nylons.

HOW TO USE VEL

Here's what you do : : : sprinkle a little VEL into a basin and pour on lukewarm water. Never rub or wring fine lingerie—just squeeze repeatedly. VEL dissolves instantly making light, foamy suds. As you wash through your undies one after the other you'll find the suds subside, but don't add any more VEL. Unlike the milky-white appearance of soap and water, VEL leaves the water as clear as soft water in a rain barrel. This clear water literally lifts out the dirt, which you'll see (with alarm!) at the bottom of the basin.

NO SOAPY FILM

VEL guards and brightens colours and makes clothes smell sweet and fresh. Also, at long last we've found something which leaves no soapy film even on black underwear. Stockings stay sheerer looking, and all your fine things feel softer, untarnished by "soap scum dinginess". Here's to soapless VEL!

Race Commission May be Formed In British Columbia

Victoria, Dec. 11 —(CP)— A bill for establishment of a racing commission with wide powers governing horse racing in British Columbia may be introduced at the next session of the legislature it was learned in informed circles today.

The prediction came following a dispute between the Oak Bay municipal council, which indicated it intends to enforce a by-law not to permit more than one week's continuous racing, and Sam Randall, Vancouver racing mogul who recently purchased Willows Track in Oak Bay for $125,000.

Mr. Randall said if the council refused to allow more than a week's continuous racing, horse owners would not come to Victoria for that length of time.

He added he would consider subdividing the 65-acre Willows Track for lots and eliminating the track.

Racing interests recently proposed to the cabinet that the government take over jurisdiction of racing, divorcing meets from municipal jurisdiction, but it was reported the government demurred.

Informed sources said it now is probable that legislation for a racing commission will be introduced by a private member at the next session. The commission probably would have power to supersede municipal councils in the matter of duration of meets and thus could allow the Willows meeting for 14 days or longer, as in previous years.

The provincial government stands to lose $100,000 in parimutuel and gate tax receipts if annual race meets at the Willows are cancelled.

'THE BIG TRAIN,' WALTER JOHNSON DIES IN CAPITAL

Had Tumor of Brain Which Doctors Dared Not Try to Relieve by Surgery

Washington, Dec. 11 — (AP)— Two generations of baseball fans were saddened today by the passing of Walter Johnson, the fireball thrower who virtually rewrote pitching's record book during his 21 years with Washington Senators. He was 59.

"The Big Train," a member of baseball's official Hall of Fame, died in hospital last night from a brain tumor which doctors dared not try to relieve by surgery.

Clark Griffith, 76-year-old president of the Senators, summed it up for the lanky Johnson's admirers:

"He was the greatest pitcher of all time."

Johnson, whose boyhood was spent on a farm near Humboldt, Kas., came to the Senators in 1907 Playing with a team which was labelled "first in peace, first in war and last in the American League," the 200-pounder with the bugg-whip right arm won 413 games and lost 280.

He struck out 3,497 batters, pitched 803 games, chalked up 113 shutouts, turned in one stretch of 56 scoreless innings, fanned 6 hitters in a row, struck out more than 200 men in seven consecutive seasons.

On July 1, 1920, he pitched a no-hitter against Boston. The next day he had a sore arm for the first and only time in his career.

The best season he ever had was 1913. That year he won 36 while losing only seven and compiled an amazing earned-run average of 1.14.

Johnson left the Senators after the 1927 season to pilot Newark in the International League. He returned to the capital as manager of the Senators in 1929-1932 and ended his baseball days as manager of the Cleveland Indians in 1933-1935.

BUFFALO BISONS IN CELLAR SPOT

(By The Canadian Press)

St. Louis Flyers got lonely in the cellar of the Western Division of the American Hockey League, so they gained a point and pulled Buffalo Bisons into the cellar with them.

Harvey Fraser came up with a tally mid-way through the final period in St. Louis' contest with the visiting New Haven Ramblers last night to give the Flyers a 4-4 tie and the point they needed to overtake the fourth place Bisons in the Western Division.

Fraser got the Flyers off to a good start by scoring the only tally in the first period. But the Ramblers, runners up in the Eastern Division, came back in the second to gain a 3-1 edge on counts by Norm Burns, Lin Bend and Allan Kuntz.

Pat McCreavy and Eddie Olson evened things up for St. Louis in the third but a count Ott Heller sent the Ramblers ahead 4-3 until Fraser's last tally made the tie final.

Advocates Government Control Mineral Resources In British Colonies

London, Dec. 11 — (Reuters)— Government control of mineral resources in British colonies today was advocated in a pamphlet issued by the Colonial Office.

Government control, the pamphlet said, would prevent private owners reaping rewards resulting from government expenditures to develop the resources. It also would be more likely to benefit the local community and it would prevent exploitation of the resources.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

With a background of hockey experience and a newcomer to the city, Doug Wallans, manager of Belleville's newest industry the Lecithin Company, has been appointed coach of the Belleville Junior hockey team, officials of the Association announced today.

Doug. is a personable young man and should prove very popular with not only his hockey proteges but with all with whom he comes in contact. He is young, has plenty of pep and enthusiasm plus a forceful manner that should stand him in good stead in his new sports job.

He played with an outstanding Ottawa squad for 4 years, and a similar period of seasons with the Ontario Agricultural College team. Later he played for the Tip Top sextette and won himself an enviable reputation. He is a welcome addition to hockey circles of the city and to sports in general.

There will be plenty of incentive for junior "B" and "C" youngsters to go all-out for the Alma Mamma squads this year. The O.H.A. will entertain the most valuable player named by his mates from junior aggregation at the latter part of the season and the youngsters will play in an East-West double-header in Maple Leaf Gardens during the play-off season.

The kids will be given special uniforms, railway fare, and $12 a day expense dinero. They will be under the keen scrutiny of big-league scouts and the cream of the crop will likely hear about their exploits.

Incidentally, Manager Frank Butler, of the Belleville Intermediates said today that the proposed practice for Thursday night at the Kingston Arena has been called off. Something unforeseen happened and the budding hockeyists will have to champ on the bits for a day or so at least.

Interest has been gradually mounting in that swell boxing card being held in the Mountain View sports hangar tonight at eight o'clock. Buses leave the Front-Bridge Street intersection at 7.30 for the accommodation of city fans and it is expected a large crowd will trek to the station.

Don Mogard, pride of the Diamond Athletic Club, Toronto heavyweight stable will headline the card against Keith Prosser, highly rated slugger from London, Ontario. Seven other bouts comprise the best card ever shown in this district while an added attraction will be the Dominion weight-lifting champions under Stan McBride of Peterborough. It will be an outstanding show and if you like leather-pushing at its best, don't miss it.

It is more than likely that the Belleville Softball Association will hold its annual get-together here sometime next week, according to a reliable source. This is somewhat earlier than usual but it is felt that with the sprouts of interests starting to bud organization should take place and have the ruddy thing over with.

The annual slate of officers will be elected and the meeting will be thrown wide open, to players, officials, referees and fans in general. Also delegates to the annual OABA convention slated for the Easter weekend will likely be appointed.

Underground rumblings anent the mushball pastime have it that some new teams will face the barrier come post time. Rex Young tells us the "Flashes" will be definitely back again while the rumor persists of a strong Canadian National Railways aggregation lining up. Our Pt. Anne scout informs us that there is a strong possibility of the Ox Pointers witching their affections to baseball next year, and putting their heretofore popular summer softball pastime on the shelf for the nonce.

With the RCAF permanent force moving in to the district air stations, prospects look more than bright for two strong teams from these points. Recreation is one of the strong points of the service being emphasized in the new set-up.

"Keep your shots low" is one of the first rules to observe in hockey if you want to score goals in the opinion of Coach Lynn Patrick of the New Haven Ramblers of the American Hockey League. Patrick led the N.H.L. in goals with 32 when with the New York Rangers in 1941-42.

"A goaltender has to rely on his stick or foot to clear an ankle-high shot and is at a disadvantage. He can use either hand or take the puck on his chest if it is a high one," Lynn points out.

In the opinion of most sharp-shooters the surest spot to place a shot is about five inches off the ice, just inside the post. It should be on the right side if the goalie carries his stick to the left, and on the left side if he shoots from the right. Of course as a goaltender is sprawled on the ice you fire it over him. It is this ability to place their shots and vary the style of attack which marks hockey's ace snipers.

On the theory that better pay will attract better umpires, the Border League has boosted the salaries of the men in blue from $200 to $300 a month for 1947. The Class C loop stipulates that the new arbiters must have at least one year of experience in that classification, or two years in Class D, or the equivalent. Of the six who started with the league in 1946, only three, Steve Malcovic, Jim Swan and Leo Fournier remained throughout the season.

125 Nominated For Running Of $100,000 Stake

Los Angeles, Dec. 11 (AP)—The Los Angeles Turf Club announced today that 125 horses have been nominated for the 10th running of the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap March 1.

Fast and Fair and Radiotherapy, top British stars, are scheduled to make the 1 1-4-mile run against the greatest number of stakes winners ever entered in a major turf event in the history of world racing.

Busher, the world's leading money-winning filly with 17 stakes victories in 1944 and 1945, was nominated by movie man L. B. Mayer.

Armed, winner of $288,725; Assault, with $424,195; Honeymoon, $193,705; Fred Astaire's Triplicate, $142,280, and Miss Ethel Hill's War Knight, $108,220, including the Santa Anita Handicap last year, are among the top money winners scheduled to go.

WILL AUTHORIZE SIGNING OF PEACE TREATY IN N.E.I.

The Hague, Dec. 11 (Reuters)— The Netherlands Government announced that it would authorize the signing of the Dutch-Indonesian agreement to bring peace to the Dutch East Indies, scene of bitter fighting during the last year.

A Netherlands Commission - General was set up to deal with the Indonesian problem and treat with representatives of the Indonesian Republic.

Lord Killearn, British Special Commissioner in southeast Asia, presided over recent successful negotiations between Dutch and Indonesians in Batavia.

Winnipeg, Dec. 11 (CP)—Now that the Canadian football final is history, work is just beginning for those football club officials who feel they must rebuild their squads next year if Toronto Argonauts, Dominion champions for the last two seasons, are to be dethroned.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers executive, following Bombers 28-6 defeat by Argos in the east-west classic, said they have ample work to do this winter and next spring in an effort to build a team of championship calibre, despite probable 1946 financial losses. Fans here believe that a great deal of money will have to be laid out to obtain players to replace those who decide to call it quits.

Sports editor Tony Allan of the Winnipeg Tribune said in a recent column that the west's take of the gate receipts would be in the neighborhood of $6,000. Pre-western conference agreements called for a 50-30-21 split of the take for the three western clubs — Bombers, Calgary Stampeders and Saskatchewan Roughriders.

By winning the western title, Bombers would receive 50 per cent of the supposed $6,000 or $3,000, Stampeders, 30 per cent or $1,800 and the third-place Roughriders, 20 per cent or $1,200. Bombers would receive approximately another $2,200 for expenses, making their total $5,200, but travelling eastward cost the club about $4,000, which leaves them a $1,200 net gain.

Since coach Jack West and his bombers are reported to have been promised a bonus if they reached the Canadian finals, the bonus presumably would come from the $1,200—and this may not be enough to go around with the result the club may be digging down.

This lack of financial gain has not worried Bomber officials, who said they are already laying plans for next season's team. President Art Chipman said he believes the import rule allows them to bring in five new imports next year and if so, the club will do it. He said with a grin, "I see that Doc Blanchard and Junior Davis, West Point football greats, have completed their schooling."

FORMER OWNER N.Y. AMERICANS DIES SUDDENLY

Big Bill Dwyer Brought Bigtime Hockey to Great White Way

By AL COLLETTI
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 11 —(CP)— William V. Dwyer, 64, the Big Bill whose love of sports was primarily responsible for bringing professional hockey to New York more than two decades ago, died yesterday at his Long Island home. He suffered a heart attack last Saturday.

Dwyer sold the late Tex Rickard, boss of Madison Square Garden, the idea of bringing the old Hamilton Tigers to New York.

In 1925 the Dwyer-backed New York Americans became the first National Hockey League team to play in the Garden. And Rickard, at first opposed to hockey in New York, soon changed his mind as the pastime clicked almost from the start.

Dwyer's connection with the bootlegging industry and his reported links with the underworld brought his name into the headlines time and again, much to his dislike.

An international rum-running ring with a fleet of 20 boats was said to have been broken when 60 men, including Dwyer, were arrested. Held on $40,000 bail, Dwyer pleaded innocent but was sentenced to serve two years and fined $10,000. He was paroled because of ill health after serving 13 months.

After the N. H. L. took over the Americans' franchise in October, 1936, because of heavy indebtedness to the league, the board of governors reinstated the team under a new set-up, elected Dwyer a director and appointed him a governor. It was then that Mervyn (Red) Dutton took over management of the club.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Your bridge partner is no clairvoyant. Nor can he see through the backs of your cards. All he knows about your hand is what you tell him. This you must do with bids.

Sit yourself in the north seat with this hand:

♦ K 7 6 4 2
♣ K J

Partner in the south seat opened with a bid of one club. Your first response was one diamond. Partner then bid one heart. Look at your hand again. What else would you like to tell him?

Bids follow the order in T-A-N takeout, assist, no-trump. You have already told him you have a biddable diamond suit. Your next bid is spades, a takeout to show him your other biddable suit.

With equal length suits, you would first have shown your suit of higher rank. With different length suits, the longer should be mentioned first. Bidding spades now will show your diamonds longer.

So much for the length of your suits. But will your takeout now be a simple bid of one spade or a jump to two spades? A jump shows tricks enough to help make a game.

An opener shows five tricks. You have seven. You are thus able to see 12 tricks in your pair. These are more than enough for a game. Consequently, you jump to two spades to say you see a game.

Hold everything. You did not pick up any new tricks since the first round of bidding. They did not grow while you were awaiting partner's second bid. Why did you not jump on the first round?

The answer is found in the rule: An immediate one-jump response promises two sure tricks among tricks enough for game. Your hand does not contain the two sure tricks promised by an immediate jump.

Your two spade jump is a game-forcing signal. Partner must help keep the bidding alive until your pair reaches a game in something.

If he passes, pull your rusty knife and reach for his throat.

The Movie Column

Paulette Goddard will star in the latest of the bad girl-heroine roles currently so popular with the film studios. Britain's Margaret Lockwood had her innings in "The Wicked Lady" and "Bedelia," Olivia de Havilland had hers in "The Dark Mirror," and Miss Goddard will continue the theme in "Angel Face," in which she will play a ruthless, ambitious career woman with the appearance of an innocent girl.

"That Brennan Girl," starring June Duprez in the title role of a girl "who learned about love before she learned about life," according to the blurbs, has just been released to keep the customers satisfied till the bigger-name material gets to the screen.

James Mason, the glowering British star, has been in New York almost two weeks and American agents for "The Wicked Lady," his newest picture to be released in the United States, are having hysterics over his reluctance to grant interviews.

For the record, Mr. Mason was accompanied by his wife, the actress Pamela Kellino, five cats, 32 pieces of luggage, a beige, right-hand drive ambulance (purpose unknown) and an American friend, John Monahan, who also doubles as press agent.

Mr. Mason is tall, dark and rarely glowers off the screen. He favors rather untidy clothes in unusual combinations: tweeds, saddle shoes and flowing tie. He is 37.

Since one of his best pictures, "Fanny by Gaslight," has not yet been released in the United States, as its agents prefer to wait until he has reached greater popularity to spring it on American audiences, it is probable that it will be re-issued in Canada when it is issued South of the Border.

Three-game Card Tonight Could be Billed as Night Of Comeback for Some Teams

Johnny Mowers to Replace Lumley in Nets for Detroit Red Wings

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

These hints of secret scoring weapons and controversies over whether a player should be plucked from his native heath before the tender age of 20 left it squarely up to the National Hockey League clubs today to show they play as good a game as they talk.

The latest darts in the word battles — which always seem to pop up during schedule layoffs — again carried the teams over the Sunday-to-Wednesday hump but tonight all six will be on their own again before action-demanding crowds.

The three-game card could be billed as a night of comeback attempts.

For Johnny Mowers at New York, it will be the second attempt this season to win back a regular berth in the Detroit Red Wings' nets. At Toronto, Montreal Canadiens meet the young Maple Leafs who dislodged them from the league lead for most of the season and the champions can recapture first place with a victory.

The sinking Chicago Black Hawks, bolstered by a couple of player deals, get a chance to show they still belong in the league in the third game when they meet the third-place Bruins at Boston.

Could Cause Changes

With Boston, New York and Detroit bunched within a one-point margin behind the leading Leafs and Canadiens, results of the three games could cause several changes in the standings.

The "protection for juniors" plan advanced by manager Frank Selke of Montreal Canadiens will play no part in tonight's games but it's a cinch that the front offices will at least be mulling it over.

The plan, which would forbid transfer of junior players from one province to another or to the N.H.L., drew criticism from most of the N.H.L. chiefs yesterday as being "dictatorial." N. H. L. president Clarence Campbell reserved comment but indicated it would be brought up at the next league meeting.

The Canadiens will meet Toronto without their punch line centre, Elmer Lach, who was disclosed yesterday to have a broken cheekbone that will sideline him for perhaps two weeks. Leafs will still be without Bob Goldham, a defenceman with a fractured arm, and winger Howie Meeker.

The Hawks will pin their hopes for a reversal of form against Bruins on two new players — Adam Brown from Detroit, for whom they traded Pete Horeck, and Tom Fowler, obtained thru Kansas City.

Edmonton Team Likely to Make Trip to Europe

(By The Canadian Press)

The frantic search by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association for a team to represent Canada at the European hockey championships at Prague in February, appears to have ended. Yesterday at Midland George Dudley, Secretary of the Association, said he had invited Edmonton Canadian, western junior finalists last season, to make the trip. Later at Edmonton, Ken Henry, Canadians' manager said the club "will probably accept" the invitation, provided permission is obtained from league officials and other details are worked out.

Other teams which were invited but refused the honor were Calgary Stampeders and Winnipeg Monarchs, Canadian senior and junior champions respectively; Hamilton Tigers and Toronto St. Michael's Majors.

During a city-wide power failure at Toronto yesterday, Montreal Canadiens, practising at Maple Leaf Gardens for a game tonight with the Leafs, were left in the dark, which prompted railbird Conny Smythe, Leafs' manager, to suggest Murph Chamberlain, an ex-Leaf and other Habitant players had been in the dark for some time. Chamberlain countered with the retort he had "seen the light" when he left Toronto.

Ralph (Cooney) Welland, who used to star with Dit Clapper and Dutch Gainor on the old Bruin "dynamite trio" has been signed as a Boston Bruins scout.

Before an audience of 9,000 at London's Wembley Stadium yesterday, 22-year-old Daphne Walker won the British Women's Figure Skating Championship for the first time.

Following a knockout he received Monday night at Nottingham, Eng., at the hands of French flyweight champion Emile Famechon, Alex Murphy of Glasgow, died yesterday without regaining consciousness. He suffered internal injuries.

New York Yankees last night announced signing of outfielder Joe Medwick, former National League batting champion as a pinch hitter.

CHAPTER 19.

"Yes. American-born. And how they work, those musical Jewish boys!" Jennifer said. "Monty was telling me. Stan Lichtenstein — his name really is Stanley, but he calls himself Stanislaus for professional purposes—Monty says he used to practice about eight hours out of the twenty-four, when he was only about seventeen, too. Three hours in the morning, three in the afternoon, two at night. And living on sausage and French bread and red wine. He and his older brother were in Paris; neither of them had any money, and look at them both now. His brother is the conductor of a symphony orchestra that goes on the air every Thursday night, and the younger one makes thousands!"

"But Monty never hit it," Betty said with a shrewd look. "If he had, I wonder if you'd have been in love with him?"

Jennifer laughed, unembarrassed. "Never," she said calmly.

"You don't know." Betty persisted. "I'll bet he likes you."

"I'll bet it never entered his head to think of me that way." Jennifer was dressed now; she caught up a coat. "I'll bet I never marry anyone, Betty," she said.

"On account of the Evans boy."

"No, not Eugene."

"Sidney Borrows then. I always hated him!"

"I don't know." The cadences of Jennifer's young voice were unutterably weary. "I just don't seem able to get very excited about men. Of course I don't see very many," she said.

Crossing the roofs a few minutes later, she stopped to look at the stars. The black winter heavens were spangled and glittering; the loop of the Milky Way seemed to arch close overhead. There was no moon; the fresh, sweet, cold air rushed gratefully into her lungs, cooled her face after the closeness and odors of the flat.

"It's too beautiful to go in anywhere," she said aloud. And for a moment she considreed going back to lure Betty out for a breath of the throbbing, icy beauty of the night. But Betty was expecting Seely and two other friends for a bridge game; Jennifer's interruption would only disturb her. She went on across the roofs, jumped down over the little parapet to the terrace, and slipped into the studio, noiselessly closing the french window behind her, and sinking down on a cushion on the floor beside Julie Carteret's chair.

The big room was but dimly lighted; fifteen, or twenty persons were relaxed comfortably in the chairs or sunk deep into the couches that went all around the walls, and at the piano were three men. One, seated on the piano bench, was squared about to face the others. Monty was standing beside a tall, dark, eyeglassed man with a thin face crowned by plumes of rich dark hair; this last was holding a violin close to his ear, his hands high in the air, tuning it to the key of A, plucking its strings as the seated man negligently struck the piano keys.

There was complete silence in the room except for the sound of the two instruments. Jennifer sensed the general expectancy. Nobody greeted her in words; she had a smile or two from faces here and there, and Julie dropped her fingers lightly to rest on Jennifer's head. Then suddenly Monty went to take a seat, the pianist turned back to face the keys, and Lichtenstein straightened up and lifted the violin to his shoulder.

Jennifer had never heard a violinist before except on the radio; she was no judge of the performance. She watched the supple, strained fingers and the whipping bow dreamily, conscious that the whole scene was rare and dramatic and beautiful: the glowing stove and the soft pools of light made by the lamps; the colors of the women's dresses and their slim crossed ankles; the angles of frames and easels under the high black skylight; and the shadows everywhere, the lurking warm shadows that softened everything, dimmed away the ugliness and disorder of daytime light. Above and under and through it all sang the miracle of the violin.

Afterward, when she was presented to Stanislaus Lichtenstein, she said nothing of his art; it would have seemed an impertinence. A recurrence of old shyness came over her as he took her hand and stooped to smile down at her. But later again, helping to serve olives and cheese and sausages and pretzels, she was quite herself, and when some woman said rapturously to the musician that he was only too good, too generous, to have given them such a treat Jennifer said quickly, "Oh, no. I don't think that!"

"Why, don't you think I am generous?" demanded the violinist blankly, his eyes amused.

Jennifer raised her own serious blue eyes.

"Well, no. If I—if anyone—can do that....." she stammered in reply. "I mean, it would be so wonderful to stand there with all of us listening.....to give it to us.."

"Yes, you are quite right!" he cut in decidedly. He turned away, and Jennifer went on with her tray of coffee cups. It was some time later that she found him beside her on one of the big low couches. Six persons were in a row on the couch, heads dropped back luxuriously against pillows, legs comfortably stretched at length along the floor. Most of them held glasses and were smoking; the room was crossed and recrossed by guazy layers of blue smoke now; the top of the piano had been closed, and a big gentle English girl was singing ballads to her own accompaniment.

"'My true love has my heart, and I—and I have his,'" sang Polly Upton. Jennifer felt firm, hard, big fingers close upon her hand, which had been lying idle at her side; she half turned in the dimness to send a friendly smile into Stanislaus Lichtenstein's eyes. For a long time the music, idle talk, desultory laughter went on about them; she was conscious of only one thing: the soft grip of the man's hand on her own.

But then that was not an entirely unexpected thing in the studio. Some of the other couples in the room were in even more affectionate positions. Jennifer saw the tousled head of a pretty girl newspaper reporter relaxed on Gerry Barker's shoulder; Trix Challoner's arms were interlocked with those of Vernon Walecki, the big Polish sculptor; every little while he bent sideways lazily to kiss the top of her head. Filomena O'Farrell had more than once proposed kissing games and was now seated in her husband's lap, wistfully watching the company in the hope of exciting developments, her soft gold hair in a film over her eyes, her arms locked about big Jim's neck.

Diana Carrollton, whose own name of May Olighetti had been changed by the science of numbers, was reciting original poetry. She had been held down by request to two short compositions; she had somewhat sulkily agreed to be brief.

"..nay, tortured, stolen, desperate, this,
Adulterous, is still bliss!
We, in the shadow, cheated,
We, not defeated,
Kiss!"

said Diana, ending on a thick note with a rush of tears.

"Tripe!" said a man's voice, not unkindly.

"What do you think of it?" someone demanded of Jennifer.

"That Swinburne would have liked Diana," said Jennifer, looking at Monty.

"Swinburne! But, angel baby," breathed Diana, landing with a swoop on her knees at Jennifer's feet and perhaps not entirely unconscious that the man next to Jennifer was the lion of the moment, "let's not quote Swinburne! Such accurate rhyming, Jinny. Everything I hate!"

"But you might have influenced him, Diana," Jennifer answered innocently. There was a generous laugh, and to Jennifer's relief the conversation was carried on by other voices. She had a moment of shame when fussy little Miss Pettigrew said admiringly to her later something about being pleased to know that present-day girls read Swinburne. Jennifer's impulse was to say that she never had read a word of his. But the little portrait painter, fluttered away immediately, being drawn irresistibly toward Lichtenstein and trying to muster up enough courage to tell him, if given any chance at all, that she would love to sketch his head in pastels.

The next evening, when she got home from work, Jennifer found a letter awaiting her. It was written on stiff white hotel paper in a strong square hand. It was from Stanislaus Lichtenstein.

My dear Jennifer,

You can hardly be unaware of the violent emotion with which I parted from you last night, and saw you go away over the roofs with Monty. It was an emotion at once so pure and so exquisite that, supposing me never to see you again, I should still feel that you had made me a gift of inestimable value. A lily of the valley found in a green opening in spring woods, a white young gull dipping her snowy wings in blue water! These are some of the impressions that you gave me, and that, with a thousand more, are brimming in my heart as I write.

This is not a love letter. I am a married man nearing forty, with sons of eight and twelve. These boys live with their mother in Pennsylvania. Neither my wife nor I have ever desired a divorce, although we parted some years ago. No, as a man old enough to be your father, I am asking you for your confidence, asking you to let me play for you whenever you will—asking you to be my special little friend, guide, and child in one. Do not think these the ravings of a madman but, as you are charitable, telephone me at the hotel. And by the way I have a box for you and any of your friends you care to invite for Thursday night.

Yours in misery and hope,
Stanislaus Lichtenstein.

Jennifer read it bewilderedly, went on with the warmed-over stew and bakery corn muffins, read it again. Presently in the kitchen, when the small girls had gone around the corner to a movie she showed it to Betty.

"What do you know," Betty murmured, taking the paper to read it herself. "That's the fellow whose picture is on all the billboards? For heaven's sake!"

"How would you answer it, Betty?"

"Well, now, I'll tell you," Betty said warily after a moment's reflection. "I don't know that I'd answer it at all. It doesn't look any too good to me. That wife, you know, she's a great protection to a man like that. F'r all you know he writes letters like that to lots of girls."

"Oh, I don't believe he does!" Jennifer protested, her pride touched.

"Yes, but you don't know, Jen. That's just the way it is— a girl doesn't know," Betty said, feeling various dish towels on the rack to find the driest one. "I've tried different times to sort to warn you about men," she went on, "but somehow you never can get it over to a girl. It's just your luck that you've grown up as straight as you are; I don't take any credit for it. I guess you're just naturally an innocent sort of little thing, but I've often thought you ought to know more than you do. You might have got into trouble with that Borrows boy or Eugene Evans. Certainly you're old enough now to realize things — some of the girls at Vogelsang's sound as if they knew something —and so you might as well know that this confidence stuff, this old-enough-to-be - your - father stuff, doesn't go down very well with me. I don't trust married men who talk that way."

"No, I suppose not," Jennifer said when Betty stopped, somewhat out of breath. Jennifer's face was scarlet; she presently asked Betty if it might not be a good idea to show the letter to Monty, and later in the evening, having freshened her face and brushed her hair, she went over to the studio.

Monty was alone, painting away absorbedly. But he nodded to her with an absent-minded half smile as she came in and presently laid down his palette, stuck his brushes upside down into an old blue jug with a broken handle, and came across to the stove to take the chair opposite her.

"I thought you might be over, Jimmy, to tell me how you liked the music last night," he said, feeling in his pocket for pipe and tobacco.

"It was wonderful. And didn't Julie look lovely!"

"It's a trick she has. Well, you made a great hit with Stan, Jinny. He stayed on here after the others, asked me a lot of questions about you. He was immensely struck by your erudition," Monty said, ending with an oblique glance from half-smiling eyes.

"Erudition?"

"Culture."

"Why, but I hardly said anything last night. And when anyone says anything like that," Jennifer confessed, "it makes me so ashamed! I don't know things; I just quote what you've written down."

"No, you do better than that. You apply things; you use them appropriately. That suggestion for naming the Bushes' Tahoe place, for instance. You said, 'Why not Bouche Bee?'"

"Ah, that was luck. And I'd no sooner said it than I thought perhaps Mrs. Bush would think it was fresh. What you wrote in my book was 'bouche bee', and you said in parentheses, 'French term —pronounced boosh bay, meaning listening with your mouth open.' She does rather keep her mouth open like a child, you know, and —it just sort of came to me.."

"It came to you just at the right moment to make those who understood it laugh, and to give the others a great impression of your linguistic powers," Monty said, pulling contentedly on his pipe. "Also the reference to Scott was neat."

Student Band Displays Marked Ability

A lovely large Christmas tree, resplendent with tinsel, colored lights, lent a festive air and kindled a spirit of gaiety in the hearts of large and representative audience of parents and teachers, at the Queen Alexandra Home and School Club's December meeting Monday night.

A member of the executive, Mrs. Everett Fairman, was responsible for the program, which included community singing of Christmas carols, under the direction of Reverend and Mrs. J. W. Houston, a presentation of his band by Mr. Cooper, and an address by Reverend D. C. Amos.

All were amazed at the growth of Mr. Cooper's band. About fifty boys from the four public schools of the city demonstrated what could be done under able direction, in two short months of practice. Starting from scratch, and with inadequate instruments, Mr. Cooper has welded the playing of these boys, and one girl (although membership in the band is open boys and girls alike) into a coherent whole. His control of the band and the earnestness of each performer augurs well for future success, and Belleville may, one day, have reason to be very proud of its youthful band. Solos were played by David Scott on the cornet and Ralph Cornigh, on the clarinet, and the whole band played scales, a march and a waltz, demonstrating their work to date.

Mr. Buchanan, in thanking Mr. Cooper for his performance, voiced the opinion that Mr. Cooper was playing a large part in helping to solve the juvenile delinquency problem. He felt that when children spent four hours each week in practising music, they had little time left for mischief. Mr. Cooper showed great enthusiasm and love for the work he is doing, and expressed the hope that before long, there would be a band of twenty-five from each public school in the city. He spoke of the need for material assistance in purchasing large instruments, much needed in building the tone of the band, and not within the range of the children's purses.

Mr. Amos' theme "The Home" was suitably directed to the parents of the audience. After outlining the effect of parents, playmates, teachers, and community environment, as molders of the growing child, Mr. Amos dealt with the greater responsibility that rests with the parents as the primary influence, governing their lives. The real springs of life, he said, are rooted in religion, and parents might be helped in their direction, by keeping a vision for their child, and thus guiding it to development. He stressed the importance of emotional harmony and suggested that family worship together, at church, would be the tuning force and key to true direction, against the vicissitudes of daily life. Love for the child, placed in the heart of the parent by God and so beautifully balanced by the child's response, is of the utmost importance in molding his character.

Two BCI Students Win Carter Scholarships

Two Belleville students and one student from Stirling were successful in winning the three Carter scholarships for highest aggregate marks in upper school examinations in Hastings county last June it has been announced by the Ontario Department of Education.

Winners in Hastings were Miss Helen E. Johnstone, of Stirling High School, who was awarded the first prize of $100; Norman E. Meyers of Belleville Collegiate Institute, who won the second Carter scholarship of $60 cash, and Campbell G. Cameron, also of B.C.I., who won a $40 award.

These are the 33rd Carter scholarship awards which were provided for under the will of the late J. L. Carter of Sarnia. Carter scholarships are given for the highest aggregate marks in upper school examinations on not more than ten papers.

Although winning second and third awards in Hastings county, the success of the two Belleville students is outstanding as both boys competed by writing only on nine papers. Norman Meyers received eight firsts on his nine papers, and is presently taking a science course at Toronto University, while Campbell Cameron won seven firsts and two seconds on his nine papers. The last named student is taking medicine at Queen's University, being one of eight civilians selected in the province for this course. The selection was held to eight as results of the number of returned veterans taking the course.

STOLEN

where from $1,500 to $2,000.

The cars recovered by detectives Chennery and Dean in Montreal on a taxi line included one owned by Crane Ltd., Hamilton, and in charge of Harley (Huck) Welch, another owned by Cope Construction Co., stolen from Douglas Chilman and still another owned by Thomas Henderson of the D.V.A. and stolen while it was parked in front of the Y.M.C.A. a month ago.

Arrests Pending

Early in the year local police officials were baffled by the number of stolen cars in Hamilton and also from outside points. Detectives Chennery and Dean were then placed in charge of an investigation. It was explained that arrests are pending but no names have as yet been disclosed.

J. W. Thompson, Inspector of Detectives, today commended the two officers for their good work. He said Montreal officials, as a result of disclosures made by the Hamilton police, have also placed special officers on the job to investigate activities of the ring in their city.

It is believed that before the police are through with their investigations as many of 200 stolen cars may be recovered and returned to their owners. Hamilton now has 15 cars reported stolen and still listed as missing. The city of Galt, it was revealed, has 17 cars stolen and not yet recovered. Police believe that several, if not all, may have passed through the hands of the black market ring.

The disclosure concerning the operation of this big ring has resulted in Prices Board investigators also entering the picture. They alone, it is understood, will foster charges being laid against certain people both in Hamilton and Montreal.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 11 (CP)—Industrial stocks posted an index gain of .77 at noon today on Toronto stock exchange. The base metals were down .32 and other groups showed little net change. Trading was sizable at 783,000 shares for the first three hours.

Regcourt and Bevcourt were leaders in the gold share group, both advancing about 10 cents in heavy trading. Other strong golds were Giant, Madsen, God's Lake, Detta and Negus.

In the base metals prices were a little lower for Golden Manitou, Normetal, Waite-Amulet and East Sullivan. Noranda firmed 3-4.

The paper, food and utility issues were the stronger industrial groups. Bell Telephone and Hiram Walker added 3-4. The western oil shares showed no changes greater than a cent or two.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, Dec. 11 —(AP)— Selected stocks, including sugars, moved into the recovery zone of today's market although many leaders remained in slightly lower territory.

Quotations generally slipped at the start but offerings never were pressing and trends stiffened by mid-day.

Canadian issues generally showed fractional advances, with both Hiram Walker and Distillers Seagram ahead ⅝, McIntyre ¼ and Dome Mines ¼. Canadian Pacific slipped ¼.

HOGS

Toronto, Dec. 11 —(CP)— Grade A, dressed, bacon-hogs, were up 25 cents hundredweight at Stratford, to farmers $20.65, to truckers $20.80, in markets reporting early today.

DAMON RUNYON.

Dolls", "Take it Easy" are examples. The Broadway parlance in which he wrote became familiar to thousands.

Runyon in his career was in turn a soldier in the United States army, a reporter, a columnist and feature writer, an author and a writer-producer of films in Hollywood.

Most of his newspaper work was with Hearst newspapers or with such hearts organizations as King Features and International News Service.

There won't be a public funeral with mourners, if Runyon has his way. Friends said his body will be cremated at an unspecified time and place, at Runyon's own request.

But probably "Harry the Horse" or "Madam La Gimp" will be hovering around to pay their last respects.

DISTRICT MEN NAMED TO BOARD

Three Belleville district canning factory men, J. E. Baxter, Bloomfield; H. E. Leavitt, of Picton, and John Weese, of Shannonville, were named to the executive of the Canned Foods Association of Ontario at their 13th annual meeting held in Niagara Falls today. President of the Association is F. M. Smart, of Collingwood, who succeeds C. S. Metcalfe of Deseronto.

Madoc

MADOC W.I. MEETING

Madoc (Special) — Mrs. B. Tanner was hostess to members of Madoc Women's Institute for their December meeting. Mrs. Ken Nicol, 2nd vice president, was in charge. The meeting was opened with the singing of Christmas carols followed by the Institute Ode. Minutes of previous meeting and communications were read by Secretary, Mrs. Moon. Business arising from the communications was the making of a donation to the Christmas Cheer Fund, and a number of older, shut-in members to be remembered at the Christmas season. Mrs. Ed Phillips in charge. Mrs. B. Tanner reported on sale of yarn and a vote of appreciation was tendered Mrs. Tanner for her efforts as convener of the warwork committee. With Mrs. E. Moore, as convener for the December meeting a splendid program was given with "The Christmas Story" told by Mrs. Moore. This was followed with a paper "Is There a Santa Claus" by Mrs. W. Miller. Jean Haggerty of Ivanhoe, sang a solo "I See Candles on a Christmas Tree" accompanied by Mrs. Reg. Haggerty. "Christmas in Other Lands" was read by Mrs. Chas. Whytock. A story "The Gift of the Magi" was given by Mrs. S. R. Beatty. Mrs. Jas. Aylesworth contributed a paper under several headings: "The History of Bethlehem", "Origin of Christmas Trees", "Mistletoe Bough", "Christmas Carols", "Christmas Stockings" and "Boxing Day". Jean Haggerty contributed another solo. A vote of thanks was expressed to all who assisted with the program. The roll call 'One Special Christmas I Remember" was responded to by 17 members and created much amusement. Three visitors were welcomed by the President.

The meeting concluded with the singing of "Silent Night". The hostess was assisted by Mrs. C. Henderson and Mrs. C. Whytock in observing afternoon tea.

Junior Institute Organized

On Nov. 27 a junior institute was organized at Madoc. Mrs. E. Moore, District President of North Hastings, presided for election of officers, who are as follows:

President, Mrs. Warren Hill; Vice President, Miss Sadie Tumelty; Sec-Treas., Mrs. Rex Rollins; Junior Convener, Miss Barbara Fox; Directors, Mrs. Fred Bailey, Miss Ruth Empey, Mrs. Allen Ketcheson.

Miss Elsie Irvine, director of Home Economics for Hastings County and Miss Flora Durnin, of the Dept. of Women's Institute Branch, Toronto, were present and explained the objects and aims of Junior Institutes in Ontario. A joint meeting of the Junior Institute and Junior Farmers was arranged. A special invitation is extended to all young men and women to attend the meetings.

Mr. James Maguire, of White Lake, Huntingdon Township, celebrated his 93rd birthday at his home on November 27. Mr. Maguire enjoys very good health and does considerable work around his home. Mrs. Maguire, who is somewhat younger, but very active, enjoys going out among her friends and neighbors. They have one son, John, who lives near them, and two daughters, Mrs. Wellesley Holland, who also lives near by and Mrs. Austin Ray of the 8th Concession of Huntingdon. Mr. Maguire has the very best wishes of his many friends and neighbors.

Plainfield — The Plainfield Young People entertained the Zion and Bethel Y.P.U. with a social evening recently.

The meeting opened with a chorus with Miss Beryl Platt at the piano.

Mr. Walter Elliott, president of Pallinfield Union, presided and gave the address of welcome, and Mrs. R. Crouston replied.

Zion Y.P.U. had charge of the Worship Service which opened with an address by Rev. A. C. Campbell, followed by a candle-lighting service, with Miss Betty Ray, Mr. Jack Clark, Mrs. Alymer Tufts, Messrs. Franklyn and Ted Ray taking part. The following program was much enjoyed:

Reading by Mr. Don Sills, piano solo by Miss Jean Sheffield, guitar solo by Miss Betty Sharp, trio by Misses Jean Sheffield, Beverly Nolan and Betty Sharpe, reading by Mrs. R. Cranston.

Meeting closed with a hymn and benediction following which all journeyed to the Orange Hall where several games were played under the leadership of Mrs. Harry Harrison with music by Mr. Clayton Hall and Mr. Ralph Wilder.

Later the Plainfield Young People served refreshments and a social half-hour was spent.

Mrs. R. Cranston, on behalf of the Zion Y.P.U., moved a vote of thanks to the Plainfield Union for an enjoyable evening and Mr. Walter Elliott thanked all who had helped to make the evening a success.

EIGHT KILLED, 38 BURIED IN NEW YORK CITY BLAST

Canadian Proposal Arms-Reduction Plans Approved

2 Suggestions by Dominion Accepted With Little Debate

New York, Dec. 12—(AP) — A United Nations sub-committee with an unexpected burst of speed quickly approved the first half of a draft plan on world arms reduction today after voting two amendments.

The new provisions injected into the arms plan:

1. Added, at Canada's suggestion, a requirement that any program adopted by the security council must be approved by a special session of the 54-power General Assembly in addition to a stipulation already accepted that it must be ratified by individual U. N. member states.

2. Also at Canada's suggestion, laid down a specific condition that any arms-reduction program must provide for the control of atomic energy "to the extent necessary to ensure its use only for peaceful purposes."

Both of Canada's proposals were accepted with little debate, the first by a 10-to-9 vote and the second unanimously.

Meanwhile, the General Assembly in plenary session debated a resolution, already approved by the 54-member political committee, recommending that all member states immediately recall their ambassadors and ministers from Franco Spain.

Polish delegate Oscar Lange sought to have the Spanish debate postponed because of light attendance at the session but was voted down 21 to 18.

The sub-committee on arms reduction drove ahead with its work as Assembly president Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium announced he was prepared to stay in New York "until Christmas 1948" if necessary to break the stalemate over the arms-reduction and troop-census plans.

Spaak had said yesterday he would sail for home Saturday regardless of whether the Assembly had finished its business.

State Secretary Byrnes of the United States was reported ready to intervene in the discussions for the first time but probably not before tomorrow.

Classes of Resolution

The disarmament resolution as drawn up finally by a drafting group calls for:

1. General reduction of armaments and armed forces.
2. Top priority for considering prohibition of atomic weapons.
3. Effective safeguards by way of inspection and controls operating under conventions among the members.
4. The withdrawal of forces from former enemy territories as occupation needs allow.
5. Acceleration of the establishment of the International Police Force under the Security Council.

The big powers were more or less agreed on this resolution when it came to the sub-committee on arms reduction, but Canada submitted an amendment which threatened to throw the whole thing into disagreement.

This amendment asks that the Assembly powers be more explicit and that the Assembly be given more recognition in the program than the Security Council.

Meanwhile, two other hot issues headed for debate in the Assembly today.

One was a resolution calling for all members of the United Nations to recall their ambassadors from Franco Spain.

Second was the long controversial veto issue.

Two Are Dead, Ten Others Hurt As Elevator Falls

Dover-Foxcroft, Me., Dec. 12—(AP)—Two of 12 women employees seriously injured when an elevator dropped 35 feet in the American Woolen Company's brown mill died here today in a hospital.

Two other women remained in critical condition.

The dead were Mrs. Lizzie Wyman, 68, who suffered a fractured skull, broken neck and two compound fractures of the legs, and Miss Addie Burdin, 62, who had two skull fractures, back injuries and compound fractures of both legs.

Officials attributed most of the injuries to the fact that the cables cable-drum and supporting framework, weighing altogether about 500 pounds, crashed through the car roof after it had fallen from the third floor to the bottom of the well.

Bevin Certainly Not Sick Man

London, Dec. 12 — (AP) — The Communist Daily Worker, quoting members of a trade union delegation just returned from New York, today described Foreign Secretary Bevin as "So ill that he is unable to move anywhere for long without a doctor in attendance."

In New York, a source close to Mr. Bevin scoffed at the report, declaring that the foreign secretary has not missed a single meeting of the Big Four Foreign Ministers Council since it convened Nov. 4.

"You will remember that he was quite ill last summer . . ." this source said. "But he is strong now, he works long and hard and he certainly is not a sick man."

Member Praises Immigrant Poles

St. Catharines, Dec. 12—(CP)—Speaking yesterday at the annual dinner of Lincoln county council at the county home, N. J. M. Lockhart, member of parliament for Lincoln, urged Canadians to be on their guard against the inroads of Communism. "If the iron curtain falls across this country our whole economy is going to be wrecked," he asserted.

Mr. Lockhart told his hearers that they need have no fear of wholesale immigration. Of the Poles recently admitted, many of whom are in Lincoln county, he said this group of the Polish Army Corps detest Communism and will not live under it.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Dec. 12—(CP)—Synopsis: A disturbance of major importance is moving from the Mississippi Valley towards the lower lakes this morning. With this is associated an area of rain which extends from the Mississippi Valley to the Atlantic coast. During the night rain spread northward over Michigan and Southwestern Ontario. Cold air from the northwest continues to move eastward across Northern Ontario and Lake Superior. Temperatures on the prairies have dropped well below zero with Regina reporting 18 below. Over eastern and southern Ontario temperatures are well above normal. Temperatures in the forties are reported in southwestern Ontario and are above freezing as far north as James Bay.

Search for Missing Transport Plane Swings Back to Slope of Mt. Rainier

Seattle, Dec. 12. (AP)— The rapidly shifting search for a Marine corps transport plane, missing with 32 men since Tuesday afternoon, swung back to the south slope of towering Mt. Rainier early today after authorities declared the "green flare" reports from the Toledo, Southeast Washington area to be "rumors".

The new location, which itself had once been abandoned in favor of the flare report, is within 14 miles of where ten men plummeted to their death when a Boeing Stratoliner broke apart and crashed during a test flight power dive in March of 1939.

The Army Air Forces returned to McChord Field near Tacoma for the night planning to renew activities at Longmire at dawn with Winter equipment.

Thick weather yesterday grounded all but one of the service search planes ordered to seek the big transport which last was heard from when she radioed at 4:18 p.m. Tuesday, a few miles south of Toledo. It was en route from San Diego, Calif., with a crew of three and 29 marines being transferred to Seattle.

NEW CONCESSIONS GRANTED RUSSIA BY "BIG FOUR"

Historic Peacemaking Sessions Will End With Council Meeting This Afternoon

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

New York, Dec. 12 (AP) — Paced by a new round of concessions from Foreign Minister Molotov of Russia, the Big Four foreign ministers council arranged to finish its historic peacemaking sessions in New York today after having completed plans for drafting German and Austrian peace settlements.

A final meeting was scheduled for 4 p.m. (E.S.T.) to clean up minor details of the five European satellite peace treaties and approve the draft of a six-point agenda for the Big Four conference in Moscow March 10 to begin work on treaties with Germany and Austria.

In a busy, swift-moving session last night the Big Four agreed that before the Moscow sessions small countries would be given full opportunity to present their proposals for German and Austrian settlements to boards of great power deputy foreign ministers in London beginning Jan. 14.

It was also decided that State Secretary Byrnes' proposals for sharply limiting occupation armies in Europe and for a 40-year German disarmament pact would be fully considered at the Moscow meeting.

Agenda For Conference

The agenda for the Moscow conference provides for these actions at Moscow:

1. Consideration of reports from the Allied Control Council at Berlin on German demilitarization, denazification, democratization, economic principles and reparations.
2. Study of the form and scope of a provincial political organization for Germany.
3. Preparation of a peace treaty with Germany including consideration of the work of the Big Four deputies in London and also basic directives pertaining to German frontiers, the Ruhr, the Rhineland and other questions.
4. Consideration of the proposed American draft of a disarmament and demilitarization treaty and other measures for the political, economic and military control of Germany.
5. Considerations of a report already submitted by a committee of experts on German coal production.
6. Work on an Austrian treaty.

Want to be Heard

Many countries already have asked to be heard on Germany. They include Belgium, The Netherlands, Luxembourg, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Brazil, Yugoslavia, Denmark and the British Dominions.

The Moscow meeting in March and the London Deputies meeting in January are only two of the international sessions decided upon by the foreign ministers yesterday. A third, brief session was scheduled for Paris Feb. 10 when representatives of the foreign ministers and of Italy, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria and Finland will meet to sign the five satellite treaties completed here.

Retired Scottish Bishop Dies

Walkerburn, Scotland, Dec. 12—(AP) — The death of the Most Rev. Ernest Denny Logie Danson, 66, who retired three months ago as Bishop of Edinburgh and Primus of the Episcopal Church of Scotland, was announced here today. He had been Bishop of Edinburgh since 1939 and Primus of the Church since 1943.

5-Year-Old Lands Right On Santa's Chin

New Britain, Conn., Dec. 12. (CP) — Sock-for-Empty-Sock Department:

A five-year-old who landed a right to the jaw of a department store Santa Claus told his mother:

"Well, he didn't bring me the bicycle he promised me last year."

McGeer Mayor Of Vancouver by Large Majority

Vancouver, Dec. 12 —(CP)— Senator G. G. McGeer, champion of "New Deal" financing for Vancouver and a drive on "racketeers," today counted up the "whopping majority that will be heard in Victoria and Ottawa" as he was swept into the mayor's office for the second time in 10 years.

Senator McGeer, running on the Civic Non-Partisan Association ticket, went back on the crest of the biggest vote in the city's history along with five non-partisan aldermen whose election for vacant council seats seemed assured. The present mayor, J. Cornett, did not stand for re-election.

The Senator told electors in pre-election meetings before a sudden attack of appendicitis cut short his active campaign, that he wanted a "whopping majority" that would be heard in federal and provincial capitals. He said he knew how to make himself heard in Ottawa where he was appointed a Senator only last year from the House of Commons where he represented Vancouver Burrard as a Liberal.

Learning of his victory in hospital where he still is convalescing, Senator McGeer said it was his aim to build Vancouver into "not the third, not the second, but the first city in Canada."

Also promised in the McGeer platform was a "fight" on the Western Canada freight rates issue.

63 U. S. CIVILIANS HONORED BY BRITISH GOVERNMENT

Chicago, Dec. 12 —(AP)— The British government last night awarded the Ribbon of the King's Medal for Service in the Cause of Freedom to 63 American civilians. The presentations, in recognition of service in the Second Great War, were made by Wilfred H. Gallienne, British Consul-General in Chicago, and Joseph Robinson, British Consul in St. Paul-Minneapolis.

JEWITT CHARGED WITH SLAYING HIS MOTHER

Accused Remanded Until Dec. 19th.; Examined by Two Psychiatrists

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 12 —(CP)—William Jewitt, 17-year-old Leamington, Ont., youth, charged with the hammer slaying of his mother, Mrs. Muriel Jewitt, last Friday, appeared today before Magistrate J. A. Hanrahan and was remanded to December 19.

The proceedings in county police court were almost as brief as on Jewitt's one-minute appearance a week ago.

Major Louis Brody, acting for the Crown, asked for the remand and Keith Laird, defence counsel, offered no objection.

Dr. C. S. Tennant, a psychiatrist at the Hospital for the Criminally Insane at Penetanguishene, Ont., and Dr. D. O. Lynch, psychiatrist from the Ontario Hospital, St. Thomas, Ont., are reported to have seen Jewitt yesterday. Psychiatric examination was asked by defence counsel.

SLIPPERY ROAD BLAMED

Pickering, Dec. 12 — (CP) — Otto Schroder of Toronto met death accidentally in a collision near here Sept. 21 but a slippery road surface was a contributory factor, an inquest jury decided last night.

Schroder, passenger in an automobile driven by William Sauer of Toronto, was killed when the car was in collision with a truck driven by Edwin Outwin of Whitby, police said.

BLUM ELECTED PRESIDENT AND PREMIER OF GOVT.

Interim Cabinet Will Only Function Until Mid-January But Will Vote Budget

Paris, Dec. 12 — (AP)—Socialist Leon Blum, 74, today was elected president-premier of the interim French government which will serve until mid-January.

Vote tabulators said the National Assembly gave Blum about 575 ballots. He needed 310 for a majority.

Blum now faces the task of getting the parties to agree on a program, and on whether the Rightist parties should be included in the cabinet.

His cabinet, not expected to remain in power much longer than 30 days, will be occupied chiefly with voting a budget for the first quarter of 1947.

Blum's most outstanding role since he was liberated from a German prison camp in May, 1945, was the negotiation of the United States loan to France last spring.

The new cabinet he would be called upon to form is scheduled to last until mid-January, when a permanent government is to be established.

Blum Unopposed

The Socialist party had announced earlier in the day that Blum would take the job on condition that he be unopposed.

The announcement came as leaders of the principal French parties met in an effort to break the two-weeks-old political deadlock. The meeting was held in advance of a National Assembly session at which the deputies planned their third attempt to elect an interim premier-president.

The Socialist announcement said that the aging Blum, who was premier in 1936-37 and again for a short period in 1938, had agreed to return from political retirement to head the government and deal with France's urgent financial and economic situation.

The gravity of the situation was emphasized by the fact that there are only 13 days left in which to solve a cabinet crisis and vote a budget for the first quarter of 1947.

Veteran political observers said France's plight would become "catastrophic" unless a new government is formed soon.

ASSAULT CHARGE AGAINST LABOR COUNSEL HEARD

Jacob L. Cohen, Toronto, is Defendant in Action by Elizabeth Guenard

Haileybury, Dec. 12 — (CP) — Details of a pre-dawn hotel row between a man in a dressing gown and a barefooted woman dressed only in a slip, that awakened fifth-floor guests at a Kirkland Lake hotel last Nov. 21, will be unfolded further in court today.

The woman was 20-year-old Elizabeth Guenard, formerly of Markstay, Ont., who testified that she "travelled with, slept with, had intercourse" with Jacob L. Cohen of Toronto, being tried on a charge of assaulting the woman.

Miss Guenard's evidence at the trial opening yesterday was at such variance with statements made earlier to police and "so flagrantly in contradiction to other evidence" that Judge J.A.S. Plouffe ruled her a hostile witness.

The Judge made his ruling after the Crown twice had sought to have Miss Guenard ruled a hostile witness on the basis of evidence she gave to describe the hotel room row which other witnesses said had all other guests peering from their rooms.

Miss Guenard told the court she and the prominent Toronto labor lawyer had arrived in Kirkland Lake on a business trip, that Cohen had gone to bed and she started drinking; became depressed and started to cry. Later, in bed with Cohen, she became "angry and jealous" when he murmured his wife's name in his sleep.

Tenement House Collapses Following Explosion, Fire In Abandoned Building

Many Children Among Those Buried Under Tons of Debris

New York, Dec. 12 —(AP)— At least eight persons were dead and 38 others, including children, were believed buried under tons of debris following a five-alarm fire early today in an abandoned ice house on Manhattan's upper West Side which caused a five-storey wall to collapse, crumpling an adjoining tenement building.

Police and firemen, digging frantically against time, removed four bodies from the wreckage and said they had sighted four more. Nearby hospitals admitted more than a score of injured.

The identified dead were Frank Moorehead, 27-year-old fireman; Anthony Biancardi, 11; Daniel Corrado, 25, and Thomas Phillips, 70. All except the fireman were residents of the tenement building.

Fire Marshal Thomas P. Brophy said the cause of the fire was not known. A small rubbish fire had been extinguished the day before the ice plant, located at 484 West 184th Street.

The noise of the toppling walls caused first reports to list the disaster as an explosion.

Debris from the tenement building was as high as the second storey. One portion of the tenement was flattened, the other wrecked by the force of the collapse, which virtually sheared the building in halves.

Blood plasma units were available at the scene. Priests from a nearby parish clambered over the debris to administer last rites as two derricks bit into the wreckage.

Brother, Sister Trapped

Police pulled from the wreckage Joseph Poper, Jr., nine years old. He had cried and shouted until help reached him. He said his brother and sister still were trapped.

Nick Sloan, 29, also was pulled out alive. He guided his rescuers by shouting and throwing stones and rubble. His wife, brother and two little daughters still were missing under the rubble.

Emergency crews tearing at the wreckage with bars, picks and bare hands came across the pitiful remnants of gaily-wrapped Christmas packages, holly and bits of tinsel.

One priest, Rev. David Rea, climbed a ladder to reach a broken body and gave last rites. He also saw the legs and feet of two others protruding from the wreckage.

Probe Promised

Mayor William O'Dwyer, at the scene, promised an investigation. Crowds watched rescue efforts from nearby rooftops. Police roped off nearby streets.

Among those listed as missing were a mother, Mrs. Edith Dirica, 31, and three children, Charles, 12, Margaret, 5, and Mary, six months.

The collapse came 15 minutes after the fire broke out at 12:10 a.m. Charles Whitecroft, nearby resident, said the noise "felt like an earthquake" and was followed by "terrible screaming of children."

After the collapse firemen heard frantic cries from the ruins and were able to drag out a number of victims.

Dig Into Debris.

Rescuers dug into a pile of rubble reaching to the second floor of the tenement, which was virtually sheared in half with one portion flattened and the other wrecked.

The blaze in the unused building, an ice house, was first reported at 12:10 a.m. E.S.T. and five alarms brought 25 fire companies and a number of ambulances.

Fire Marshal Thomas P. Brophy said shortly before dawn that the cause of the fire and explosion still had not been determined. He reported, however, that a small rubbish blaze in the building, located at 184th street and Amsterdam avenue in Manhattan, was extinguished quickly late yesterday afternoon.

The mother and children believed trapped in the smashed dwelling were identified as Mrs. Edith Dirica, 31, and her children, Charles, 12; Margaret, five, and Mary, six months.

The dead boy had lived on the third floor of the building.

The explosion in the ice house came an hour after the fire broke out.

James Giancotti, an uncle who identified the Biancardi boy, said he believed several other members of the Biancardi family also were buried in the mountain of timbeer, broken plaster and other materials. He listed them as:

Elizabeth Biancardi, 35, mother of the family, and her three children, Lucille, eight; Morina, six, and Joyce, 12. A son, Andrew nine escaped by running from the building just ahead of the collapse.

Residents of an adjoining tenement house were evacuated when officials declared it unsafe.

Charles Whitecroft, a 30-year-old repairman who lives in a building adjoining the tenement, said he heard "terrible screaming of children coming from the house that collapsed" and that "it was awful".

Whitecroft said the explosion "felt like an earthquake", and that "it seemed like the whole apartment was coming down on us."

James Mancini, a resident of a rear apartment in the blasted tenement, was pulled out of the wreckage at 3 a.m., after directing his own rescue by calling to firemen. Sedatives were administered and he was rushed to a hospital.

Another extricated was Thomas Phillips, 70, a building tenant. He was unconscious.

Another buried man shouted to the furiously working rescuers, giving his name as Nick Float and saying he was pinned face upward. Words of encouragement were shouted back to him.

American Girl's Opinion of G I's Marrying Frauleins Unprintable

Frankfurt, Germany, Dec. 12. (AP) — American women now living in Germany differ decidedly in their views on the newly authorized marriages between U.S. soldiers and German girls, while some German girls favor caution in exercising the privilege.

"I don't like it at all," a women's army corps sergeant said when informed of the decision to permit soldiers about to return home to marry German girls.

She did not give her name, commenting that "the things I'd like to say about American soldiers marrying Germans should not be quoted in print".

Frankfurt, Germany, (AP)—The United States army announced today the lifting—with one reservation—of the ban against the marriages of American soldiers and German girls, and an army spokesman said a "German war brides" transport might sail soon for the United States.

Col. George S. Eyster, who announced the removal by Gen Joseph T. McNarney, European theatre commander, said it probably would become effective within 15 days when details are worked out.

The single reservation, Eyster said, is that the marriages cannot take place until just before an American it to return home.

Eyster said he had "no idea" how many Americans now in Germany might apply to marry frauleins, but the army announced only last week that 2,500 American war veterans had applied for permission to have German girls enter the United States to marry them.

The lifting of the ban will apply to war department civilians as well as soldiers, and presumably to WAC's Eyster said.

Mild Weather Throws Trees Off Schedule

Woodstock, Dec. 12. (CP)—Sap's running.

In nearby Blenheim Township, that is, where J. Mitchell of the Windfall District tapped maples this week and served syrup on his supper table.

Mitchell said the unseasonably mild weather appeared to have thrown even the trees off schedule.

Research Council Is Investigating Radiant Heating

Ottawa, Dec. 12 (CP).—Canada's National Research Council, turning from war to peacetime experimentation, is investigating the merits of radiant heating, a newly developed plan in which source of heat is in the floor rather than in conventional radiators.

Two houses have been built by the Research Council at its laboratories on the Ottawa-Montreal road east of here. One of them is an ordinary frame dwelling with concrete foundations. The other has no foundations and rests on a concrete slab.

Results of the project, begun last May, will be made available to heating engineers and home owners who wish to try radiant heating.

One of the houses is heated by a grid of 1½-inch pipes in air spaces under the floor and the other has pipes imbedded in concrete.

Designed to permit maximum flow of natural ventilation, the windows of both buildings are placed near the ceiling for experimental purposes.

Measurement of the actual amount of heat required to keep the buildings warm is only part of the problem under investigation, the experimenters say.

Thermocouples, which are capable of measuring earth temperatures, have been placed in the ground under the foundationless house and are arranged around both buildings at various distances. These will show the effect of house heat on surrounding soil.

The research council hopes to find answers to questions by engineers and home owners regarding the new system.

Plevna Resident Drowns in Lake

Kingston, Dec. 12 — (CP) — Archie Lemke, 29, of Plevna, was drowned yesterday when he broke through ice on Malcolm Lake one mile south of Ardoch. Lemke and Neil Perry were walking across the ice when Lemke stepped on a soft spot and disappeared. Rescue parties are grappling for the body.

CHILD FATALLY BURNED, STARTED FIRE WITH KEROSENE

Hastings, Mich., Dec. 12 —(AP)—Five-year-old Thelma Lumbert, trying to be helpful at lunchtime, told her mother she'd start a fire in the kitchen stove. The girl poured kerosene into the stove. An explosion followed. The mother, hanging out the family washing, rescued her daughter from the flames but not before she was fatally burned.

City and District News

STAFF APPRECIATES USE OF BATTERY RADIO

Appreciation of the editorial staff of the Ontario Intelligencer is forwarded to Mr. Enos David, of David's Electric, of this city for his generous gesture in installing a handsome Philco radio in the news room for use during the Monday civic elections. Members of the staff on telephone duty enjoyed the speeches at the city hall at the conclusion of the election as well as the several programs during the lulls in election duty, with reception being very clear. Mr. David's thoughtfulness is gratefully appreciated by the staff.

G. S. STANTON PRESENTS DIVISIONAL REPORT

G. S. Stanton, city, chairman of the Central Ontario Division of the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations, presented the divisional report at a meeting of the Council of the organization held at the Royal York hotel, Toronto.

During the meeting, R. B. Morley, general manager of the Associations, gave a resume of the 13th National Conference on Labor Legislation held in Washington, D.C., last week. Representatives of 42 States, the District of Columbia and Alaska attended the conference. The Commonwealth was represented by Mr. Morley and A. B. Lee, Workmen's Compensation Commissioner for South Africa. The Hon. L. B. Schwellenbach, Secretary of Labor, presided.

J. H. Moffat, Napanee, as chairman of the Woodworkers' Accident Prevention Association, presented his report.

It was announced that the annual meeting of the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations will be held on the 14th of April at the Royal York hotel. A recommendation was made that another "No Accident" campaign be conducted next June.

TRIAL OF COE HILL RESIDENTS BEGINS

Former continuation school principal at Coe Hill, Mr. Ralph Turner went on trial at the General Sessions Wednesday afternoon charged with gross indecency involving a lad of tender years. It is understood that Turner faces several such charges.

The case is being heard before Judge J. C. Reynolds of Kingston with Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan acting for the Crown and Malcolm Robb for the defence.

Provincial police conducted a lengthy investigation in the Coe Hill district before the charges were laid during the past summer. At the preliminary hearings heard in Belleville the defence elected trial by judge and jury. On one charge of gross indecency heard some weeks ago, Turner was acquitted when the Crown failed to prove the dates upon which the offence was alleged to have been committed.

INQUEST ON FRIDAY

The adjourned inquest looking into the death of 13-year-old Marjorie Way, who died Saturday evening as the result of injuries sustained when struck by an auto as she was riding her bicycle on Cannifton Road, has been postponed until Friday evening, it has been announced. The inquest will be held at the county buildings starting at eight o'clock.

DOG HELD IN POUND

City dog catcher Thomas Thorne has a small black and tan mongrel dog which he picked up in the city. The dog was wearing a collar but no tag.

PANSIES, DANDELIONS REPORTED BLOOMING IN THIS DISTRICT

This harbinger of Spring stuff is getting to be the "berries". There was a time when people rushed to newspaper offices in early March shouting gleefully that green grass was poking verdant snouts through winter-locked land.

Now it seems that wily Dame Nature is crossing seasonal rapiers with Old Man Weather and trying to get in her Harbinger entry in the Winter Stakes preliminaries.

For up pops two stories, evidence that Spring, Gentle Spring is trying to straight-arm Winter out of the picture, or at least get in some samples of what to expect come April.

Mrs. W. N. Ponton, Trent Road, looking over her flower-bed the other day saw pansies bravely blooming in vari-colored blossoms, a floral defiance to Old Man Winter. By the same token Harold Horne, Cannifton, picked dandelions that were in all the glory of yellow blossom.

The first customer to bring in fresh asparagus shoots, wins the annual leather medal.

CHARGE FOLLOWS TRAFFIC CRASH

Damages amounting to approximately $200 resulted to three vehicles in a four-car mix-up on Dundas Street which occurred in front of the Kiwanis Centre Wednesday evening. Elmer Long, of Hamilton, driver for the Piggott Construction Company, Point Anne, was driving an army truck east on Dundas Street when his truck was in collision with a west-bound vehicle. Two other parked cars were also struck in the mix-up with one being slightly damaged. Long, driver of the truck, was later arrested on a careless driving charge.

CHRISTMAS TREE PRICES FIRMER

Like many other commodities being offered on the post war market, the price of Christmas trees is quite likely to be a bit higher this year according to one vendor offering the Yuletide bearer of holiday gifts.

On the local produce market Thursday morning there were two or three farmers who offered truck loads of trees ranging from 75 cents to $1.50 per tree.

"The general price of trees will run from $1 to $1.25 each," the farmer stated. "It just does not pay to cut anything to sell for less than one dollar."

Mrs. Harry Rollins Vice President Of Association

Kingston, Dec. 12 —(CP)— J. M. Macdonnell, member of parliament for Muskoka and president of the Dominion Progressive Conservative Association, last night scored the continuation of governmental controls in addressing No. 2 (Eastern Ontario) District of the association.

Mr. Macdonnell criticized the Liberal government at Ottawa; Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Reconstruction Minister Howe and Justice Minister Ilsley.

Mr. King, he said had "failed" in labor affairs and had "made a mess" of Dominion-Provincial relations. Mr. Howe, he continued, "doesn't even know what parliament is for," and Mr. Ilsley found the finance portfolio difficult.

The public would have to make up its mind whether it wanted freedom or not. Its freedom was endangered because of the government's refusal to relax wartime controls.

Association officers elected were: D. Rankin, Kingston, president; E. Way, Tweed, first vice-president; Mrs. Harry Rollins, Belleville, second vice-president; Mrs. Myrtle Kilgannon, Odessa, third vice-president; Mrs. Charles Webster, Kingston, fourth vice-president; Mrs. M. Stover, Kingston, fifth vice-president; W. Kent MacNee, Kingston, secretary; Joseph Lewis, Camden East, treasurer.

Princess Elizabeth Will Name Aircraft

London, Dec. 12 (Reuters)— Princess Elizabeth will name the first Tudor aircraft to fly for British Overseas Airways Corporation on the London-Montreal run. At London airport Jan. 21, the Princess will break a bottle of champagne over the nose of the four-engined liner, naming it "Elizabeth of England."

Assault Charge Brings Sentence Of Eight Months

Found guilty by trial jury of indecent assault against an eight-year-old Trenton girl, Gordon Mulligan, 40, of Trenton, and civilian employee at No. 6 Repair Depot at Trenton, was sentenced yesterday to not less than eight and not more than 12 months in the Ontario Reformatory.

The case against Mulligan was heard at the general sessions of Peace before Judge W. S. Lane of Picton with B. C. Donnan, K. C. acting as Crown Prosecutor and Malcolm Robb for the defence. The jury returned their verdict Wednesday afternoon.

Nine witnesses were called by the Crown including the mother of the girl, Trenton doctor, and Sgt. Jack Taylor of the Trenton Police Force, and two constables. For the defence Mulligan went to the stand to testify as did five character witnesses.

The offence for which Mulligan was sentenced, was alleged to have been committed last July.

ASSAULT CHARGE

"I jumped out of bed, shouting his wife's name and ran into my own room, locked the door and told him (Cohen) I was going to make a scene," said Miss Guenard. To halt her screaming Cohen had put his hand over her mouth and she bit him, she said, and to protect his hand "he pushed it against my nose and face." She said her nose was "a little hurt" but she didn't believe there were any marks on her body.

Mrs. Nora McLean said she had gone to the Cohen-Guenard rooms after hearing a woman screaming "for God's sake let me out of here before he kills me." She said the door was opened by the hotel manager, L. H. Mitchell.

Mrs. McLean, hotel housekeeper, said Cohen was standing in the room and Miss Guenard was "in hysterics," was covered with blood, and that her face was scratched and her lips puffed.

Demanded Girl is Claim.

Mrs. McLean said after "fixing up" Miss Guenard she took her to another room. The housekeeper returned to her own room, where Cohen later appeared and "demanded the girl."

The housekeeper threatened to call police unless Cohen left and she quoted Cohen as replying "you wouldn't dare" because he was "Cohen the lawyer from Toronto." She said Cohen tried to get into her room and she twice slapped his face.

But the Judge ordered the case continued and the defence called Dr. J. Markowitz, Associate Professor of Physiology at the University of Toronto, who testified Miss Guenard's nose had "a hairline crack" which could have been caused by "very little violence." He said there had been no necessity for her being treated for a fractured nose.

Christmas Tree Party for Young New Canadians

A number of young new Canadians, children of British and other war brides of the city and district will see their first Santa Claus next Thursday afternoon, when they, with their mothers will be the guests of the Belleville branch of the Red Cross at a big Christmas party being held in St. Thomas Parish Hall.

Red-faced St. Nick, in all the colorful habiliments of his calling, will be present to talk with and entertain the youngsters and their mothers and will distribute presents to all from a huge brilliantly decorated Christmas tree. There will be gifts and refreshments for all and the Red Cross is leaving no stone unturned to bring to the young women and their children a true old-fashioned Yuletide atmosphere.

The party will start at three o'clock on the afternoon of Thursday Dec. 18 and continue until five.

But that is not all. Soldier-husbands have not been forgotten and at night from 8:30 until midnight, the returned men and their war brides will be the guests of the Red Cross at a dance held in the Parish Hall. It is expected that brides and their husbands from all parts of the city and district will be present including those from Prince Edward County and other local area points.

Obituary

FREDERICK JOHN SAGER (Queensboro)

Madoc, Dec. 12 (Special) — Frederick John Sager died at his home at Queensboro on Tuesday, Dec. 10th, after an illness of two months' duration.

The late Mr Sager was born sixty-four years ago at Queensboro and was a son of the late Charles Sager and his wife the late Sarah Moorcroft. All his life was passed in the district where he was born and he engaged in farming. In the community he was held in high esteem and to many friends his death has brought much regret. He was a member of the Queensboro United Church and took an active part in church work, being a member of the Board of Elders. Fraternally he was a prominent member of the Orange Order, being a Past Master of L.O.L. No. 437, Queensboro; Past Master Royal Black Knights No. 167, and a Past County Master of both. Mr. Sager took much interest in the affairs of the township and was a member of Madoc township council for twelve years and up to the time of his death.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Valeria Dyer; four sons, Kenneth of Toronto; Albert of Ottawa; Earl and Gordon, both at home; two daughters, Mrs. Stanley (Mabel) Thompson, Madoc, and Mrs. Edward (Freda) Sexsmith, Madoc; three brothers, Robert of Queensboro; Thomas of Port Perry, and Harry of Ottawa; one sister, Mrs. Bruce Leslie, Queensboro.

The funeral announcement is made in this edition.

E. ERNEST ENGLISH (Marmora)

E. Ernest English, 77, retired commercial traveller and a former Canadian marksman, died at his home here on Wednesday, Dec. 11th, of a heart attack.

He was born in Waterdown of UEL stock and taught school in that district for some time before going to Western Canada as representative of the John Goodison Thrasher Co., and Watrous Fire Engine Co. He lived for many years in Regina and later at Hamilton, Toronto, Guelph, Barrie and Aurora. He came here on his retirement about five years ago.

Mr. English competed in many rifle competitions, both provincial and dominion, and was once selected for competition at Bisley with the Canadian team. He leaves a daughter, Mrs. P. J. Keogh of New York, two sons, Herbert of Marmora and George of Toronto, and a brother, Oliver in Western Canada. His wife died about a year ago.

LATE FRED J. BURKE

The funeral of Fred J. Burke, late residence, 14 Highland Avenue, was held Wednesday afternoon from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street. The service in the chapel and at Belleville cemetery was conductd by the Rev. J. Grant Sparling, Rector of Christ Church.

The late Mr. Burke was a member of the 21st Battalion Band during the First Great War and the bearers were fellow bandsmen with him overseas. They were W. Weymark, J. Weymark, James Cordes, G. Dobbs, R. Hinchey and M. Fraser.

LATE MRS. AMANDA DUETTA

On Wednesday afternoon the funeral of Mrs. Amanda Duetta, Picton, was held from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street. The service in the chapel and at Burr's cemetery, Ameliasburg township, was conducted by the Rev. D. C. Amos, minister of Bridge Street United Church.

HARRY STANLEY HOBBS

Harry Stanley Hobbs, 60 Dundas Street west, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Thursday morning, Dec. 12th., after an illness of four months' duration.

Born in London, England, 69 years ago, the late Mr. Hobbs was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Hobbs. For the past eight years he resided in this city and prior to coming here he lived in Saskatoon, Sask., and Kerrobert, Sask. During the First Great War he enlisted at Saskatoon in 1915 with the 65th. Battalion, and he went to France with the 46th. Battalion. He served in France from 1916 to 1918 and returned to Saskatoon in 1919. He was a member of the local branch of the Army and Navy Veterans. In religion he was a member of the Church of England and parishioner of St. Thomas' Church.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Edith Mary Crockford; four sons, Arthur Stanley Hobbs, Belleville; Harry Leslie Hobbs, Bedford, Ohio; Frederick William Hobbs, Saskatoon, Sask., and Victor Robert Hobbs, Toronto; one brother, Arthur Hobbs of Portland, Oregon; two sisters, Mrs. Lily Sherwood, London, England, and Mrs. Ethel Varberree in the Province of Alberta.

Europe Seeks Trade With South Africa

Cape Town, —(CP)—Considerable interest is being shown by European countries in the future of the Union and prospects of South Africa's immigration plans, trade with Europe and the establishment in the Union of European industries are promising, said S. F. Waterson, minister of Economic Development and Mines, reviewing a recent visit to Europe.

"Wherever I went I met industrialists anxious to come out and start their particular industries here," he said. The minister added that South African immigration committees will find co-operative spirit among northern European governments. A number of young Dutch farmers are anxious to come to the Union and the Belgian government too was sympathetic to South Africa.

Both Sweden and Norway would buy South African wines, while Sweden also was a good market for fruit. Norway had bought wool and would buy wine, and Denmark was satisfied with the quality and price of a large quantity of marmalade bought from South Africa. The minister reported that France was buying wool and sending her own ships for it, while the Italian textile trade also was willing to buy South African wool. Italians also were ready to buy South African products like asbestos and chrome ore and if the Union could supply coal to Italy it would receive cement in return, Mr. Waterson said.

The South African government has been advised by High Commissioner Nicholls in London that 40,000 people in Britain are waiting to come to South Africa and all are willing to provide their own passage.

Senator C.F. Clarkson, minister of the interior said that from statistics supplied him there would be no difficulty in absorbing all skilled and semi-skilled men. He said that shipping was the only bottleneck at present but that everything possible was being done to ease the situation.

"We must see to it that when people arrive work and particularly accommodation are found for them," he said.

The United States government has decided that when lease-lend negotiations with South Africa are concluded a fairly large proportion of the credit obtained will be used to foster an interchange of cultural personnel between the two countries This will include artists, musicians, university professors and students.

Carol H. Foster, United States consul general at Cape Town, said similar arrangements are being made with other countries in the lend-lease group. About 15 South African students are going to the United States every month to continue their studies at universities and other institutions there. He said it was hoped that the South African government would reciprocate by "importing" American students.

Polish Officials Await Govt. Word On Assistance for Finding Treasures

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 12 —(CP)— Polish government officials still are awaiting word from the Canadian government on whether assistance can be given in finding the 32 trunks of "priceless" Polish treasures which disappeared from the Precious Blood Convent here and from a church in Ste. Anne de Beaupre, Que.

The request for Canadian assistance in the case, which attracted national and international attention, was made Nov. 12 and since then there have been no developments. Canadian External Affairs officials said today that they are still studying the matter and have no idea when a decision will be reached.

The Canadian government was not assuming any responsibility for disappearance of the treasures.

It was Nov. 6 that Dr. Alfred Fiderkiewicz, Polish Minister to Canada, disclosed that the treasures ancient tapestries, rugs, flags, clocks, church ornaments, coronation items and the like—were no longer in places where they had been put for safe keeping during the war. He blames their disappearance on former representatives here of the Polish government in exile, but these representatives, now living in Ottawa as private citizens, disclaimed any knowledge as to the whereabouts of the treasures.

Eight Trunks Taken.

Church authorities said that eight trunks of articles in the Precious Blood Convent here and 24 trunks in the Ste. Anne church had been turned over to men who gave the password "Holy Virgin of Czestochowa," and who produced a receipt.

The treasures, formerly a part of the collection of the Royal Castle of Wawel in Cracow, had been spirited out of Poland ahead of the advancing German armies in 1940. On arrival in Canada they were placed in the records building in the government-owned Central Experimental Farm here.

Dr. Fiderkiewicz claimed that last May the former legation staff moved 34 trunks from the farm, placing 24 of them in the church at Ste. Anne and eight at the Ottawa convent. Two others were placed in the vault of an Ottawa branch of the Bank of Montreal and these have been found intact.

Rumors have been heard from time to time in Ottawa that the Polish election next month may bring developments in the case.

These rumors — no one knows exactly where they started — were to the effect that the location of the treasures might be disclosed if, in the elections, a government "properly elected by the people" takes over from the present regime, described by some former Polish residents as being "Russian-dominated."

Dr. Fiderkiewicz has stressed that he does not accuse the Roman Catholic Church of any complicity in the crimes.

When the case first came to public attention a publication of the Polish embassy in London charged that members of the Canadian clergy were implicated in a conspiracy to keep the treasures in Canada.

E.B. Jolliffe Re-elected Head Of C.C.F. Party

Hamilton, Dec. 12 —(CP)— "Unseeming hste" with which the Ontario government enacted cocktail lounge legislation was condemned in a resolution passed by the Ontario C. C. F. annual convention before its close here last night.

The liquor resolution also urged socialization of alcoholic beverage production, treatment of alcoholics, improved methods of dispensing and elimination of liquor advertising.

Another resolution which passed asked ammendment of the criminal code to prevent its being "mis-used" for strike-breaking purposes. Other resolutions caled for increased unemployment insurance payments by employers, amendment of the workmen's compensation Act to provide 100 per cent compensation and elimination of the waiting period.

The convention reaffirmed its belief in equal pay for equal work by men and women, and asked basic adjustment of the cost-of-living index to conform to present conditions.

E. B. Jolliffe, political leader of the Ontario C. C. F. since its organization in 1942, was re-elected. He defeated Lewis Duncan of Toronto by what Chairman John Mitchell described as "an overwhelming majority." Willim Grummett, C. C. F. legislature leader and member for Cochrane South, also was nominated but declined to stand.

F. Andrew Brewin of Toronto was elected president of the Ontario Party, succeeding Prof. George Grube. In the election Brewin defeated J. W. Noseworthy, former C. C. F. member of Parliament for York South, by four votes.

CLAPPER TO BE HONORED

OUT OF BOUNDS

Port Credit, Dec. 12,— (CP) — Because soldiers from Long Branch military camp created disturbances at Saturday night dances at Clarke Memorial Hall here, the hall has been declared out of bounds by the officer commanding Military District No. 2.

REFUSED EXIT PERMIT

London, Dec. 12. (CP Cable) —Sir Oswald Mosley, former British Union of Fascists leader, has been refused an exit permit because he might "make mischief abroad," Lord Chancellor Jowitt told the House of Lords yesterday. Lord Jowitt said there are five people to whom Home Secretary Ede "thinks it undesirable to grant permission to leave the United Kingdom— and Mosley is one of them." He did not name the others.

CONGRATULATIONS

I would like to extend congratulations to the Successful Candidates in the recent Civic and Board of Education Election, and hope they have a most successful term in office. I would also like to thank the electors who supported me in the campaign.

Stress on Education

Everyone knows the emphasis which is being placed on education today. Returned veterans of World War II have given a proof of this growing emphasis. During the war these men knew what it was to train and develop their usefulness in the services and they have brought this instinct and inspiration back into civil life. The result in schools attended by veterans today has been marked successful and in the course of time the reactions of the whole nation to this will be evident in still greater emphasis on the place of education in life.

Scientific developments of the past few years have had much to do with this attention upon education and upon the individual's and society's relationship to all sorts of problems which face one in the modern world.

At Nuremberg

From Nuremberg from which came for more than a year proofs of Nazi crimes against humanity and individuals when the Nazi leaders were tried before the United Nations Tribunal, now comes news of the presentation to a court, trying Nazi doctors, of records of inhuman experiments upon poor victims of these doctors, done in the name of the Nazi regime and for its use in shackling the world. Letters of a Nazi doctor who later suicided have been found implicating, it is said, three of the twenty-three Nazi medical men now on trial.

Nazism with its regimentation, left records which it could not destroy if it had wanted to do for lack of time and because of the indelible wholesale reports left in minute detail. These accounts have fortunately fallen into Allied hands for use today and for history. Nazi records have served their purpose differently from what Nazis intended because these men were so puffed up with and blinded by their notion of Nazi supremacy that they at that time could not think that these would ever threaten them. They were warped in regard to the laws of life as not to see that righteousness would triumph and that letters and documents would be used for their condemnation. Since the fall of Germany many a Nazi has regretted German dependence on the very things that have brought condemnation and punishment to war criminals.

An Artist Passes

Portraying life in a part of New York City, Damon Runyon drew portraits of characters at which the world has laughed because the artist was able to inject so much of his attitude towards life into these figures. Today that reading world of his who followed his writings with faithfulness mourns the passing of the great artist, who knew his New York types and depicted them as only he could do. But his world will live on in the minds of those who read his stories and his chronicles of a day that has passed. To them he has given an immortality of fame for he was a creative artist in the highest sense. Such a narrator and humorist is one of the blessings of civilization for he helps in understanding of the life of his time and generation. He is an interpreter in his own way of the civilization of his time and of all time.

He who can as an artist in letters, on canvas, in stone or bronze, or in great structures interpret civilization and portray humanity must have read deeply into the heart of man, the processes of nature and the spirit of the universe.

Carefulness

Death by drowning of a little girl in an Ontario community brings attention to the risk which anyone runs in crossing ice wherever it may be in the late autumn or early winter and spring periods. This year the protracted mildness of the season has prevented the formation of ice or has melted any ice quickly so that nature has delayed the annual freezeup. Greater, therefore, will be the temptation for children to cross ice when it does form on ponds and streams shortly after it freezes and before it has time to become solid enough to bear any weight. The temptation to use ice is a natural one but one against which children should be advised, especially early in the freezing season.

Sudden changes in the weather can weaken ice if there has not been sufficient cold to freeze a solid surface over ponds.

Too great caution cannot be taken especially in this season which has hence deprived children of the usual winter sports to which they are accustomed for their thrills on slides and hills, on frozen ponds.

Streams, even in coldest winter, can become treacherous by reason of changing levels due to weather conditions, cracks in ice and frozen over waterholes.

Precision Toys Made in U.K.

Canada has been turning out a great many toys in anticipation of this season. The same is true of the United States. In Britain the workers hands have also made toys which have been sent to many parts of the world. Large orders were sent to the Dominions, South America and the Middle East. Children in the devastated countries are to have supplies. In Britain toy exports have been larger than ever before. In September there was a very large increase in number and value of these articles shipped by the British manufacturers, which is about seven times the monthly value back in 1938 before the war. Reports from Britain show that the sharp decline in toy manufacture in Britain during the war has actually reacted to the advantage of industry in that it has been the means of introducing new ideas and designs on war production experience. For example one firm which made fuel valves for Lancaster bombers during the war is now turning out and has been turning out precision toys as accurate as the Lancaster parts.

Quaint Custom

A quaint English Christmas custom is the tolling of the "Devil's Knell" at the Parish Church of the Yorkshire town of Dewsbury. Every Christmas Eve for 700 years this ceremony has been performed—only broken by World War II when, for security reasons, the church bells of Britain were silent. The tenor bell of Dewsbury is tolled once for each year since the birth of Christ, and this year the 1946 strokes will take about an hour—the final stroke being timed exactly to fall at the midnight hour. A legend connected with the custom tells how a local baron named Thomas de Soothill, back in the 13th century, killed one of his servants, and to expiate his crime presented the tenor bell to the church with the request that it should be tolled annually. It is said the inhabitants of Dewsbury of those days believed that the tolling of the bell would keep the devil away from the parish for another year.

Safety in Night Cycling

During a recent visit to Germany I was struck by the simple, yet efficient device which makes night cycling much safer than here at home. Instead of a fixed reflector on the mudguard, small red reflectors are fixed to the back of each pedal Persistently in motion, except for free wheeling, these moving glow-lights are far more eye-catching for motorists and far safer for cyclists, says Julia Cairns in London Times.

CHRISTMAS SEASON

Of all the fun that comes and goes
The laughter and the dance and song,
The musicals and comic shows,
The sports that always draw a throng,
The bridge, at which I'm always wrong,
The dinner parties—host or guest—
Of very joy the whole year long,
I like the Christmas season best.

Of all that laughter here bestows
And frees the mind from spur and thong,
And smooths the wrinkles round the nose,
And helps to keep us hale and strong;
Restrains from bitterness the tongue
Or bursts the buttons from the vest,
Prods care and bids it move along,
I like the Christmas season best.

This could be simply told in prose,
For rules are strict for verse and song,
And every carping critic throws
At blunderers a sharpened prong,
But I am out of rhymes for "ong;"
And though 'tis faultily expressed,
Of all the joys that come along,
I like the Christmas season best.

Refrain
For tree and wreath I beat the gong;
For mirth that soothes the troubled breast,
For love and laughter, dance and song,
I like the Christmas season best.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

Dec. 12th., 1926.

The Intelligencer hockey team has been challenged by the McLaughlin Company's team to play a match next week and the challenge has been eagerly accepted. The Intelligencer has a bunch of fast puck chasers to choose from and most likely most of the following will take part in the match before time is called: Sam Curry, Weir, Dan O'Donohue, E. Doyle, Jack Arnott, E. Brockhurst, E. Gilbert, C. McPherson, G. Draycott, Larmer Mason, L. Young, L. Cook, (Captain), Ernie Blaind, trainer.

Mr. and Mrs. Pickrell, Everett Street, have left for the Old Country where they will spend three months.

Mr. William (Scotty) McIntyre has left to spend Christmas with his parents in Scotland. He will be gone about six months.

Mr. A. W. Robertsoon of the Robertson and Quinlan Company, contractors, Montreal, and well known here, is in town and is stopping at Hotel Quinte.

Dec. 12th., 1916.

At a meeting of the city council it was moved by Ald. Whalen and seconded by Ald. Duckworth that a vote of thanks be tendered His Honor Judge J. F. Wills and his staff for the very able manner in which they conducted the British Red Cross campaign here. The motion was unanimously carried. About $7,000 was collected here and the city will augment this amount by granting the sum of $1,000. The motion to make this grant was moved by Ald. Woodley and seconded by Ald. Smith.

At a meeting of Belleville Lodge No. 251 A.O.U.W., Grand Organizer Armstrong of Toronto was present and delivered an address upon the aims and objects of the Order. The following officers were elected: W. M., J. R. Massey; Foreman, J. S. Peck; Overseer, M. J. Lynch; Recorder, W. Jeffers Diamond; Financier, J. H. P. Young; Treasurer, H. J. Clarke; Guide, J. H. Royal Commission On Milk Visits Cheese Factory

Members of the Royal Commission on Milk which concluded a three-day sitting here on Wednesday saw a rural cheese factory in operation for the first time on Tuesday afternoon when they visited the U.E.L. plant at Dorland in Adolphustown.

Headed by Mr. Justice Dalton Wells, Toronto, head of the commission, the party which included Beverly Matthews, K.C., commission counsel; Joseph Sedgwick, K.C., Donald Keith commission secretary, members of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association and others, inspected the plant under the supervision of Wesley Remington, factory maker.

The commission showed keen interest in every phase of the process of cheese making and asked several questions as to the production of this form of concentrated food. They expressed their appreciation of the opportunity to visit the plan and he recipients of several "samples" of the food before they left for the city. They evidenced enjoyment as they munched curd.

The party was conducted on the tour of the plant and to the factory by Mr. Lynn Fair, Hastings County agricultural representative, who was in charge of personal and local arrangements for the commission during its sittings here. The commission adjourned on Wednesday afternoon and will sit again in Ottawa next Monday.

NARCOTICS CHARGE LAID

Vancouver, Dec. 12 — (CP) — Royal Canadian Mounted and Vancouver city police reported last night the arrest of a 17-year-old Vancouver youth on a charge of possession of narcotics and seizure of a drug said to have a value of some $6,000 on the black market.

The youth was arrested after allegedly accepting a parcel containing a flashlight addressed to him. Hidden in the flashlight was the drug. The parcel was sent to him through another youth, but its point of origin was not disclosed.

Authorities said the drug, brown heroin, is believed to be part of the loot taken in the robbery of an Oshawa drug warehouse in June, 1945.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Expresses Thanks To Property Owners

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,

Through the columns of your paper, I would like to thank the 1,325 property owners who voted for the incinerator by-law.

The spirit of unselfish citizenship as exemplified by you in supporting this project, makes it possible for some 16,000 of your fellow citizens to reap a benefit far greater than words of mine can foretell.

It makes it possible for us to climb one step higher on the ladder of healthful living in the City of Belleville. It adds to the spice of living in Belleville to know that you place the well-being of others so highly. It may be the means of saving many young lives, who someday will be taking your place in the community. They will thank you then as they accept their share of the cost. This also makes it possible to clean up the filthy, unsightly condition now existing on our water front.

The passing of this by-law gives me great personal satisfaction, in seeing this progressive step endorsed, and makes one realize that the four years spent in campaigning on this question were not in vain.

As your servant, appointed by the council, I express my sincere gratitude for the reception given this, so, vitally important issue.

Yours faithfully,
Jack A. Marshall,
Chairman of the Local Board of Health.

HORSES ON FARMS

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

I enjoyed that editorial concerning our ancient friend "The Horse", and I have no doubt that there is a place in tomorrow's world for this intelligent animal — so adaptable to a thousand varying duties — which has come down the centuries and has played its part in the upward climb "from the days of barbarism to those of culture".

It will be a long time, come an agriculture ever so mechanized, before our friend the horse disappears from the world's farms? In Canada, for the latest recorded year (1943) there were 2,775,000 horses — of which 1,790,000 were west of Winnipeg.

The other day Prof. W. G. McEwen (Dean of Agriculture, Saskatchewan University) not only eulogized the services rendered by the horse along the agricultural front, saying that the entural during need is "for the gentler farm-bred colt", but pointed out that "the horse would continue to play an important role in making rural life attractive to tomorrow's farmers".

I was only reading the other day a booklet issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, dealing with the mechanization of the American farm. It was particularly interesting to note that, since 1926, more than 2 million tractors had moved out to the farms, and that, within the past ten years, "this had released for sowing to crops for direct human consumption, more than 45,000,000 acres which in earlier years, had been devoted to the growing of feed for mule and horse power". In the present state of the world's hunger, such a trend is of course, delivering short-term benefits of the first order? But these days will pass — (when the wounded fields and herds in Europe and Asia have been healed and get back into production) and it may become plainer, to all concerned, that "tractor farming," like most other advantages, has to be paid for, some day — in terms of lowered soil fertility? After all, Mr. Editor, the slogan of the wise farmer, is not "let's get going places" but, preferably, is "here today — and here tomorrow".

For the long pull, give me friend horse, every time!

—X.Y.Z.

Acreage of Peas, Corn and Tomatoes May Be Reduced

With production costs higher, the acreage of tomatoes, peas and corn will be reduced next year unless some increases are granted, according to farmers attending vegetable processing producer meetings. This is an extract from the weekly crop report issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

In Northumberland county it is claimed the apple crop has disappeared rapidly with the greatest quantity in history being sold from roadside stands direct to the customer.

In Hastings county farmers are busy in the woods getting out firewood, while annual factory meetings are the order of the day.

Two cars of springer cattle were shipped from Prince Edward County during the past week. Egg production is increasing and prices are declining. It is considered there is sufficient roughage feed on hand to carry through the winter but there is little movement in any feed except concentrates.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

WHAT ROLLS BEFORE DINNER?

I live in a cute little house with a marvelous view of the bay, and most fat women are good cooks, so how about bringing the family here some Sunday and having dinner with me? I dine about 2 p.m. Sundays. And, oh, yes, (tongue in cheek) maybe you can teach me how to turn a summersault without risk of breaking my neck. Just name the Sunday and tell me how many in your party and I'll do the rest. My 'phone is . . . . I would certainly be delighted.

(Mrs. H. L.)

Mrs. L. goes on to say that she was, oh, well, never mind, but fully grown up last June and has all her own teeth, has never had any "caries" or decay and her dentist a month ago saw no sign of cavity or other trouble—she needed nothing but the usual cleaning of her teeth—and that, by the way, is the only way anybody can keep his or her teeth clean—have the dentist clean them at regular intervals, no matter how much one brushes them with glorified soap.

Mrs. L. has three children, the youngest 20, and they all have perfect teeth.

But, oh, yes, we were talking about sommersaults and I'd roll a string of sommersaults for anybody any time.

There's nothing easier to do. It is almost easier to do a few rolls on the floor or ground than to refrain from doing them, once you get the hang of it.

The secret of an enjoyable sommersault is this: You must curl up and stay curled up, else how can you possibly roll like a hoop? Squat down tight, curl up like a ball, and then a gentle push and over you go and come right up on your feet plumb delighted.

If any reader thinks I'm kidding about this, I'm sorry, but this is as important, I think, as any health advice I can give any one past thirty—first thing every morning roll yourself a half dozen on the floor. When or if anything prevents me from rolling my own, my day is spoiled—until I can find an opportunity to do them.

You know, old timers, I really feel sorry for anybody of mature age who cannot, does not or dares not roll a somersault. It must be tough to be so stiff, clumsy, awkward, aged or brittle. It is bad enough to be forty, fifty sixty, seventy or eighty, you're telling me? but to be inept, too, why, no wonder you are so old! When dignity gets you into such a state it is high time to do something about it. I'll tell you what, if you still have a spark of life about you, write me and ask in writing (if you use a clipping I'll ignore it) for the pamphlet "Invitation to the Somersaultauqua." Study it carefully, spread some cushions on the floor, squat down, curl up, bend your head so your chin is on your chest and you look back between your feet along the floor behind you, and then, keeping curled up, give a little push with your feet and oops-a-daisy, before you can yell ouch you're started on your new health program, rolling back the years. If you say it sounds silly you had better reserve judgment until you've tried it for a month or two. And I have a fat file of letters from people up to 85 years of age who—well, you wouldn't believe some of the things they say sommersaults have done for them, but I guess I'm a guilible chap, for I believe them.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Fear of Dental Surgery

Some time ago you said there is something one can take in advance when one faces a painful session in the dental chair.

(J.C.M.)

Answer—No, I said your physician or dentist can administer or give you something to take to make you more or less indifferent to whatever pain the dental treatment may cause.

Some Day If Not Now

A lady who for years since childhood, had made a practice of taking a daily cold bath, finally became ill. The doctors claimed the illness was the result of the cold bathing. (C.W.P.)

Answer—Sounds like Aesop's Fables. Or a reverberation of the old fiswife prediction of dire consequences which will befall girls who go scantily clad in cold weather—some day if not now. This is a health column sir. Submit your anecdote to the humor editor.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Of what country is the watermelon native?

The watermelon, a member of the cucumber family, is believed to be a native of tropical Africa, where it still grows wild and whence it was carried to India, northern Africa, southern Europe and southwestern Asia.

David Livingstone, the Scotch missionary and explorer, called the watermelon vine the most surprising plant found in the deserts of southern Africa. In 1857 he reported that districts in the Kalahari Desert were covered with the vines. Apparently some of the melons were sweet and others bitter, for he observed that the natives as well as all sorts of mammals were fond of those varieties that produce sweet fruit. The Negro seems to have acquired his decided fondness for the watermelon in the land of his and its origin.

That watermelons were grown by the ancient Egyptians is proved by numerous paintings as well as carvings on monuments dating back to the time when the pyramids were built.

This vine was introduced into India perhaps 2,000 years ago and it has a name in Sanskirt. It appears to have been introduced into Chnia as early as the 10th century A.D.

Neither the ancient Greeks nor Romans had a name for it and it was probably not known to them. Some authorities suppose that the Portuguese in the 13th century found the watermelon growing along the African coast and introduced it into their colonies in Brazil. The Indians knew a good thing when they saw it and the cultivation of the watermelon spread rapidly in the New World. This fact has led some writers to suppose that the watermelon had an American origin and that it was originated by the Mayans.

The fruit was probably introduced into England sometime in the 16th century. According to Master Graves, it abounded in Massachusetts in 1629, only nine years after the landing of the Pilgrims. The North American Indians lost little time in adding the watermelon to the list of cultivated plants. In 1664 the Florida Indians were cultivating it in their cornfields, and nine years later Father Marquette found among the Western tribes melons that "are excellent, especially those with a red seed."

In January, 1775, George Washington sent workmen to his lands in the Ohio country to plant corn and "Water-Mellon seed—Cucumbers & every Kind of Seed." His dairy for 1778 refers to planting, re-planting and weeding watermelons. The tribes on the Colorado were growing watermelons before Washington's death. Indians, like Negroes, became fond of the fruit and the vine was spread quickly to all parts of the continent because of the ease with which the seeds can be carried and planted.

OWL ATTACKS HUNTER

Port Hope, Dec. 12 — (CP) — The next time Roy Carson goes near an owl, he'll probably make sure that it's stuffed. After his pal Morley Cook shot a large horned owl in a tree the other day, Carson climbed the tree to retrieve the bird. He retreated promptly when the owl attacked him savagely and Cook fired another shot, making sure his prize was dead before making a second approach.

Here's Housing Information Accurate and Up-to-Date

A number of citizens' committees have asked for additional information in connection with housing legislation. The following has been prepared in co-operation with officers of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, and has been approved by them as factually correct.

National Housing Act

Under this Act, loans are made jointly by CMHC and approved lending institutions to prospective home-owners, to builders of houses for sale to occupants, and for rental housing projects. Financing is provided at 4½ per cent interest. Applicants must make a down payment which in the case of normal low-cost houses usually runs to about 10 per cent of lending value. However, this should not be interpreted as meaning 10 per cent of construction costs. Today construction costs are in excess of the lending value, and in addition to the 10 per cent of lending value down payment, the veteran must be prepared to make a down payment of the difference between lending value and costs of construction. Some months ago this represented a very real hardship, but in the last few months the lending value, for purposes of the National Housing Act, has been increased, and today in a low cost house the veteran ordinarily must be prepared to pay about 20 to 25 per cent of the costs of construction as a down payment.

There was some criticism from citizens' committees because lending institutions operating under the National Housing Act were not prepared to finance building in small, remote centres and in rural municipalities. This condition did exist up until early this year, but it was due entirely to the fact that the lending institutions during wartime were not able to recruit sufficient staff to provide the necessary administrative and inspection service in the more remote sections. Today, however, the situation is changed, and the National Housing Act financing is now available in any area in Canada, rural or urban.

Integrated Housing

This is of particular benefit to contractors prepared to build groups of houses for sale to veterans. Normally, Central Mortgage and Housing officers consider economical groups are a minimum of ten houses, but in smaller communities where the need is not so great, the authorities will give consideration to groups of less than ten.

Under the integrated housing plan the contractor agrees:

(a) To offer his houses for sale only to veterans;

(b) To construct the houses at cost plus a moderate fixed profit (the profit scales upwards from $350 for a two-bedroom house).

In return, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation grants to the contractor:

(a) Complete priority on all materials from the commencement of building;

(b) Guaranteed sale to Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation in the event the contractor cannot find a veteran buyer at the fixed price;

(c) No holdback on contract payments. In other words, when the house is completed, the contractor gets his money in full. This differs from the normal procedure under National Housing Act which contains a 25 per cent holdback clause until the house is sold.

The advantage to the veteran is obvious. He builds his home at a fixed price, and it is estimated that through building under the integrated housing plan, a veteran will save a substantial amount of his building costs.

Housing Enterprises

An institutional holding company set up by several insurance companies operating in Canada, Housing Enterprises is building rental housing under NHA financing and a limited dividend arrangement. Financing can be amortized over a fifty-year period. This does not come within the category of low cost housing as such, as the units being built by Housing Enterprises rent for a minimum of $45 a month, the majority of them, however, being somewhat in excess of this.

However, it should be pointed out that a number of veterans are living in low cost housing when they could well afford a better type of unit. As construction by Housing Enterprises increases, these people who can afford to, will move into more expensive homes, making additional low cost housing available for those who can afford only a limited monthly rental.

Home Extension Plan

This plan applies particularly to those people who have houses which they wish to convert in order to make one or more additional self-contained housing units available. The loans are a maximum of $3,000 for the first additional housing unit, and $1,000 for all others. The interest rate is five per cent, and the loans are repayable monthly over a period of three years if the cost of the additional housing units is not more than $1,000 per unit, and over a maximum of five years if the cost of the additional housing provided is greater than $1,000 per unit. These loans are made by chartered banks and approved instalment credit agencies under an arrangement with Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

Emergency Shelter

Principal agency, outside the rental of unused space as housekeeping flats to provide emergency shelter, is Wartime Housing, while in a number of cases former Government buildings, such as Army and Air Force barracks, have been converted.

Wartime Housing

Under Wartime Housing small self-contained houses are built on land provided by the municipality at a nominal rental, and at a fixed assessment over a period of years which guarantees a low tax rate. At the end of a ten-year period the municipality has the option of taking over this housing although there has been an announcement recently that consideration is being given to a plan by which those occupying wartime housing may be permitted to purchase it.

At the present time veterans are getting complete priority on occupancy of wartime houses which become vacant or which are being built. Rental of such housing is low cost, normally from $28 to $32 per month. It should be impressed again on citizens' committees that the approach to Wartime Housing authorities must be from the municipality, and a function of those citizens' committees where there is an emergency housing situation and where other agencies are not meeting the emergency, may be to suggest to municipal councils that they make an approach to Wartime Housing.

Under the plan a great deal of the financing of the cost of construction is borne by the Federal authorities, although the municipality must make a definite contribution through making the land available at low cost and providing a fixed assessment. In cases where municipalities can do it, it is expected they will assist in the cost of construction.

Conversion of Hutments

Here again the onus of initiating projects to convert Government buildings rests with the municipality, but the Emergency Shelter Administration will assist in making these hutments available at very low cost through War Assets Corporation, and will assist in the financing of the projects. A number of such hutments have been converted and, while they do not provide ideal housing, it is a fact that it is possible to convert them into very comfortable self-contained units.

SENATOR MCGREER WINS

Vancouver, Dec. 12. (CP)—Senator Gerald Gratton McGreer, 58-year-old fiery veteran of the civic, provincial, and federal political arenas, was swept into office as Vancouver's chief magistrate for the second time in ten years last night as a record vote was counted in Vancouver's civic election. Election of Sen. McGreer, mayor in 1935-36 and who during his campaign warned racketeers to "get out of town" was conceded less than two hours after close of the polls.

This mysterious ugly-looking fish was caught by fisherman William Atkins in the Atlantic Ocean off Ambrose Lightship, New York. The strange creature, which Atkins finally landed after a terrific battle, is four and a half feet long and weighs 70 pounds. It is dark brown, has five concentric rows of teeth and four horns. Atkins plans to stuff his prize catch, once he has had it identified by museum authorities.

Picton

Picton (Special)—The final session of Prince Edward County Council concluded yesterday. All members joined in paying tribute to Warden Earl Brummell for his leadership and fair dealing.

Fire insurance on county-owned buildings and property was revised, being increased by $44,000. Several members expressed the opinion that rising costs make these more valuable, and pointed out that they were under-insured.

A letter from Waupoos Island residents expressed appreciation of the new scow being used as a ferry.

District municipal engineer E. F. Marston reported general expenditures on roads this year as $49,214, of which $6,877 was on ne wconstruction and $42,337 on maintenance. Additional expenditures have yet to be recorded.

Warden Is Host

Last night, Warden Brummell was host to friends and municipal officials, totalling 125 at the Royal hotel. All enjoyed a turkey dinner. F. L. Ward, K.C., was toastmaster. Sheriff H. J. Colliver proposed the toast to the Warden, referring in high terms to his eight years in county council and his untiring and conscientious efforts, as well as his sterling personal character. In reply, Warden Brummell remarked on the pleasure he had enjoyed as a member of council, stating that he had enjoyed fine co-operation.

His Honor Judge W. S. Lane proposed the toast to municipal institutions, Crown Attorney Gordon T. Walmsley, K.C., replying. Mayor G. Nesbitt McKibbon proposed the toast to local municipalities. Each Reeve and Deputy Reeve briefly responding.

Outstanding entertainment was provided by a group of Toronto artists, courtesy Harvey J. McFarland who was given a vote of thanks for his generosity.

Brushton, N.Y., Dec. 12. (AP) —A fire which raged out of control for two hours in this Franklin County Village of 487 persons, was brought under control at about 1.30 a.m. today after destroying three stores. Brushton firemen estimated the damage at $125,000. One fireman was reported injured. Firemen from six communities aided in fighting the blaze.

ONLY GOT DOLLAR

Toronto, Dec. 12—(CP)—Using heavy sledge hammers, thieves smashed a door leading to Louis Tepperman's lumber yard office, toiled far into the night, forced open an ancient cement-encased safe and fled — with one dollar in silver.

EGYPT'S PREMIER

Fahmy Nokrashy Pasha, head of the Conservative Sadist Party in Egypt, who is shown here, has been called upon by King Farouk to form a new government following resignation of Ismail Sidky Pasha because of "ill health." Sidky resigned during the current crisis arising from differences with Great Britain over Sudanese independence. A crackdown on the nationalist and student disorders which plagued his predecessor's regime is expected under Nokrashy Pasha's government.

Senator Davies Protests Liverpool Paper's Reporting

Liverpool, Dec. 12 (CP Cable) Senator W. Rupert Davies, publisher of the Kingston Whig-Standard, who sailed for Canada today, protested in a letter to the Liverpool Post about the Post's reporting of the return to the United Kingdom of "disillusioned" brides of Canadian servicemen.

Senator Davies referred to a front page story on the docking of the liner Cavina which was headed: "Heartbreak ship here once more; Brides again back from Canada."

In his letter, Senator Davies said the story gave an inaccurate picture of living conditions in Canada and suggested "instead of plastering a three-column heading on your front page about disillusionment of a few returning brides, you try to find out something about the thousands of English girls whoh ave come out to Canada during the past two years and who have found there happiness and contentment."

POLICE HAVE TIRE

Hamilton, Dec. 12 — (CP) — Any pilot lost a spare tire lately? If so call city police — they have one which was found lying on King William Street. They are inclined to discount the theory that it dropped off a plane. However, no trace of the owner has been found.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

The Women of the Moose, Belleville Chapter 435, held their regular meeting, Tuesday with Senior Regent Lena Connell presiding, during which plans were made for the annual Christmas party.

Mrs. Fraser Aylsworth, Madoc, has returned home after spending the past week in Toronto.

Mrs. J. H. Nugent left recently for Washington, D.C., after having spent some time in Belleville, as the guest of Mrs. Jas. Hurst and Mrs. C. Hick.

WEDDINGS

HEADRICK—COOK

Rochester Divinity School Chapel, Rochester, N.Y., beautifully decorated with ferns, standards of white 'mums and white satin ribbon bows, was the setting for a very pretty candlelight marriage ceremony of some local interest, when Violet Chesher Cook, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Chester, Belleville, was united with Mr. Donald W. Headrick, of Rush, N.Y., son of Mrs. G. C. Headrick and the late Mr. Headrick. Professor F. H. Wilkins officiated.

Given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Elmore A. G. Chesher, the bride made an attractive picture in a floor-length gown of pink chiffon, with silver embroidery, a silver calot with pink veiling and she carried a white satin prayer book with brown cypripedium orchids showered with silver and blue ribbons.

The bride was attended by Miss Beatrice DiPasquale, wearing a floor-length two-piece dress of ice-blue crepe, with allover embroidery; a blue feather headdress and she carried green cypripedium orchids showered with silver ribbons.

Mr. Robert James Cook, son of the bride, performed the duties of the groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Howard F. Root and Mr. W. Lester Scamell, of Rochester.

After the ceremony a dinner was served to twenty-four guests at the "Spring House", where the tables were decorated with bowls of Autumn-tinted flowers; the bride's table being centred with a beautiful wedding cake. Later in the evening a reception was held at the "Spring House" for 200 guests. Mrs. F. H. Chesher, mother of the bride, received in a floor-length gown of raisin velvet with black accessories and wearing a corsage of hybrid orchids. The groom's mother was absent because of illness.

For travelling to Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Hamilton, Ont., the bride chose a teal-grey suit, topped with a fuchsia wool coat with silver fox trimming. Mr. and Mrs. Headrick will take up residence at Fischell Road, Rush, New York.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Chesher, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Wray, of Belleville; Miss Gladys Hendman and Mr. Harry C. Russell, of Hamilton, Ont, as well as other friends and relatives from Pennsylvania, Ohio and New York States.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF MALAYA TAKES OTTAWA BRIDE

Women's Activities

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

St. Andrew's Missionary Society met for its December meeting and the annual election of officers on Tuesday afternoon.

Encouraging reports of the year's work were read by the secretaries in charge and thanks tendered by Mrs. Baragar, president.

A very lovely duet "Thanks Be To God", sung by Mrs. Brown and Mrs. MacDonald was much appreciated.

Rev. J. G. Hornsby gave a very interesting talk on the work of the Church in British Guiana, saying that the people were ready to receive Christian teaching but more workers were needed.

The report of the Nominating Committee was read by Mrs. A. R. Cameron, and the following officers were elected and installed into office for the coming year by Mr. Hornsby.

Honorary Presidents — Mrs. H. S. Graham, Mrs. Geo. Reid, Mrs. Fargey.

President—Mrs. A. McCullough

1st Vice President,— Mrs. C. Baragar

2nd Vice President—Mrs. Miller.

Secretary—Mrs. Frank Parsons

Treasurer—Mrs. Mills

Glad Tidings—Mrs. A. Bell

Birthday League—Mrs. A. Bell

Pianist—Mrs. Mantle

Welcome and Welfare—Mrs. Hornsby

Supply Sec.—Mrs. A. Baird

Press Secretary—Mrs. D. L. Fleming.

Mr. Hornsby closed the meeting with prayer. The members remained for a social half-hour, refreshments being served by Mrs. A. R. Cameron, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Boyle and Miss L. Weir.

ST. GEORGE'S GUILD

Members of St. George's Guild met in the Parish Hall on Station Street, Tuesday afternoon for the closing meeting for the 1946 activities.

Euchre was played, the prizes being won by Mrs. George Pepper and Mrs. John Collins. Tickets had been sold on an apron, the lucky winner being Mrs. Alexander.

Greetings were expressed to Mrs. W. Perry, who was celebrating a birthday anniversary. Mrs. Parry replied graciously, thanking the ladies for their good wishes, and in return wishing all the "Compliments of the Christmas Season".

Refreshments were served, and the meeting adjourned.

PLAINFIELD W.I. MEETS

Plainfield. — The December meeting of the Plainfield W.I. was held in the home of Mrs. Clarence Hall, with thirty ladies present. The President, Mrs. Elliott, opened the meeting with quiet music, "Star of the East", followed by the Ode and The Lord's Prayer.

Following the usual business procedure Mrs. Don Hall led in community singing. It was decided to start a Tweedsmuir Village History Book. Mrs. E. Denyes suggested that Mrs. C. Hall, Mrs. Elliott, Mrs. Hazzard, Mrs. D. Hall and Mrs. Clarence Hall be a committee to collect material for this book. Mrs. N. Wilder thanked the ladies for the plant sent to her during her illness.

It was decided that the W.I. remember all the elderly people in the community with flowers, the committee to do the purchasing. Seven dollars was collected for the Hoodless Fund. Mrs. Hazzard read a letter from Miss Irvine regarding the Junior W.I. making a trip to Peterborough. Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Edna Sullivan and Mrs. Elliott offered to drive cars to take the girls on this trip.

The program was in charge of Mrs. E. Denyes. Several carols were sung with Mrs. Denyes giving a short history of the origin of each of them. Mrs. R. Wilder read "Christmas Peace". Mrs. C. Beatty gave a reading "Making Christmas Significant", and Mrs. C. Marshall conducted a Christmas quiz. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Hall and her assistants, and the meeting adjourned.

SHANNONVILLE W.M.S.-W.A.

The annual meeting of the W.M.S. of Shannonville United Church was held in the parsonage on Thursday afternoon, with thirteen ladies present. In the absence of the President, Mrs. F. Doxtator had charge of the opening exercises, and on behalf of the president extended to the members appreciation for their co-operation during her term of office. Encouraging reports were received from the several departments. It was decided to send a shower of Christmas cards to Mrs. Charles Liddle, who is ill. Mr. Lougheed conducted the election of officers with the following results:

Past President— Mrs. Sam Elliott.

President—Mrs. Stanley MacDonald

1st Vice - President— Mrs. Lougheed

Sewing and Parsonage committees were also named. Mrs. MacDonald thanked the ladies for their co-operation during the past year, and Mr. Lougheed dismissed the meeting, after which refreshments were served.

Holloway St. Y.P.U. Enjoys Christmas Program

A novel and interesting program was presented by the Christian Culture group of Holloway Street Y.P.U. at this week's meeting.

Five new members were added to the roll during the business period conducted by the President, Miss Maude Burke. Plans were announced by the Christian Missions group for a banquet next Monday night to which other unions have been invited. An objective of $100 for Missions by the end of the year was also announced.

The Christmas Worship Service was led by Miss Beth Robertson, who used an album of records, "The Star of Bethlehem", which told the story of the Nativity, in Scripture and song. Assisting in the Worship Service were Velma Thompson and Stella Klapchuk.

A sing-song of carols was led by Roslyn Robertson following which Dickens' ever-popular and much-loved story, "A Christmas Carol", was enjoyed. Betty Keeble led in Christmas games.

Canadians Must Be on Guard For Free Institutions Says Carlisle

Toronto, Dec. 12. — Warnings against Communism and industrial warfare, and the suggestion that the courts should be used to adjudicate labour - management disputes, were highlights of an address by C. H. Carlisle, President, at the annual meeting of shareholders of The Dominion Bank in Toronto on December 11th.

Pointing out that Canada cannot escape the influence of world conditions of a confused, unstable and dangerous nature, Mr. Carlisle said: "This has been made more than apparent in the recent exposure of an espionage plot, the purpose of which was to give to a foreign nation secret and vital information. The Commissioners made it clear that Communism is the seed bed of the conspiracy."

Communism' Poisonous Plague

"The stealthy, poisonous plague of Communism" had fallen on many Canadian localities, said Mr. Carlisle, and many attributed its spread to educational institutions. 'There must be a limit to academic freedom, he submitted. "No nation can suffer with impunity the propagation of doctrines which sap the very foundation of its existence."

Canada possessed the right to choose and maintain its own Government, and we concede that right to others. But we have ourselves chosen a democratic system and it is our responsibility to defend it against aggression from without and treason from within. Contrasting conditions in Russia with the freedom, privileges and comforts we enjoy in Canada, he said: "It is difficult to understand why anyone who has enjoyed the privileges we have, or is even acquainted with them would advocate that we discard these privileges and accept Communism or totalitarianism in any form," he continued.

Industrial Warfare Detrimental

Noting the spread of labor organizations in membership and influence, Mr. Carlisle said that it was clear their aim of better conditions was not being achieved. Throughout the Anglo Saxon world, industrial warfare was threatening the supremacy of both Government and law. "Such a threat," he said, "must be hurled back and kept back or civilization is lost. Nothing ever was plainer than that today the strike weapon is being overworked." In fourteen months to October 31, 1946, strikes in fifteen Canadian industries had caused loss of 5,452,000 working days. In the last six months of that period, wages of $29,000,000, involving 119,000 workers had been lost. Reconstruction had been delayed. "That such a situation should exist is reprehensible. That it shall continue is incredible," he said.

Ownership of and access to property, and the right to work unlimited by membership in any particular organization, were fundamental rights, which should not be abridged except by statute, said Mr. Carlisle. Also, costs of production must not rise so as to increase prices beyond the purchasing power of domestic and foreign markets.

Tribute to Union.

Paying tribute to labor organizations like the Ladies' Garment Workers Union, which had bettered conditions through co-operation with management, Mr. Carlisle said industry had largely failed to keep its employees and the public well informed of its plans, operations and financial requirements. He advocated the adjudication of industrial disputes by courts, which were independent and free of outside political influences. This would require additional judges and court facilities, but the expense would be minor compared to the loss sustained through protacted strikes.

"We can look forward with hope," concluded Mr. Carlisle, "when we appraise our abundant natural wealth, efficient industries and high general level of men who work in them, and the many things that have produced, and still can produce, a happy and prosperous people."

Deposits Higher.

Analyzing the financial statement, Robert Rae, General Manager, noted assets of $340,000,000, net profits of $195,768 bringing Profit and Loss Account to $1,360,735; a substantial increase in deposits, now $306,171,000; cash assets of $57,810,000 (18.44 per cent of liabilities) and quick assets of $234,999,000 (74.95 per cent of liabilities)—a very strong liquid position. Of the investment total of $168,838,000, Government securities accounted for $157,397,000. An increase of $24,129,000 in commercial loans brought the total to $89,850,000 for the year.

Newest Aircraft May be Tested In the Dominion

London, Dec. 12 — (CP Cable) —A supply ministry spokesman said today that Britain's newest aircraft, jet-propelled and otherwise, likely will be tested in Canada and other parts of the British Commonwealth and Empire before final designs are fixed.

Cold weather and other tests will be made in Canada where modern British machines including the jet meteor have already been flown in the north under conditions of severe cold. Such tests have been made with the co-operation of Canadian authorities.

"We try to do as much as possible in wind tunnels but it has been found that tests under natural conditions in varying climates are helpful," the spokesman said.

Several revolutionary aircraft designs are being developed by Britain and it is anticipated here that Canada probably will see them in action as soon as most British residents.

CORRESPONDENTS MISSING

Athens, Dec. 12. (AP)—Two American correspondents, Robert Vermillion of The United Press and John Philips of Time and Life, were officially reported last night to have been missing for the last 13 days in the mountains of central Greece. The press section of the Foreign Ministry said the jeep in which the correspondents were travelling had been found abandoned at Longosto, in the Kalambaka area.

J. C. Anderson, K.C., Oshawa barrister and prominent figure in the civic affairs of that city who has been appointed Judge for the County of Hastings, succeeding Judge Charles A. Cameron. A native of Bancroft, Judge Anderson was mayor of Oshawa for two terms, in 1940 and 1941.

Frankford

Farewell Presentation

Frankford Special—Mr Verne Coutts left recently for Barrie to take over new duties as assistant District Superintendent of the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission in that town.

Mr. Coutts came to Frankford about eight years ago as foreman of the H.E.P.C. in Frankford. During the past eight months he has been instructing at the Ontario Hydro School in Toronto While there he was requested to write several articles for the Hydro publications. At the conclusion of his teaching assignment he was offered the new position in Barrie.

Prior to coming to Frankford Mr. Coutts spent several years with the Public Utilities in Trenton.

While in Frankford Mr. Coutts took great interest in all community affairs especially the doings of the local fire brigade. Since February 1945 he has held the position of Fire Chief.

The staff of the local Hydro office presented him with a Ronson lighter as a momento of his association with the linesmen of the village. Mr. Gus Plumton made the presentation. Mr. Coutts graciously thanked the staff for the gift.

In his going the village loses a valued citizen but extends congratulations on a well deserved promotion.

Mr. Coutts' family wil ljoin him in Barrie in the near future.

Group Meeting Held

The Willing Workers' Group met for its final meeting this year at the home of Mrs. P. E. Bonisteel. The convener Mrs. G. Carlisle conducted the opening exercises and business. GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Your Christmas Card Envelope Should be Well Groomed

"This is your name..and this is your address..and I've written them both as carefully and as handsomely as I can."

This is a fine ideal to have in mind as you are addressing the envelopes of your Christmas cards. Then your envelopes will make that bright and endearing first impression they should make and that you should want them to make. Their pleasing faces will "smile" your Christmas greetings to your friends even before your Christmas cards "speak" your Christmas greetings.

Your envelopes are personal things, and should be personable things. They carry your handwriting, characteristic of your welcome and heart-warming to your friends. If you are careful about your own grooming, the chances are that your envelopes will be carefully groomed. But if you are carelessly groomed, the chances are that your envelopes will be carefully addressed, sloppy in appearance.

Illegibility gets you nowhere.. and too often gets your letters exactly the same place! "Address your Christmas envelopes plainly" is the annual and ever-hopeful plea of the Post Office Department. And it is particularly practical advice this year when the Post Office Department is again swamped with overseas mail and struggling with a man-power shortage and lack of experienced employees. Your carelessly addressed envelopes may very well mean (1) that they will find themselves languishing among the millions of other letters that are annually sent to the Dead Letter Office, or (2) that they will unnecessarily and wastefully be detouring the country in an effort to find out what you meant by some of the illegible or abbreviated words you wrote in the address. So be wise ..write carefully, legibly.

Be sure you have the correct address, and that you write it correctly.

If you know, or can find out, the Postal Unit (zone) number, be sure to use it. That is what it is for.

Now concerning abbreviations. Abbreviations are not becoming to envelopes, and particularly to Christmas card envelopes, which should not register the haste that is registered by abbreviations. And abbreviating is an unattractive habit that you can get over in no time if you set your mind on it. It takes only a second or two to write a word in full... just about as long as it takes you to make the period after the abbreviation! And what a difference in the appearance of your envelopes.

Also, abbreviations are the chief source of mishaps to envelopes. Especially the abbreviation of names of states. Perplexed Post Office attendants scowlingly try to figure out whether Careless Carrie or Charlie means to write N.Y. or N.J.; No. or Me. or Md.; Ariz. or Ark.; Ten. or Tex.; Neb., or Nev.; Cal., or Col. Honor the names of our states by writing them in full, this is good form, good taste, good sense.

North, South, East, West also should be written in full and capitalized in the names of states, cities, streets: South Carolina; West Haven; East Ninth Street.

Keep your pen right on its way and, instead of abbreviating, write out Street, Avenue, Road, Square. These address-words, written in full, add to the good-grooming of your envelopes.

On your envelopes, Mr. and Mrs. are, of course, abbreviated. But write "and," not the sign o and (&) in Mr. and Mrs.

Give honor too to the first names of your friends. Write the names, not initials. Write James (not Jas.); Charles (not Chas.); Richard (not Rich'd). And no nicknames on envelopes, please; Elizabeth (not Betty). And always a title before a name .... Mrs., Mr., Miss (even for a very young girl).

Unnecessary curlycues often cause misreading. No need for "To" or "For" before the name, or for "No." before the street number, or for a comma between the number and name of the street. No need for a comma either before or after the zone number, which should be written after the name of the city, not of the state.

Never use "City or" or "Town" or the name of the borough as an address. If the letter has to be readdressed, this may lead to confusion.

And on your letters and cards addressed to servicemen, check and double check every letter and numeral in the address.

A good take-off makes a happy landing for your Christmas cards!

Advice to the Lovelorn

Picking a Wife By The Color of Her Hair

Here's a young man of 26 who's hunting for a wife.

To date, he's got his eye on two possibilities, but he can't decide which color hair indicates the better matrimonial bet.

This is what he says:

"Recently I met two girls, one a red-head and the other a brunette. The brunette seems to be very nice, but I hardly see her. I see the red-head quite a lot, but she is quite domineering and seems to get on my nerves. The brunette will not give me a break.

"Just what do you think I ought to do? Take the red-head, who is easy picking, or pursue the brunette who seems hard to get? I had a date with the brunette but didn't make much progress. Should I ask her for another date? I am kind of bashful and don't know how to go about it."

Are you, for heaven's sake, going to pick out a wife according to the color of her hair? You wouldn't, of course, be the first man in the world to do that, and you'd be a long way from the last. But if that's the basis of your choice, I'd be willing to lay a small bet that a very few months would see you taking your place at the end of the long line of men who've done just that and lived to regret it.

A man spends a relatively small amount of time, in the course of a long married life, just staring at his wife's hair, you know. Most of the time he's talking to her and eating her cooking and helping her bring up the children and having fun going places with her and making plans for the future with her. Or else he finds nothing to talk with her about, and her cooking gives him ulcers, and she screams at the children and he finally gets good and sick of his red-head or brunette and goes out and hunts up a blonde.

Haven't you any picture in your mind about the sort of girl you'd like to marry? After all, you're a big boy now, and ought to have seen enough of life and people to have a few ideas about the qualities you'd want in a wife.

Haven't you sense enough to know that any girl who domineers over a man when he's no more than a casual acquaintance would henpeck a husband within an inch of his miserable life, whether her hair were red, black or bleached? Moreover, if she's "easy picking" for you now, she's going to carry that trait right over into marriage and no doubt will be equally receptive to any other male who happens to admire her red hair.

I can't imagine any young man with 26-year-old wits preferring this girl to the one who seems, as you say, "very nice," and who apparently has ideas and standards of her own. And, incidentalyl, you say that you had a date with the brunette "but didn't make much progress." What kind of progress do you expect to make on your first date with a girl, anyway?

I gather that your objection to the brunette is that it might be a little trouble and you don't want to make the effort. You'd rather shoot at the easy mark; pick the apple that's overripe and ready to fall into your lap anyway, than exert yourself and climb a little to reach a sounder one.

Or is it that bashfulness you speak of that makes you feel competent to deal with a girl who'll go considerably more than half-way to meet you, but puts you at a disadvantage with a girl who demands more initiative from you? If that's the case, you'd better begin doing a little work on yourself to build up your ability to handle yourself.

You can, you know. There isn't anybody who can't overcome his natural shyness sufficiently to go about his business with poise and self-confidence if he cares enough to do the necessary spadework.

I'm not saying it's easy. It isn't easy to learn to play a musical instrument, either, or speak a foreign language, or make yourself into a good golf player. It takes time and persistence and will power. But it can be done. And after it is done, you've got something that will stand you in good stead all your life.

So make up your mind, brother. Do you want the thing— or the girl—that's "easy picking," and that probably isn't worth the picking, no matter how easy it is to do? Or do you want something out of life—a wife included—that's going to make you happy and give you solid satisfaction as long as you live, even though you've got to make a lot of effort to get it—or her?

It's up to you to choose.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Pulchritude Has Many Variations

There are so many ways of being charming and attractive that no woman need despair, unless she has a one-track mind and a nasty disposition. One must, of course, keep stepping. One must be observant. One must not only be aware of one's defects, but also must have a keen desire to overcome them.

Successful business women are, as a rule, good-looking, which shows that brains have a lot to do with the cultivation of splendid appearance. If a woman is smart enough to make good in the world of business, she is smart enough to know how to dress, what to do with her hair, how to look after her health, and how to build a personality that is vivid and compelling. These women do not change much with the years. They are alive, alert, aware of what is going on. They don't mildew like the lazy, shiftless sisters whose aim it is to get through life doing as little as possible. Keeping active is one way of keeping youthful.

What we are we look to be. A vulgar woman looks vulgar; commonness is stamped upon her features. A well-bred woman is never mistaken for any other type, no matter what she wears. She looks a lady at all times.

The kind of thoughts that go on inside a woman's head has everything in the world to do with her appearance, manner and speech. It has a lot to do with the condition of her health—much more than she is likely to suspect. The mind, the body, the nervous system are closely knit. What affects one has a sympathetic effect upon the other.

Hatred, scorn and intolerance not only stamp their ugly marks upon the human portrait, but also create poisons in the physical mechanisms. A woman can worry herself sick. In time she may develop symptoms that cause actual pain. Easy to understand. Fretting, anger—all the unpleasant emotions—interfere with nutrition and the normal functioning of the digestive organs.

On the other side of the ledger, we have the woman with a sympathetic, understanding nature and a radiant smile. If she is not beautiful, her family and friends think she is. It's the same thing. We also have the helpful woman who constantly finds opportunities to do kindly deeds; she is beloved by everyone who knows her. The beauty of her character is reflected in her face.

Vitality is a pulchritude-builder. It puts a pink carnation glow in the cheeks, star-shine in the eyes, briskness in the step. The tactful woman wins friends and keeps herself clear of arguments and misunderstandings.

Procter & Gamble's dreft GIVES YOU FASTER, BRIGHTER, SAFER, CLEANING EVEN IN THE HARDEST WATER!

Dishes Shine Even Without Wiping

It's a Fact! No soap in the world performs the miracles Dreft performs in your dishpan. It makes dishes shine—even without wiping!

No Streaks! Dreft's amazing suds rinse clean and clear—leave no greasy streaks or cloudiness the way all soaps do. Even glasses sparkle like jewels—towel or no towel. And remember—Dreft is kind to hands.

Lingerie

STAYS BRIGHTER AND FRESHER! NO SOAP-FADING!

It's the greatest suds discovery in 2000 years! You'll agree when you see how your lovely lingerie stays color-bright and fresh far longer when washed with Dreft. There's no film to give that faded look. Dreft's rich suds keep your pretty colored slips, blouses, "undies" fresher than any soap could ever do.

Stockings

WEAR LONGER! LOOK LOVELIER THAN WITH ANY SOAP!

You'll be delighted at Dreft's gentleness to stockings! Dreft suds leave no soapy film to heavy-up hose and cloud their beauty. Colors stay fresh far longer than with any soap. Nightly Dreft-washing prolongs stocking life—gives noticeably longer wear!

New Woolens

WASH SOFTER, FLUFFIER THAN EVER BEFORE!

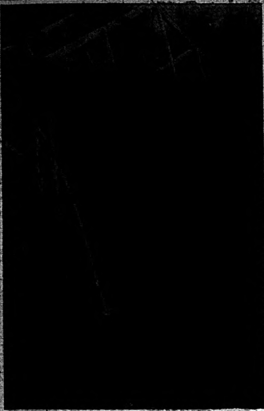
When washed in Dreft suds your precious new woolens are a joy to look at—a delight to feel! You see, Dreft leaves no soapy deposit to coarsen woolens and dim their colors. Your lovely new sweaters and baby things wash softer and fluffier than ever before. Yes, softer and fluffier than with even the most expensive soap flakes!

dreft Gives You 5 Times More Suds than any Soap in Hardest Water!

- No Soap-Fading! Now you can wash your precious stockings, lingerie and woolens—knowing that with Dreft suds there's no cloudy film to give that faded look.
- Dishes Shine—Even Without Wiping! With Dreft there's no soapy deposit to need wiping or polishing. Dishes and glasses fairly sparkle.
- Instant Suds—More Suds! In cool water, in hardest water—Dreft suds billow up instantly. And Dreft suds last so long!

Made in Canada A Hymosol Product

Procter & Gamble's patented suds discovery



Broken line and arrow to wreckage of motor car indicate how it plunged 95 feet from wooden bridge into Jacob's Creek, on the west coast of Vancouver Island, 40 miles from Victoria, killing six high school boys returning to Sooke from basketball game.

Car landed in shallow creek upside down, being turned over for removal of bodies, three in front seat, three in back.

Car crossing bridge at this bend tore out 40 feet of guard rail (arrow) as it went over. Unable to carry bodies up steep bank, loggers aiding police rigged tackle.

Water Supply Is Curtailed At Moncton, N.B.

Moncton, N.B., Dec. 12—(CP)—Harassed by the ever-lowering level of the city's reservoirs, citizens of Moncton today faced the prospects of continued curtailment of their water supply and the fact that at present there is hardly enough water to last two months. In normal years there would be sufficient to last until March.

The diminishing supply has been caused by a prolonged summer and autumn Maritimes-wide dry spell. Hydro-electric plants have been hardest hit and in several Nova Scotia and New Brunswick towns there have been power failures.

But from Halifax has comes word of encouragement. E. J. Cragg, Commissioner-manager of the Nova Scotia Power Commission, said, "The situation is serious but not critical. This country has always had rain during December and January, and there is no reason to fear this year will be an exception. Even if the winter freeze-up were to occur tomorrow we would still be all right because a January thaw is a yearly occurrence."

Mr. Cragg designated Yarmouth and Digby as the most vulnerable counties in Nova Scotia to a power shortage. The Cosms Imperial cotton mills in Yarmouth, employing 800 workers, have been operating at reduced rate for the past three weeks, while part of the town's street lighting system has been cut off as a conservation measure.

Monctonians have curtailed their water-consumption from 3,000,000 to 2,500,000 gallons per day, by cancelling skating sessions, cutting water off from public restrooms and general co-operation in many other economies.

Most notable saving was effected by the Canadian National Railways which cut its city-water consumption from more than 1,000,000 gallons daily to about 200,000.

Mayor G. F. G. Bridges warned, however, that a further saving of 500,000 gallons daily was needed to stretch the dwindling supply over the next two months.

Canadian Boat Brought to Port

Hamilton, Bermuda, Dec. 12, (CP Cable)—The crippled Canadian National Steamship Freighter Canadian Cruiser was brought to port here yesterday by two British Admiralty tugs which towed her from a point 80 miles off Bermuda. The new 7,500-ton ship was making her maiden voyage to Bermuda and the West Indies when she developed engine trouble several days out of Halifax. She steamed at reduced speed but called for assistance when she near Hamilton. Earlier reports said she had lost her rudder.

Stirling

Miscellaneous Shower

Stirling — (Special) — The home of Mrs. C. E. Wells was the scene of a happy gathering on Monday evening when Mrs. Wells and Mrs. Earl Fox were joint hostesses at a shower in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Whitehead (nee Zita Coucher) recently married. The shower was of a miscellaneous nature and games were enjoyed throughout the evening. Mr. Earl Fox read an address to the guests of honor while Miss Doreen Fox and Miss Eleanor Wells presented the many lovely gifts in a basket attractively decorated in pink and white. Mr. and Mrs. Whitehead expressed their thanks to all present and the serving of refreshments brought the party to a close.

Red Cross Meeting.

The Stirling branch of the Red Cross met in the Community Hall on Friday afternoon with 15 members present. The president, Mrs. Gordon Bailey, was in the chair and in the absence of the secretary, Mrs. Johnstone, Mrs. Armstrong acted as secretary-protem. There was a short business meeting and it was decided to withhold overseas bales until the required quantity for shipment is obtained. The president introduced the subject of electing a vice-president to take the place of Mrs. Townsend, but no election was possible due to the small attendance. Due to the problems of heating and small attendance no decision was reached as to the holding of a weekly meeting and the subject was deferred until the next meeting on Friday afternoon. The meeting was adjourned.

Personals.

Mr. A. M. Bradburn and daughter, Virginia, of Kingston, visited the former's sister, Mrs. E. K. Stinson on Sunday.

Mrs. W. Clendenning and daughter, Gail, of Toronto, are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Hatton.

A business deal of interest was completed this week when Mr. Walter Elliott purchased the garage owned by Mr. E. G. Bailey.

The Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church held a quilting bee at the home of Mrs. Norman Ray on Wednesday afternoon. About twenty-five ladies were present and plans were discussed for a bazaar to be held in February. Following the meeting, dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. Ray, Mrs. Carman Fitchett, Mrs. Cameron Montgomery and Mrs. Don Rodgers.

Mr. and Mrs. John Villetorte are spending a few days in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Murney Ray and Gordon of Ivanhoe, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Ray.

Miss Julia Savage, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Savage, was a patient in the Kingston General Hospital for several days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Francis and Mrs. Harry Francis visited Miss Shirley Francis in Hamilton over the weekend and also visited relatives in Toronto.

VETERAN LABORITE SLAMS GOVT. IN AUSSIE HOUSE

Former Premier Lang Enters Federal Assembly After 33 Years in State Parliament

By WILLIAM STEWART
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Canberra, (CP)—Much of the attention given to opening week of Australia's 18th parliament was captured by 70-year-old John Thomas Lang making his first appearance in the federal House of Representatives some 15 years after, having been one of the most widely-discussed public personalities in the country.

A bitter foe of Communism who once also fought a Fascist organization called the "New Guard" which sprang up in New South Wales during depression years, Lang in 1931 was a central figure in events which led to the downfall of Australia's short-lived Labor government of that period.

A powerfully-built six-footer popularly known as the "Big Fella", Lang was the idol of the workingman in New South Wales, Australia's largest and most industrialized state. Twice state premier, his second term ended in 1932 with the dismissal of his Labor administration by the state governor.

Lang had been a member of the state parliament for 33 years when he resigned in August to contest a federal seat and lead his own party of 11 men in the recent general election. It was his second attempt to enter federal parliament and among his group he was the only successful candidate. He had tried in 1943 and missed narrowly.

An unexpected turn added interest to his maiden speech in Canberra during debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne.

The debate had barely started when Lang delivered an attack on the re-elected Labor government which he charged had become the "right wing of Conservatism". When he sat down, the debate which usually goes on for several days, collapsed.

Possibility of Split

In his speech, Lang contended that the Labor party was in a position similar to that of early depression years when a policy disagreement split it in two and brought about the defeat of the Labor government of James Scullin who is still in the house and one of Prime Minister Chifley's close advisers. In the party split and government defeat Lang was a major influence.

A member of the official Labor party until seven years ago, Lang was Labor premier and treasurer of New South Wales from 1925 to 1927, and then from 1930 until his dismissal by Governor Sir Phillip Game in 1932. At the time a dispute arose over Lang's proposal for a 10 per cent state tax on all mortgages, to be paid by financial organizations holding them.

During his first term, Lang introduced such measures as widows pensions, family endowments, the 44-hour week and what was regarded as Australia's most liberal workmen's compensation plan.

The Scullin government had been in office slightly more than a year when Lang became premier again in 1930 as the depression was taking hold of Australia.

During a series of conferences between federal and state government representatives on depression financial policy in 1931 Lang proposed what became known as the "Lang plan" including reduction of fixed interests charges on government bonds and reduction of interest rates on loans from Britain.

Alternative proposals the Scullin government believed itself forced to accept included reduction of wages to which Lang refused to agree. This disagreement brought the break in the party. The Labor government fell and its successor was a government of the United Australia Party which included several former Scullin ministers.

Government Hunter Kills 522 Coyotes During October

Washington, Dec. 12 —(AP)— A. B. Bynum of Uvalde, Tex., is the champion government hunter of coyotes.

The United States fish and wildlife service announced today that Bynum set a record when he killed 522 coyotes during October, at an average cost of $1.30 a coyote.

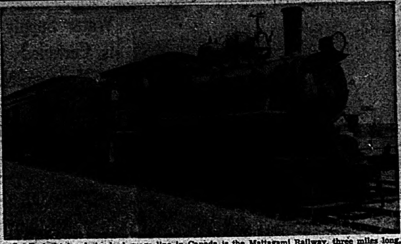
An official in the "rodent control" division, Bynum used a small cyanide set-gun device, the "coyote-getter."

Employing 325 "getters," Bynum made 3,000 sets and resets during October and on his best day caught 46 coyotes along a 39-mile line.

The coyote-getter injects poison into the mouth of any animal tugging at the covering bait.

COMMUNISM WORST DISEASE SAYS DREW

London, Ont., Dec. 12 (CP)— Premier Drew in an address here Tuesday branded Communism as "the worst disease we have in Canada today" and said that "I may be dumb, but I fail to see any difference between Communists taking countries by force as when the Nazis did the same thing." Premier Drew spoke at a banquet honoring veterans of St. Mary's Catholic parish.



Smallest chartered standard guage line in Canada is the Mattagami Railway, three miles long, which connects Smooth Rock Falls with the main line of the C.N.R. at Smooth Rock, between Cochrane and Kapuskasing. Owned by Abitibi Pulp and Paper Co., is serves 2,000 people, hauls 100,000 cords of wood a winter and carries 500 passengers a month. Here is the Mattagami "Thunderbird" getting ready for a trip. No. 101 is used only in summer time. Regular speed is 20 m.p.h.

Engineer H. Duffy receives orders from Conductor P. Fraser, who hands out 15-cent tickets which passengers often remark are longer than the ride itself. "It's a railwayman's paradise," says Mr. Fraser, "you're home every night."

Rockefeller Offers United Nations $8,500,000 Gift

Lake Success, N.Y., Dec. 12 —(AP)—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has offered the United Nations a gift of $8,500,000 with which to purchase a large tract of land in mid-Manattan for a permanent site.

In a letter and memorandum read to the U.N. permanent headquarters committee by Warren R. Austin, chief United States delegate, Rockefeller stated he had obtained a "firm offer" for property located between First Avenue and Franklin D. Roosevelt Drive and between 42nd and 47th Streets. He said the cost of the property would be $8,500,000.

Rockefeller said he had received assurances the city of New York was prepared to give to the U.N. the balance of a city block on which his gift purchase included two small plots.

He added that he predicated his gift for the land purchase on assurances New York City would permit the U.N. to use the entire area without restriction and would also turn over to U.N. use all bulkheads and piers on the East River frontage between 42nd and 48th Streets.

The gift, he added, must be declared to be free of all federal and state taxes.

Action must be taken within 30 days from December 10.

In a letter asking that the communication be transmitted to the Site Commitee, Rockefeller sated that he had "ventured to locate territory on the East River in the mid-town area," both because he believed the people of New York City wanted the U.N. among them and because New York City afforded the best spot for the U.N. to locate permanently.

DISMISS APPEAL TO PRIVY COUNCIL

London, Dec. 12 — (CP Cable) —The privy council has dismissed an appeal by the Canadian Revenue Minister seeking to levy income taxes on the bulk of commissions paid by Wrights Canadian Ropes, Ltd., of Vancouver, to a Birmingham, England, rope company.

The Minister must pay the costs of the appeal.

The appeal was made after the Supreme Court of Canada reversed a decision of the Exchequer Court upholding the government view that the commissions were taxable.

Turkey Raffles Not Permitted

London, Ont., Dec. 12 (CP)— Controversy over the legality of Christmas turkey raffles swung in favor of Crown officials with the cancellation of two of the largest programs scheduled for the end of the week, despite the granting of city hall permits. They were the raffles of the Optimist Club and St. Martin's Club.

Crown Attorney Claude Savage has warned that such raffles are wide open to prosecution under the Criminal Code, throwing consternation into the camp of many organizations which for weeks had been building up their Yuletide shows. Some groups have held raffles within the past few weeks without interference.

Raffle permit requests from more than 20 organizations were approved at the city hall "as far as we are legally able to grant permission", according to Mayor Fred McAlister.

Suspect Cleared Of Suspicion In Taxi Slaying

Toronto, Dec. 12 — Cleared of suspicion in the recent slaying of Alfred Reddish, Toronto taxi driver, after questioning by detectives, a 33-year-old holdup suspect was returned to Stamford in custody of Police Chief William Harrison of that city Tuesday to face charges of armed robbery.

The suspect Kingsley Mann, no home, was arrested in a stolen taxi on Parliament Street, at 5.50 a.m., Tuesday, less than six hours after Leonard Purdy, 24, Thorold taxi driver had been robbed of his cab and money.

Irishman Won Fight With Bears

Montreal—Joe Beef's occupies the ground floors of Nos. 4 and 5 Common street, Montreal. During each navigation season since 1868, the old waterfront tavern has catered to seamen, donkeymen, ship chandlers' clerks and others whose business is with ships and seafaring men, says The Montreal Gazette.

Joe used to pay Salvation Army lassies to sing outside his tavern doors, but since he died the only music heard on Common street has come from a worn out piano in the Atlantic Cafe, a block eastward.

Recall Old Days

Toward the close of each navigation season in Montreal harbor, a group of oldtimers gather daily in Joe Beef's to talk about the past and the rip-roaring days when Joe Beef served 1 1-2 pint glasses of beer and charged 10 cents a night for a bed. He insisted that guests washed before retiring.

Joe, who was an Irishman—his real name was Charles McKiernan—loved children and animals. In the cellar of his tavern Joe kept four black bears, ten monkeys, an alligator, three raccoons and a porcupine.

Many years ago it was the last Saturday of the navigation season. Joe was serving his big schooners of beer at the bar when there was a commotion at the edge of the bear pit. Joe's bear pit occupied the centre of the tavern floor. It was a hole about ten feet across. Chained to stanchions at the bottom of the pit were Joe's four bears.

Lad Found Door

That far-off Saturday morning, Joe's little boy had found the cellar door open and had wandered into the almost black bear pit. Within seconds one of the bears had grasped the boy and the other three were trying to take him away.

Someone seated near the bear pit called out: "Joe, the bear's have got the laddie." The tavern keeper dropped the glasses he was holding vaulted over his bar and rushed to the edge of the pit.

He jumped down. Joe saw his white-faced child almost covered by the huge paws of one of the bears. He beat the bear with his fists until the enraged animal released his hold. As the child struggled free Joe clutched him to his body then raised him to the edge of the pit where a dozen willing hands hauled the small boy to safety.

Fought 10 Minutes

By now the bears had turned on Joe. Old-timers say that Joe fought the bears for 10 minutes before someone thought of throwing him down a rope and pulling him to the tavern floor. When Joe came out of the pit his right arm was gashed, his nose was bleeding and his coat and apron were hanging in shreds. Down in the pit two of the bears were knocked cold, the others were licking their bruises and blinking eyes half-closed by Joe's flying ham-like fists.

The little boy was unscathed save for a few scratches and a shaking up. Joe opened his tavern the next morning, bandaged here and there, but bluff and hearty as ever. Shortly after, he sold one of the bears. He figured four were too many.

Died In 1889

Joe died in 1889. He was buried in Mount Royal Cemetery Friday, January 19. Dean Lindsay of St. Thomas' Church conducted the service according to the rites of the Anglican church.

These chill days, when lights are flickering out along the river and the liners and tramps are heading down-stream for the last time this year, talk among the old-timers who still quaff their ale in Joe Beef's, invariably turns to tales of yesteryear.

"Joe Beef was crude and unconventional," the oldsters muse, "but he was a man that loved his fellows and in turn was loved by them."

55,000 Housing Units Completed Across Canada

Toronto, Dec. 12 (CP) — D. B. Mansur, president of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, Tuesday said the national housing situation was "relatively under control" and that 55,000 new units had been completed across Canada at the end of October. Of these, 5,000 were conversions under the emergency shelter plan, he told the Toronto Real Estate Board. "The situation is not out of hand and we'll get out of this within the next few years," said Mr. Mansur.

TURN DOWN ORDNANCE

Bakersfield, Calif., Dec. 12 — (AP) — By a 4-3 vote, city council Wednesday turned down an ordnance which would have stilled nighttime train whistles within the city's confines. Railroad lawyers explained that steps had been taken to reduce the tooting, but added that no method has been devised to moderate the sound of a locomotive's scream.

Truman Praised For Handling Of Coal Strike

Washington, Dec. 12. (AP)—Senator J. William Fulbright (Dem.-Ark.), credited President Truman today with a "very good job" in handling the coal strike crisis, but clung to his recommendation that the President resign in favor of a Republican.

Despite criticism from both fellow Democrats and Republicans, the 41-year-old lawmaker said he still is convinced that Mr. Truman should step down "for the good of the country and for the good of his party."

Mr. Truman himself brushed aside any comment, but the White House made it clear the President had no intention of quitting.

"My suggestion is not a reflection on anyone's integrity, patriotism, or anything else," the Senator told a reporter today. "It would merely correct an obvious defect in our present system which has resulted when the President is a member of one Party and the majority of Congress another".

The Arkansas Senator said unless the President retires in favor of a Republican, these things are in prospect:

1. There will be no co-operation between the Republican Congress and the Democratic Administration, and the next two years will be spent in "squabbling, investigations and attempts to show the Democratic Party is no good."

2. The Republicans probably will win the 1948 election, and Democratic strength in Congress may decline to the same level the Republicans sank to at the peak of the New Deal.

3. Mr. Truman may leave office in 1948 under much the same circumstances as when President Hoover stepped out in 1932 after trying in vain to co-operate with Democratic Congressional majorities for two years.

Senator Fulbright said he will press legislation in the next Congress to eliminate the situation that permits one party to hold the presidency while another controls Congress.

DISCOVERY OF TEA

Chinese folklore attributes the discovery of tea in 2737 B.C. to Shen Nung, an emperor called the "Divine Healer".

Prime Minister Defends "Old" Political Parties

Ottawa, Dec. 12. (CP)—Defending stoutly the 'old' political parties of Canada, Prime Minister Mackenzie King last night warned against a "multiplicity of parties" as a threat to responsible government.

Mr. King, in a radio broadcast devoted to free-time political speeches, dealt with a subject on which he has spoken before and which was part of a speech originally prepared for delivery at a testimonial dinner to External Affairs Minister St. Laurent at Quebec, November 29.

"The danger to representative government, in many countries today, does not arise from the perpetuation of parties which have a long and honorable past. The danger arises from a bewilderment of political parties that have no past, and little promise of any future," Mr. King declared.

A multiplicity of parties tended to "bring down the whole structure of responsible political organization, and to weaken the nation itself.

"This, as we all know, was the misfortune of France at the beginning of the war.

"Let us beware of repeating a like folly in our own land".

Advocating a party which served to unite Canada, he contended the Liberal Party was such an organization. It had many shades of opinion among its members.

"If however, those who, broadly speaking, feel and think alike on the great questions of the day, do not combine under some banner which enables them to proceed as one, they may be sure that those who hold other views will be only too ready to profit by their divisions."

FAILED TO GAIN HEADWAY

Montreal, Dec. 12. (CP)—An attempt by Henri Gagnon, leader of the squatter movement in Montreal, and two other veterans to "squat" into a vacant 20-room home on north-end Cote Ste. Catherine Road failed to gain much headway as the men left last night when ordered by police to move or be arrested, leaving their belongings behind. Montreal's fourth squatter movement, and the first one to be unsuccessful at the outset, developed earlier in the day.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was going to wait till pop felt better after supper before she told him about Miss Kitty sending a note home about my continual whispering during school hours, giving me a good idea to confess it myself before she had a chance, and I said, Hay pop, did you used to whisper in school?

Not to excess, pop said. Is that what you've been doing? he said, and I said, Yes sir.

To excess? pop said, and I said, Well, it just seemed like ordnerry whispering to me, but Miss Kitty claims it's been continual in the note she sent home about it.

Maybe there are extenuating circumstances, pop said. Perhaps you were whispering about instructive and elevating subjects, he said, and I said, G, may be I was, I forget now.

Anyway, according to the experts, an honest confession is good for the soie, pop said. In the perfect werld of the future, wrongdoers will voluntarily admit their gilt and name a suitable punishment in accordance to the dictates of their own conscience. You've admitted your gilt, so would you care to name your own punishment? he said, and I said, Yes sir. Make me go without dessert for a week, I said.

Dont you think that's just a little drastic? pop said, and I said, Yes sir, but I thought maybe it might do for both.

What the dooce do you mean by both? pop said, and I said, I mean there's something else even ma dont know about yet. I mean I got my new report card to be signed, and it's pritty fearse if you read it all. So that's 2 honest confessions, I said.

Being the beginning of the sad part.

CANADA PLAYS BIG ROLE IN COUNCILS POST-WAR WORLD

High-Ranking Representatives Speak With Firm Voice on Issues Vital for Welfare of All Nations

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 9: (CP)—Canada, her stature enhanced through a striking contribution to the winning of the war, spoke with a firm and commanding voice in the international councils of 1946, first year of the peace.

The pace of international discussions quickened during the year as statesmen of many countries gathered to talk of the world-wide need of many things—peace, security, trade, food, relief and health.

The most momentous of the international gatherings were the Peace Conference at Paris and the meetings of the United Nations assembly in New York, both of which were attended by Canadian delegations led by high-ranking government ministers.

At Paris, Prime Minister Mackenzie King keynoted Canada's view on the vital peace treaties with an address in which he called for treaties based upon the "broad and enduring principles of justice and equity," and bespoke of the Dominion's realization that the peace of the world was "one and indivisible."

Canadian delegates there, led by Health Minister Claxton, won the adoption of a Canadian-sponsored amendment extending from 18 months to three years the most-favored-nation trade agreements with Italy, contrary to a Big Four agreement, and also helped put through a Russian-opposed proposal that the former Axis satellites of Romania and Hungary be heard during settlement of the Transylvanian frontier.

Waived Reparations

One outstanding Canadian move was her waiving of reparations from Italy, to whom the Dominion sent supplies totalling more than $28,000,000 under a military relief plan financed jointly with Britain and the United States. The Canadian action was prompted by a desire to see Italy re-established as a trading power.

The Canadian delegation to the United Nations assembly at New York, headed by Foreign Minister St. Laurent, made valuable contributions to debates dealing with refugees, use of the veto, trade, food the length of debates and international security.

On the contentious matter of the veto, Mr. St. Laurent said the Canadian delegation joined in the demand voiced by many other representatives that the veto be employed with restraint and in the interests of the United Nations as a whole. He placed before the meeting seven suggestions for modification of its use.

At another point Canada objected to the use of the veto by Russia in opposing admission to U.N. membership of Eire, Portugal and Trans-Jordan and said the Russian grounds for the action—that those states did not have diplomatic relations with the Soviet—were not in accord with the United Nations charter.

Other Canadian delegations attended conferences dealing with U.N.R.R.A., the proposed world trade conference, the food and agriculture organization, the international health organization, the Bretton Woods agreement and world shipping problems.

Firemen Blame Cigaret Butt

Toronto, Dec. 12—(CP)—Firemen blamed a smouldering cigaret butt dropped accidentally in a chesterfield for a two-alarm fire at the Royal Canadian Navy Volunteer Reserve training quarters on Lake Shore Road in the west end of Toronto Wednesday. Damage was estimated at between $12,000 and $14,000.

No one was injured. The building was not occupied at the time of the blaze.

Flames spread from the petty officers' mess to the sick bay, gutting both and destroying their furniture. An underground vault in the building contained thousands of rounds of ammunition but District Fire Chief Jack Price said there was no danger of an explosion.

Firemen took considerable punishment from choking smoke until they ventilated the building. Smoke and flames destroyed a number of delicate instruments used in training.

MORE CISCOES

Toronto, Dec. 12 — (CP)—Ciscoes, or lake herrings, are on the increase in Lake Erie.

Studies by the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests indicate that the fish, which commands good prices in United States markets, are making a comeback after a decline from 1924 to 1945.

Fish experts once thought the Lake Erie ciscoes belonged to four species but the Department's studies show there are only two kinds, one of which is rare.

CHARMING STUDY OF THE PRINCESSES

A new and charming study of Princess Elizabeth, LEFT, heir-apparent to the throne of England, and her sister, Princess Margaret Rose. Princess Elizabeth is 20 and her sister is 16. Latest rumored beau of the Princess is Prince Philip of Greece, who is reported to have applied for British citizenship recently.

Daughter Meets with Tragedy

Chicago, Dec. 12 — (AP)—Mrs. Floyd Wright, 21, who returned home Saturday after giving birth to a baby boy, grew lonesome for her daughter Gayle, 20 months old, who had been staying with her grandmother. Gayle, accompanied by her grandmother, Mrs. Eleanor Woods started out in a cab for the visit at home. On the way, the cab collided with a bus and Gayle was killed.

VOLCANO AGAIN ACTIVE

Mexico City, Dec. 11 — (AP)—The newspaper Excelsior said today that Popocatepetl, long-dormant snow capped volcano which towers two miles above the Valley of Mexico 40 miles southeast of here, again is showing signs of activity. Puffs of smoke at the rate of about 50 an hour have issued from the crater in recent days, the paper said, some of them billowing up to 3,000 feet above the peak.

Lumber Cutting In Bush Camps At Standstill

Kirkland Lake, Dec. 12 —(CP)—Lumbering operations in district bush-camps have come to a complete standstill as a result of the December thaw which struck this district late last week.

Hauling will be set back at least two weeks, local operators said.

A. E. Perron, local lumberman, said the roads in his camps had been made and were beginning to be iced, but construction of roads suitable for hauling will be retarded for at least two weeks because of the unseasonable thaw. The men were unable to cut Saturday and Monday, he said.

Walter Little said he was using creeks for hauling and transportation would be held up until the weather became cold enough for adequate freezing. The setback was less serious for him, he said, because hauling in his camps did not get underway on a big scale until after Christmas.

Men in his camps were unable to cut over the weekend.

Heavy rains reportedly pulled much of the frost from the ground and the winter roads are virtually useless as a result of the slushy, soggy conditions which prevail throughout the area.

Russian Says Americans Slaves to Propaganda

Moscow, Dec. 12 — (AP)—Ilya Ehrenberg, noted Soviet writer who visited the United States earlier this year, told an audience today that the average American is the slave of propaganda, but is not aware of the fact.

"The propaganda is so subtle and well masked that he would be shocked if you told him it exists," Ehrenberg said in a lecture on "America and Tomorrow," last of a series on his American trip. In spite of bitterly cold weather the house was packed.

His main theme was the way in which organs of public opinion mould the outlook of the average American, who, he said, "natively has much common sense and, above all, does not want war."

Permits on Sale January 2nd

Toronto, Dec. 12—(CP)—Motor vehicle permits and drivers' licences for 1947 will go on sale throughout Ontario January 2, Highways Minister Doucett announced yesterday. Steel restrictions have made it necessary to issue only one marker plate to each vehicle, he said. Color combination is black figures and letters on an aluminum base.

KEEP NUMBER SECRET

Washington, Dec. 11 — (AP)—Officials of the United States Office of Price Administration said today they will keep secret until Jan. 1 the number of the new sugar ration stamp which will become valid then to prevent users from "spending" it in advance. The new stamp will be good for five pounds of sugar from the first of the year until April 30.

Milk Suppliers Call Strike In Saint John Area

Saint John, N.B., Dec. 12 —(CP)— This city on Wednesday was feeling the pinch of a milk strike called yesterday by at least half of the milk suppliers of the Saint John area. Full impact of the hold-out is not expected to be felt until tomorrow.

While the New Brunswick Dairy Products Commission studied the question of production costs to milk producers, T. K. Desmond, president of the Milk Producers Association, said the strike was about 75 per cent effective.

He said that about 30 per cent of the normal milk supply entered Saint John yesterday, 80 per cent of all producers in Saint John county withheld their milk, and that about 25 per cent of non-association members were supporting the strike.

The association is claiming that higher production costs necessitated the strike and it is demanding an increase of 35 cents per 100 pounds of milk, a total of $3.80. An application to the Dairy Products Commission for the increase has been refused.

Dr. L. A. Donovan, chairman of the commission, last night estimated that about half of the suppliers for the Saint John area were involved in the strike — 160 of a total of 312. Greater Saint John has a population of about 81,000.

Hospitals and other institutions are getting first consideration in the drastic shortage as the strike entered into full swing without picketing or violence. So far, there has been no rush on stores for condensed milk and evaporated milk.

Present retail price of milk here is 15 cents a quart, an increase of four cents over the rate last spring. Granting of the producers' demand probably would necessitate a further increase of one cent.

HIGHER SUGAR DIET MAY CURB HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE

New York, Dec. 12 — (CP)—Dr. Hans Selye, director of experimental medicine at the University of Montreal, believes that better food selection aimed at a higher sugar content in the diet may help curb high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, stomach ulcers and rheumatism—"the price we pay for success."

He said his theory for preventing stress-induced ailments also calls for reducing the amount of meat and salt in the diet.

New Gales Batter Coasts of Britain And North France

London, Dec. 12 —(AP)— New gales lashed the coasts of Britain and northwestern France yesterday.

The Gulf of Gascony was swept by a violent storm which carried away 40 yards of seawall at Hendaye and caused extensive damage elsewhere.

Near Portland, Eng., a "mystery vessel" with no one aboard was wrecked against rocks. Coast guards said she appeared to have been from 50 to 80 feet long and speculated that she might have been a French or Belgian fishing boat.

TO SPEND $100 MILLION

Buck Hill Falls, Pa., Dec. 11 —(AP) — The Methodist Church in the United States will spend more than $100,000,000 in new buildings to cope with shifting population trends, predicts Dr. Earl R. Brown, home missions executive secretary.

Dr. Brown told a meeting last night that "a new strategy in church building" will be required in the next decade to meet shifting spiritual needs.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1946

Cost of Producing Cheese Milk Substantially Exceeds Returns From Factories Commission Told

Leading Eastern and Western Ontario dairy farmers told the Royal Commission on milk which ended its inquiry here today under Justice Dalton Wells, that the cost of production of cheese milk substantially exceeded the returns from factories. They concurred in the statement that the producer would be satisfied with returns of cost of production plus a margin of from five to 7 1-2 per cent profit.

John L. Ballantine, Atwood Ont., dairyist, who operates a herd of 25 pure bred dairy cattle stated that his cost of production was $2.79 per 100 pounds of milk while he received $1.96 for the same amount from the cheese factory.

Leeds county dairy farmer Wylie Coon, president of the Ontario Cheese Producers Association said that his cost per 100 lbs of cheese milk was $3.20 with returns of 2.05 which included a 10 cents per hundred pounds cost of haulage." Coon said, however, "that if he relied on older cows instead of young milch heifers, his costs of production would be somewhat lower."

Cost $2.88 Per 100 lbs

Ballantine told the commission that the result of a survey in his western Ontario district revealed the average cost of production for cheese milk was $2.88, while returns averaged $2.00 per hundred pounds.

It took 4 1-2 months of milk production at present day scales, he told C.A. Kemp, Cheese Producers Association counsel, to pay labor costs of $900 yearly for one man. Labor costs have tripled in the past 35 years while milk prices have only doubled. Machinery costs have more than tripled over that period of time.

"Average production per cow in Western Ontario was 8,000 pounds of milk yearly as against 6,000 in Eastern Ontario," he said. This was due to the fact that the majority of Western Ontario dairy farmers had cows freshen in the fall instead of the Spring. Production was greater but he was not prepared to say it was more economical.

No Outlet

"Eastern Ontario farmers," he said, "have their cows freshen in the Spring and let them dry in winter because there is no profitable outlet for the milk then. There are practically no fluid milk outlets for the majority and the greater number of cheese factories do not operate on a twelve-month basis.

Mr. Ballantine thought the British system of pooling milk with diversions to the different categories would work here if properly studied with regard to variations and differentials. The flat price idea was a good one because it would assure a steady flow of fluid milk and be a means of remedying shortages in other categories. This would result in a lower price to the consumer and less cost to the producer.

Questioned by Beverly Matthews K.C., commission counsel, as to ways in which the government could assist in increase in milk production, Mr. Ballantine answered "by giving a substantial price increase to the producer."

More Profitable

He said that raising of livestock was more profitable than producing milk. "You are losing money on milk production?" he was asked.

"Figures don't lie," he replied.

"Is there profit in raising cattle and producing milk combined?"

"I have more money now than when I started," he said.

In Western Ontario, Mr. Ballantine pointed out, there is a noticeable decline in farm houses and buildings. Fences are depleted because farmers have not the money to maintain them.

"Have you any recommendations?" Mr. Matthews asked.

"The fundamental thing is to keep the producer reasonably satisfied with decent prices so he can keep a steady flow of milk coming to the consumer. He should be paid like any other man."

Ballantine thought a fair increase in prices for summer and winter milk would be 40 cents per pound.

Mr. Coon agreed in the main with Mr. Ballantine's statements but felt that cost of production plus a 7 1-2 per cent profit would be agreeable to the producer. The Ontario Cheese Producers' Association had secured the services of an economist to survey costs and the survey had revealed the producer would be satisfied with the above.

He had been one of a committee to visit Britain and study milk conditions there and he had been impressed with the pooling system. The British have done a good job but Ontario has different problems. It would take a great deal of study here. He advocated a central selling organization which would make for orderly markets. The pool system, he felt, would assure the fluid milk market and adequate supply while it could divert surplus milk to channels where it could be best utilized.

A flat or uniform price would be a good thing but there have always been differentials here and it looks as though they would have to be maintained. The proposed scheme should have one system of inspection operated by the government.

Leeds County has had artificial insemination for the past three years which was set up by the government, but now operated by farmers, and it has proved very satisfactory.

Asked by Mr. Matthews if the Producers' Association was a closely knit body which would stand together in trouble, Mr. Coon said he thought it was.

Could Not Stop Farmers

"If a price war developed and attempts were made by fluid people to get milk from cheese milk producers, are you strong enough to stand the attack?"

"We could not stop the farmer from selling where he liked."

"If there was a fixed price, could you stop the farmer from selling at any other prices-"

"No."

Barton Cronk and Burton Baxter, Prince Edward County producers for concentrated milk plants said they were breaking even on farm produce but cash crops such as canning produce, hens, berries, etc., made up for the loss in milk production.

Cronk stated that his production costs were $2.81 per 100 pounds while he received $1.95 for 3 per cent milk and $2.27 1-2 for milk testing 3.3.

Baxter stated his production costs were $3.22. Asked if he had a choice of selling milk to a cheese factory or the concentrated milk plant he said he had. He preferred the concentrated plant because its price was a little higher, it provided a year round market and there was less labor involved.

HANGED IN OFFICE

Whitby, Dec. 12. (CP)—Dr. H. Bascom, sheriff of Ontario county, disclosed last night that George Bilton was hanged in a bookkeeper's office in the Ontario County jail here when he was executed Monday for the slaying of Mrs. Theresa Laurie, 34. Dr. Bascom said: "No scaffold was built for the execution. The whole thing took place in an office occupied by the bookkeeper. A trap-door was set up. The reason for this is that we have set up a policy that if it is at all possible no executions will be held out of doors where the curious public climb trees or anything else available to see the hanging."

Jet Planes Seen Poor in Firepower

New York—Military aircraft now nearing supersonic speed through jet power plants, still lack firepower in keeping with their speed, it was said by Lieut. Col. Carl E. Reichert of the Aircraft Laboratory of the Army Air Forces Air Material command.

Colonel Reichert read a paper before the sixty-seventh annual meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, held at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

Problems of design in transonic and supersonic aircraft are only "fairy ghosts" that will soon be dispelled, he said. Among the formulas still being sought is one for a device through which a high lethal charge launched from a tactical airplane will "sniff" its way to its target, he asserted.

Only 2 Rounds On Target

At present, he said even a weapon firing at the rate of 1,000 rounds a minute cannot "get in" more than two rounds on a fifty-foot long target if the target, or plane, is travelling at 500 miles an hour with respect to the firing weapon.

Assuming that all the other problems of design and pilot performance of planes traveling in excess of 800 miles an hour had been overcome, Colonel Reichert said, the tactical value of such aircraft was only as great as its firepower. He added that at high speeds the air load on any exposed gun barrel was too great to be tolerated and said that the "good five-cent cigar" of air warfare would have to be a power device capable of launching its charge to within a few inches of the target while structurally remaining within the normal lines of the airplane.

Colonel Reichert's picture of the supersonic plane of the future was one with revolutionary aerodynamic principles that would make it bear only a vague resemblance to contemporay airplanes.

CARDINAL SELLS STORY

New York, Dec. 12 — (AP)—Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, has sold movie rights on his forthcoming novel, "The Foundling," to Chapel Films, Inc., for $120,000, it was announced yesterday at a Christmas party for 72 children from the York Foundling Hospital to which Cardinal Spellman will donate the money.

The story deals with a foundling left on the steps of St. Patrick's Cathedral and subsequent events in his life.

CHURCHILL STATUE

Shown at TOP is the first model of the proposed statue of Winston Churchill, Britain's wartime premier, which shows "Winnie" in the uniform he wore as first lord of admiralty, and which it is proposed to locate on the Cliffs of Dover overlooking the English Channel. Viggo Brandt-Erichsen, of Jaffrey, N.H., is the sculptor. The plan is for an American committee to raise funds and present the statue to England as a gift from the American people. The drawings call for a statue 76 feet high upon a base 34 feet high and 60 feet square. Four British bulldogs guard corners of the base. Each of the dogs is 14 feet high. LOWER photo shows front of the base, bearing a paraphrase of the famous words Churchill uttered in praise of the R.A.F. after the Battle of Britain.

Allisonville

Allisonville — Friends and neighbors are glad to hear Mrs. Edith McFaul is improving after undergoing two operations at Kingston General Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Ferguson and family were Monday tea hour and evening guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Warner McFaul.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kinnear and Miss Gladys Anne Kinnear were last Saturday dinner guests with Mr. and Mrs. Howard Kinnear and Murray.

Mr. and Mrs. Neil Wood and family were Friday night supper visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Wood. Little Miss Marlene Wood stayed and visited her uncle and aunt over the weekend.

Little Miss Mary Ellen McFaul was a visitor Sunday morning with Marlene Wood.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Ferguson motored to Kingston on Saturday to visit her mother, Mrs. Edith McvFaul, who is at Kingston General Hospital.

Bowerman's community, are busy practicing for a Sunday school Christmas concert, which will be put on in the Orange Hall, Allisonville.

Mrs. Ray Ferguson accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Claud Maxwell to Kingston Monday and visited her mother, Mrs. Edith McFaul.

Had Headaches, Backache; Felt Fatigued and Rundown

Food Soured in Stomach and Caused Heartburn, Acidity and Headaches. Tells How Syntona Helped Him.

"My system was rundown. I couldn't sleep well and felt terribly tired and nervous," said Mr. James Miller, a well known citizen of Freelton, Ont., in a recent statement.

"Food soured in my stomach, giving me a bloated feeling with heartburn and shortness of breath. I seemed to be always needing something for constipation and I was subject to headaches and backache.

"Several weeks ago I started taking Syntona and I began to improve steadily. Even in a few days I noticed I was having less and less distress from sour acid risings and heartburn. Now, my appetite has picked up so that I relish my meals once more. Syntona relieved my constipation, along with that troublesome suffering with backaches and headaches and my nerves are relaxed, so I sleep more soundly at night and get up mornings feeling more rested and refreshed.

"I gladly give my experience for the benefit of others who may be suffering in this same way."

If you, who read this, suffer as Mr. Miller did, get a bottle of Syntona today and find out how it can also help you. It is made from the pure liquid extracts of 12 of Nature's Finest Herbal plants and roots and acts on the stomach, kidneys, liver, bowels. Aids in the elimination of excess acids and impurities from the system and promotes better assimilation of food for increased strength and energy.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

Wanted—Rules Against Too-Slow Golf

(By F.M. in The Edinburgh Scotsman)

The whole question of the race at which golf should be played is raised, by implication at any rate, in the reference to the Royal and Ancient Club by the USGA of the general case of the slow player.

The Americans propose that there should be a new rule governing this matter, and what they have in mind apparently is disqualification of any competitor who causes undue delay or wastes time.

"Undue"— there's the rub. Some golfers need longer than others to hit their shots, and to prepare for hitting them. However the player who is obviously holding up the field must be dealt with somehow or other.

Competitive golf in this country between the wars gave us several examples of slow motion golf, and some of the things that happened even this year show that it is still with us.

The too slow golfer has not, of course escaped official attention. You need not dig far into the somewhat complex code under which we play to find that he has been dealt with.

Rule 1, which deals with priority on the course, declared that "If a match fail to keep its place on the course, and loses in distance more than one clear hole on the players in front, it shall allow the match following to pass on request being made."

That rule has had to be invoked many times, and I remember that when a member of the Royal St. George's made the request in an amateur championship to the titleholder, his action raised some controversy. Some felt that the amateur champion of the day—T. P. Perkins, by the way —should have spared the application of the rule.

The request was, however, strictly legal, and many will argue that it is immaterial whether the field is being held up by the champion or by somebody with only an outside chance of winning. One of the puzzling things sometimes is to spot why certain golfers are unusually slow. It must be in their dawdle between shots, rather than in the execution of them.

The putting greens are the scene of most of the delayed action; the nearer the hole the slower some golfers become. Their conduct at times suggests not so much concentrated preparation to putt, as rank puttscare and the delaying of the evil moment.

When I have seen much too much delay with the putter and just the same old result for all the trouble, I have been inclined to see virtue in the professional's famous "miss 'em quick" advice. My impression has often been that too much deliberation on the greens is not a help but a hindrance to the player himself.

How a rule might be framed involving disqualification for the offence of being too slow would be interesting to see. Every golfer knows a go-slow player when he sees one, but some golfers need more time than others over their shots.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was thinking about getting reddy to do my homewerk and pop was reeding his paper and ma was reeding hers, saying, O dear, where are all the old geographical barriers?

I assure you I haven't touched a thing that I haven't put back where I found it, pop said, and ma said, I'm speeking of the imaginerry geographical boundries that used to keep the various countries from leeping at each others throats at every fancied provocation and unintentional slight. In those days they had to think at least twice before going to all the trubble of assembling a big army in order to cross over somebody's plainly marked border with intent to kill, but now all you read about is more and more air bases scattered at every angle of the rialbow with more and more planes reddy to dash through the borderless air dropping bombs that have hardly been invented yet, she said.

By gollies yes, a militerry machine laughs at another country's mountain ranges the way a fat lady in a side show laughs at callories, pop said. A fair sized ocean on each side of you used to be enough to make you feel safe in bed, but now the only way to feel secure is to take the air away from above you, and how are you going to do that and still be able to breethe? Geogriffy is a lost defence, and boundry lines and rivers and mountain ranges and other so called naturel barries might as well not exist, he said, and I said, Well jimminy, pop, do you mean geogriffy is useless?

It's werse than useless, it's a hollow mockery, pop said, and I said, Well G, practically all my homewerk today is geogriffy, so now I dont have to study it.

You'll study it and like it, pop said, and ma said. Of all the perposterous ideas

Being the sad end of the subject.

MINERS' CHILDREN LOOK TO CHRISTMAS

Now that the miners have gone back to work, these children have a 50-50 chance of having their letter to Santa Claus answered on Christmas Day. Ray Engott, four, and sister, Sandra, three, of Library, Pa., whose father is a miner, are shown penning their letter to Santa.

Diesel V.S. Steam Locomotives

(By A. C. Kalmbach in "Trains" Magazine)

John L. Lewis has done more for the diesel locomotive than any man alive. The chief asset of the steam locomotive has been its ability to burn bituminous coal, our cheapest and most plentiful fuel resource. Five years ago the Diesel and the steam locomotive were roughly on equal terms as to fuel cost. The Diesel has a thermal efficiency about four times as great as that of the conventional steamer, but five years ago Diesel oil cost about four times as much per heat unit as did coal. Not now, however. The Lewis insistence upon constantly higher wages for coal miners, coupled with opposition to mine mechanization, has raised the price of locomotive coal 51.1 per cent in five years while Diesel oil has gone up only 24 per cent.

What this will mean to the miners will gradually become evident for railroads use more than one-fifth of all United States coal. What it means to the railroads is much more rapid Dieslilization than would otherwise have been the case. Union Pacific has even converted all present coal burning steam passenger locomotives to oil burners and when steam locomotives burn oil Diesel power is not far off.

Well this new fuel situation really mean the demise of the steam locomotive, the most magnificent machinery ever designed by man? From the performance standpoint, either a steam locomotive or a Diesel can be designed to meet almost any operating requqirements. The steam locomotive has met and exceeded the top speeds of Diesel operation. Only essential difference between the two machines is that the steam locomotive, not having any "gear shift," delivers its maximum horsepower at nearly its maximum speed, giving snappy acceleration at high speeds, while the Diesel, with its electric transmission, can use its maximum horsepower over nearly the full speed range, thus giving it greater tractive power at low speeds.

As far as railroad management is concerned the Diesel vs. steam argument settles down largely to economics. The steam locomotive costs much less to buy, about one-third as much per horsepower. Maintenance costs are about the same.

When it comes to availability the Diesel can put in more hours, per day. It doesn't need boiler washing, fire cleaning, and other such attentions. But on many railroad assignments schedules do not permit using a locomotive for more than a portion of the day anyway. No steam locomotive could round trip on the Denver Zephyr, but on the other hand the average overnight freight run or the local or suburban passenger run allows plenty of time for steam locomotive maintenance.

Lighter axle loading and lack of track pound is a definite point in favor of the Diesel. Steam locomotives must often be restricted to certain divisions. A new locomotive may mean strengthening bridges over the entire main line. But the Diesel spreads its weight over more drivers and can go almost anywhere on the railroad. Branch line curves are no obstacle to mainline Diesels. And the lack of reciprocating parts eliminates the unbalance which causes the steam locomotive to give a hammer blow on the rail every time the wheels go 'round. Cities art crying "Smoke" at every plume of steam, and this doesn't help the social position of the steam locomotive.

What does it all add up to? Until John L. Lewis started kiting the price of coal the score, taking everything into consideration was about even. Now it isn't but some railroads will continue to use steam because of location in coal territory or because of the importance of coal in their traffic streams. No railroad ever made money hauling company fuel deadhead, but railroads do make money hauling coal for someone else—12.6 per cent of normal gross revenues. One railroad president suggested "If I were the Chesapeake and Ohio I'd hire speakers to go about the country selling all other roads on using coal burning engines, and then I'd convert the Chesapeake and Ohio to hauling coal with Diesel power."

Right now only 67 steam locomotives are on order for United States railroads, as against 500 Diesels. Last month 8 per cent of all passenger train miles were pulled by Diesel, 3.4 per cent of freight, and 25.5 per cent of switching hours were performed by Diesel. And these percentages are all going up, fast.

In the long run a decreasing supply of oil may assert itself, but by then the new gas turbine locomotive or the steam turbine may have taken over. Or the Diesel itself may have been converted to burning some coal oil emulsion or powdered coal.

As for us and most other lovers of railroads, including even some Diesel men, we'll never find anything to replace the thrill of the steam locomotive at work. Its naked machinery, functional in the extreme is the personification of power and we hope it stays on the American scene for many decades to come.

Father and Brother Visit Wm. Jewitt

Windsor, Dec. 11—(CP)—William (Bill) Jewitt, 17-year-old Leamington high school student charged with the hammer slaying of his mother last Friday, was visited in the Essex County jail Monday by his father, George Jewitt, and his twin brother, Jack.

It was young Jewitt's first visit with any member of his family since he was arrested about an hour after Mrs. Muriel Jewitt, 50, was slain in the kitchen of the family home in Leamington. Accompanying Mr. Jewitt and Jack was Charles Fletcher of Leamington, the family's solicitor.

Keith Laird, Windsor barrister, has been retained as counsel for Jewitt, who is scheduled to appear Thursday in Magistrate's Court.

Burrs

Burrs—The ladies of Crofton and Bowerman's W.A.'s are to be congratulated on the splendid returns made from the bazaars they recently sponsored. On Wednesday evening at the Hall, Allisonville, following a pleasing program presented by local and Wellington talent. A cafeteria tea and sale of articles was held by Bowerman's W.A. when $50 was realized. The following Saturday at Picton market the Crofton W.A. held a sale of home cooking and of numerous other articles with receipts amounting to nearly $80.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Diggins, Georgetown, were recent weekend guests of their sons, Hugo and Omar and their families. On the Saturday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Diggins and Lynda entertained for them at a dinner when Mr. and Mrs. Omar Diggins, Peter, Mr. and Mrs. W. Chatwood and baby, were their guests. On Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Omar Diggins and Peter entertained for them when the same company was present.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Huffman and Mr. George Huffman were recent Sunday guests of Mr. John Anderson and Miss Lillian Anderson, Mountain View. The following Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Huffman were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Bakers Trenton.

Mrs. Stanley Werden in company with her brother, Mr. Kenneth Pooley, attended the Ice Capades at Toronto on Wednesday afternoon and were tea hour guests of Mr. Robert Roundell and Miss Iva Roundell. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fox and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hubbs were also among those attending the Ice Capades.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Parks and Donna were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Maxwell, of Bowermans.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hall and Sharon, Christian Street, were Wednesday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hall.

Miss Sandra Green, Victoria, was the weekend guest of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Brooks.

Mrs. Val Squire and Lois, attended the W.A. at Crofton Hall on Thursday afternoon.

Miss Caskey, Frankford, was the weekend guest of Miss Doris Blakely.

Mrs. Morley Moran and Marymeri, accompanied Mr. Moran to Montreal, where they will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. Snell and family, this week. They will also attend the Ice Capades while in the city.

A newscast this morning stated that only two other Decembers on record could claim such mild weather one place recording a temperature of 82 degrees for Sunday. Last Monday the school children, the boy element especially, took advantage of the sudden drop in temperature to enjoy the ice and went sliding back and forth on their stomachs through a culvert that is in the proximity of the school. The ice in this somewhat secluded spot was not too solid and one small lad when near the centre sank from sight all but the top of his head and was pulled to safety by two fellow playmates. The warmth of the school room was immediately sought where a complete disrobing was found expedient with the young man wrapping himself in the folds of a larger pupil's coat while his garments were hung to dry around the stove.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Burr were Tuesday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Munro.

Mr. and Mrs. Omar Diggins and Peter, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hall. Mrs. Clifford Hough and Ronald were afternoon callers at the same home.

NEW BRUNSWICK VETERAN ESTABLISHES SUCCESSFUL ART CENTRE

Saint John's first art gallery, the Norman R. Cody Art Centre, launched with $200 capital and D.V.A. assistance by ex-soldier and artist Norman Cody, left, has been visited by 10,000 people since its opening on July 4th. Equipped and decorated on an original investment of $200 from Cody's war service gratuities, the one-time soap factory now houses the finest collection of arts and handicrafts in the province. Exhibitions of children's work are a regular feature of the art centre and classes in art appreciation are conducted weekly. Parents Imprisoned For Four Months For Child Neglect Kitchener, Dec. 12 —(CP)— For neglecting three of their four children to the extent where two infants were found blue with cold and frostbitten, a farmer and his wife living north of nearby Waterloo were sentenced to four months imprisonment.

The magistrate who heard the case in domestic court declined to reveal the names of the convicted couple. Application will be made by the Children's Aid Society to have the children declared their permanent wards.

K. D. Kayler, C.A.S. superintendent, said two infants, 14 months and 2½ years, were being cared for by their 13-year-old sister after their parents deserted them. The house was without food, fuel or toilet facilities and the children lived in one room with a dog and five pups.

GERMAN SCIENTISTS NOW WORKING FOR U. S. GOVERNMENT

Dr. Alex Lippisch, prominent German scientist now working for the U. S. army research department at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, is shown ABOVE with a drawing of the German ME-163 jet-propelled plane known to American fliers as the "ball of fire." This plane was designed by Dr. Alex Lippisch, member of a group of German scientists who came to the United States voluntarily to work for the U. S. government. Shown at RIGHT in the field laboratory are Dr. Helmut Heinrich, LEFT, and Dr. Theodore Knacks, with the ribbon-type parachute designed by Dr. Knack, which allows air to pass through the chute instead of spilling out from underneath — thus decreasing the sidesway.

Immediate Revival of German Export Trade Only Solution Gravest Problem Says Expert

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Duesseldorf, Germany, Dec. 12 —(CP)—Dr. Hubert Gross, German economist who has a wide following in the British occupation zone, says solution of Germany's gravest problems and those of the Allied control authorities is to permit immediate revival of German export trade.

Now editor of the financial and commercial weekly "Handelsblatt," only paper of its kind in the British zone, Dr. Gross was correspondent in New York for the German Financial News Service, before the war.

"With exports we can pay for our own imports and the financial burden on the British in this zone will be greatly reduced," he said. "From the Ruhr we can send abroad cutlery, chemicals, electrical equipment and spare machine parts, and from other parts of the zone could go textiles and synthetic-rubber products."

Any such export program was being "systematically prevented," he said, and British authorities were "throttling all attempts to trade, particularly with Belgium and Holland."

"The German economic organization advises me that in April our exports were about $8,000,000 and they rose to about $12,000,000 by August. But this is made up practically entirely of coal, with the remainder in pit drops and logs. We aren't getting imports on these exports."

Accustomed to Plan.

The British plan to nationalize the major Rhur industries would not make much difference to the Germans. "We're accustomed to public ownership of many big organizations but it would be bad to nationalize the smaller ones."

Meanwhile removal of industrial plants from the Ruhr as reparations to the Allies is proceeding slowly. So far only six plants totalling 167,000 tons, including steel structure, are being dismantled and shipped away.

This is a mere drop in the bucket compared with the program originally envisaged of stripping the long-time armament making Ruhr of industry, which would be surplus to an agreed peacetime level of production.

The source of delays seems to be difficulties in the Allied Control Council in Berlin, which is responsible for earmarking plants to be dismantled.

Reparations officials in Duesseldorf said they have 300 plants in the Ruhr and other parts of the north Rhine — Westphalia district of the British zone which are potential ones to be dismantled; but they have only been instructed to take an inventory of 190.

Of the six plants being dismantled, four are ticketed for Russia as advance reparations. On one big Krupp plant, which includes a blast furnace, steel rolling mill and a foundry all going to Russia, 2,000 workers are doing the job.

Million Dollar Project Will Make History in N.S. Mining Industry

By JOHN TRACY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Stellarton, N.S., Dec. 12 —(CP)— A $1,000,000 project that will make history in Pictou county's 145-year-old mining industry and give Nova Scotia coal a hitch in its competition with the American product was being pushed by miners and construction men today.

Part of the two-fold project is the opening of the first fully mechanized colliery in the province. With an estimated life of 23 years, the new mine will tap the McBean Seam, a 5,000,000-ton coal reserve, giving jobs to at least 200 miners when it starts production by next autumn.

The other half of the project is a coal washing plant, capable of turning the new colliery's production into 800 tons of clean coal daily as well as handling the 1,600 tons a day from other mines in the area.

Engineers of Acdaia Coal Company, operating the project, estimate that the electrical machinery to be installed in the mine will enable it to show a production record of five tons a man-shift. This compares with last year's provincial average of 1.58, the lowest in 45 years.

Clean Out Workings.

At present, pumps are sucking water out of old workings. When the shaft is dry and the power will be turned on and the drive will start towards a point 1,200 feet underground where the coal reserve, untouched since 1839, will be tapped.

Mining men already have seen the possibility of the new operation opening the way to an increase in Nova Scotia's coal production which fell from 8,000,000 tons in 1913 to 5,177,000 last year.

Coal is normally cleaned by men who remove the rocks and inferior lumps as it slides past them on a picking table. Operators admit that this method has not been entirely satisfactory and that some inferior coal has reached the market.

In the washing plant, however, masses of water more sensitive than the human eye or hand will separate the good coal from the bad. Clean coal will be removed from the surface while inferior grades will sink, later to be crushed, re-purified and burned in pithead power-houses.

Looking at the project from the human side, it will remove the ghost town threat that has hovered over the nearby community of Thorburn.

The last mine in the community was worked out in 1938 and 200 families found themselves without a livelihood until war industry mushroomed.

But with post-war employment in the area's manufacturing industries down, the ghost town threat re-appeared, Now, with the opening of the McBean Seam underlying the village, many of its wage-earners will again find jobs.

POOR HERRING SEASON

Port Arthur, Dec. 12 (CP)— With the last few days of the herring fishing season in sight and no immediate signs of colder weather, fishermen operating out of Port Arthur are faced with one of the poorests seasons in years,. it was reported yesterday. A survey of wholesale fish distributors here today indicated a "great deal of wastage" had been caused by the recent mild weather. It was said much of the fish which would normally have gone to the consumer market could now be used only for animal feed.

Arctic Military exercises of Canada, Russia and the United States are indicated on this map, which also shows vital geographical position of Canada in any scheme for North American defence. Soviet military operations are secret, but Russia has disclosed 450 hydrographic expeditions are establishing Arctic radio beacons and radar stations.

(By Central Canadian Press)

Canada and the United States are "wide open" to aerial attack through our continental rooftop—the Arctic—according to military stategists, Canadian defence experts are saying little on the subject, but, determined to plug what they see as a chink in their defences, all branches of the American military forces are conducting intensive manoeuvers in the frigid northland this winter

American troops fought in steaming jungles, in mud and snow, in mountainous terrain and on the deserts during World War II, but their only Arctic campaign was in the bleak Aleutians—and the campaign against Attu Island was a costly one because of lack of experience in combating Arctic climates and lack of suitable clothing and equipment to fight the type of war that was required. Canadians landed in Iceland and in Spitsbergen, both within the Arctic zone and on Kiska; it was cold weather fighting too, in the Italian mountains and in the snow-covered mud, snow and cold of a European winter.

"Should there be another war it will be an aerial war and will open the whole Arctic as a stadium of conflict," Gen. Carl Spaatz, commander of the U.S. Army Air Forces, has warned. The reactions of men and machines, weapons and equipment, to sub-zero cold and Arctic storms are being tested by the United States, Great Britain and Russia in a variety of exercises.

Gen. Carl Spaatz, U.S. Army Air Forces commander, says that the U.S. (and Canada) is vulnerable to attack from the Arctic.

American manoeuvers in the Arctic are divided into three task forces. Operation Frigid, based at Fairbanks, Alaska, and engaging more than 1,500 troops, will test new fighting equipment much of it initiated by the Canadian army, in dry-cold with temperatures as low as 66 degrees below zero. Operation Williwaw, a seven-months expedition to the Aleutians. will base at Adak and will manoeuver in the "wet -cold" of that region, where freakish storms known as "williwaws," snow, sleet, high-leocity winds and temperatures reaching 35 degrees below zero offer a challenge to the efficiency of any military force. Operation Iceberg takes five submarines into the icefields north of Alaska carrying on from the expedition of last winter when a carrier and three destroyers manoeuvered near the Arctic circle.

Canadian exercises carried out during and immediately after the war, necessarily in some secrecy, covered much of the technical ground which the Americans are now exploring and experience gained in those exercises will be drawn upon to make this year's tests more complete. The well publicized "Exercise Musk-ox" of early 1946 sent 15 Canadian army snowmobiles over 3,100 miles of virtually untracked, snow and ice-bound wilderness and proved that fast moving force can be kept going by aerial supply in an area where no recognized bases exist. It also supplied opportunity for testing a wide variety of newly developed clothing and equipment, useful both to civilians and any military force called upon to fight a campaign under similar weather and ground conditions. American military observers accompanied the "Musk-ox" moving force, and doubtless have used the knowledge gained therein to plan their own manoeuvers.

While the war raged and when an attack on Norway was still on the Allied schedule, exercises "Eskimo" and "Polar," both Canadian army operations gave this country and her allies the first elaborate military tests in dry-cold and wet-cold conditions.

Although no large Canadian exercises have been announced for this Winter, an experimental station has been set up at Churchill, Man., and staffed with some 500 to 600 personnel of the army, navy and R.C.A.F., who will engage in further testing of equipment already available, and research aimed toward improving and developing new clothing, machinery and increasing our meteorological knowledge of the Canadian Arctic. Churchill was selected because it supplies extremes of heat and cold, and almost constant winds such as blow steadily across the Arctic tundras and yet is readily accessible by rail and air.

There will be American observers at Churchill, and it is fairly safe bet that Canada, with her vast Arctic interests and geographical position in the balance, will share in the knowledge, military or otherwise, garnered by the American expeditions.

PROPOSAL TURNED DOWN

Chatham, Dec. 12 — (CP) — Chatham Board of Trade on Tuesday rejejcted a proposal that a petition be sent to the government requesting that no further priorities be issued for government building projects "which would have a detrimental effect upon private enterprise."

The Board felt that such a protest would have little or no effect, and would result in no immediate easing of the situation in which materials are in scant supply.

Shortages Still Heavy Burden on U.K. Women

By DENISE DALTEOFF
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London. (CP) — Gilbert and Sullivan today could parody their own "Pirates of Penzance" to say a British housewife's lot is not a happy one.

Even the speech from the throue opening Labor's second session drew attention to her difficulties.

"My ministers recognize that the housewives of the nation have had to bear a specially heavy burden owing to the shortages of houses, of food-stuffs and other consumer goods," it said.

"It will be their constant endeavor to alleviate the hardships and inconveniences caused by this legacy from the years of war."

During 1946 this legacy was lightened only slightly. There are hints of more sugar and jam next spring, but meantime basic rations are no better, on the whole than when the war was on. The few increases have been countered by cuts in other commodities and the bringing under "points" control of many extra foods.

There is more fruit, and more fish—important in a country where each person gets only 1s. 4d. (27 cents) worth of meat each week. Kitchen equipment can be bought again.

This is one of the sure signs that store shelves are being filled as industry completes its reconversion. Scores of things which couldn't be found a year ago are available now. Everyone has a few more clothing coupons this rationing period, and the indication is the allocation will go up again in early 1947.

Even a few nylons are on sale—but just a few, with no promise of enough for all until 1948.

Needed in Industry

But despite the housewife's obvious difficulties, women still went back into the home during 1946—faster than Prime Minister Attlee's government, faced with a serious over-all manpower shortage—liked to see.

The Auxiliary Territorial Service, Women's Auxiliary Air Force and Women's Royal Naval Service cut their strength almost two-thirds, from 296,000 at the end of 1945 to less than 110,000. Despite this extra womenpower, the number of women in industry dropped by about 1,000,000 mostly because married women left industry.

These were other developments affecting women and children during 1946.

Equal pay—a Royal Commission headed by Lord Justice Asquith ended two years' work divided on the subject. Five commissioners found "substanial difficulties" in the way of early application of the equal pay policy between men and women, but three women members filed a memorandum of dissent.

Family allowances—Payment of 5s, ($1) a week for each child after the first was started by the Treasury in August and more than 2,000,000 families now are receiving benefits.

Pensions—Old- age and widows pensions were increased in October, first step in application of new social legislation under which women later will receive higher mothers' pensions and new maternity grants.

Child Welfare—A report on orphanages, presented to parliament, focussed attention on the need for better treament of children. Even before that report child welfare clinics, almost nonexistent before the war, were started all over England to give mothers and expectant mothers free advice.

Education — Effective next April, school-leaving age will be raised from 14 to 15, with another raise to 16 scheduled for as soon as schools and teachers are available.

QUID PRO QUO

Canadian delegates of International Student Service found when touring Czechoslovakia that students are required by law to work in government-sponsored projects during the summer in order to obtain the government university grant in the winter.

FREE TRANSPORTATION

Free railway passes to the nearest school are granted in New Zealand to children living near a railway line but out of range of the school.

Bonarlaw

Bonarlaw — On Friday evening, Dec. 6th., about thirty friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Allan McComb gathered at their home on the 12th line of Rawdon to celebrate on the occasion of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. They were presented with a handsome silver tea service by the neighbors of the community while a number of gifts were also received from relatives and out of town friends.

In the dining room the table was tastefully decorated with lighted candles and pink and white streamers and centred with a three-tier wedding cake. Guests were served by six young ladies, while Mrs. Joe. McEwan of Belleville and Mrs. Hugh Jones of Stirling poured tea. The evening was enlivened by instrumental and vocal music.

Rev. J. M. Brownlie, acting as chairman, paid tribute to the sterling qualities of Mr. and Mrs. McComb and their splendid family and on behalf of their numerous friends wished them many more years of wedded life, health, prosperity and happiness.

Lindsay Mumby, Kenneth Bain and J. F. Baker in short addresses expressed the same wish. Mr. Baker spoke of the assistance Mr. and Mrs. McComb and family have given in the work of the church, three of the family being members of the choir; and Mr. McComb now a church warden. Mr. Mumby and Mr. Bain stated that they had always found Mr. and Mrs. McComb good neighbors and friends of whom all might be proud.

Replying, Mr. McComb thanked the speakers for their kind remarks, stating that he had honestly tried to be a good neighbor and if at any time he left undone things which he should have done, or had done those things which he should not have done, he was sincerely sorry. He stated that at his home the latch key was always on the outside and everyone was welcome.

Mrs. McComb also thanked those assembled for all their kindnesses and for the beautiful gifts.

The National Anthem closed a very pleasant evening.

MOTHER RECEIVES CROSS

Winnipeg, Dec. 12. (CP)— For the first time in the history of Manitoba, a Victoria Cross was presented at Government House here yesterday. Recipient of the posthumous award to PO. Andrew Charles Mynarski, who sacrificed his life in an effort to save that of a comrade, was his mother, Mrs. Stanley Mynarski. The late Winnipeg flier died on June 12, 1944, as a result of burns received when he tried to free Rear Gunner PO. George P. Brophy of Fort William, from the gun turret of a blazing Lancaster over France.

Peacetime Force is Built As Men Return from War

By JOHN LEBLANC
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa (CP)—Nineteen forty-six was the year the boys came home—and the year before a handful of farsighted young men laid the foundtion for Canada's strongest peacetime armed force.

The complicated, drawn-out task of repatriating hundreds of thousands of sailors, soldiers and airmen now is within a few hundreds of completion and recruiting is moving steadily toward the combined three-service goal of 53,100.

The Navy's first winter cruise Arctic studies by the Army, and R.C.A.F. plans for full-scale, Dominion-wide flying activities all are under way.

R.C.N. and R.C.A.F. repatriation is complete and all but about 1,800 army men are due to reach home by Christmas The others are expected to sail for the Dominion early in January. About the same time the approximate 500 wives and dependents of Canadian servicemen still in the United Kingdom will leave.

The recruiting box score:

Navy—8,600 of its 10,000 objective has been reached.

Army—15,000 of 25,000, with more than 27,000 all ranks now of "undetermined status."

Air Force—12,500 of 18,100.

A keynote of the services peacetime plans is more "home atmosphere" away from home—and more pay.

Reduction of war complements means more comfort aboard R.C.N. ships and officials say every effort is made to have men serve at the coast nearest their homes.

The Army plans dozens of barracks improvements—hospital type beds instead of bunks dressers, book shelves, lounges—and abolition of the traditional "lights out" and early -morning blanket folding routine. The R.C.A.F. plans similar barracks embellishments.

Navy Strength

The navy will have two aircraft carriers, two cruisers, 12 destroyers, 18 frigates, 12 minesweepers and auxiliary vessels. A reserve force of 18,000 will train at establishments across the country and will spend about two weeks afloat during the summer.

First peacetime winter cruise saw the cruiser Uganda meet the carrier Warrior and her escorting destroyer Crescent in the Pacific off Mexico in November. After training manoeuvres in southern waters they will sail to Esquimalt, B.C., early in 1947.

The army will have a striking head of 10,000 in an air landing brigade group. The other 15,000 men will be spread through the new five operational area commands and many will provide training staffs for the 180,000-man reserve.

First large-scale undertaking after V-J Day was Exercise Muskox, a 3,100-mile journey through the Arctic from Churchill, Man., to Edmonton. Supplied by R.C.A.F. aircraft, Muskox was an example of successful inter-service co-operation and helped speed solution of Arctic problems relating to clothing, equipment and vehicles.

Later in Exercise North, a group of Pacific Command officers inspected the Alaska highway region to acquaint themselves with probable difficulties in the event of sub-Arctic warfare.

Churchill is the base for continuing cold weather exercises aimed at a study of northland defence problems. Five thousand Canadians and a large force of United States Army personnel will be stationed there soon.

The R.C.A.F. in addition to a 16,100-man regular force and 2,000 men in the northwest staging route, will have an auxiliary force of 4,500 and a reserve of 10,000. The regular formations will include eight operational squadrons — two bomber-reconnaissance, two transport, one fighter reconnaisance and an air observation squadron.

Auxiliary squadrons will be formed in these cities: Halifax, Quebec, Montreal (2), Ottawa, Toronto (2), Hamilton, London, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Edmonton, Vancouver and Victoria. The reserve will be composed almost entirely of men who served in the R.C.A.F. during the war.

Seventeen Cases In Police Court

Trenton — In Trenton police court on Tuesday afternoon last, 17 cases were brought before Magistrate T. Y. Wills and Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C.

Eugene Forshee, charged with fraud, received suspended sentence for six months after signing bond for $200 and paying costs of court.

The following seven persons charged with a Breach of the Liquor Control Act, were each fined $13: H. A. Buck, Archie McCullough, Dalton Allison, Alfred Lambert, Joseph Parent, Kenneth Tannahill.

G. W. Thompson charged with careless driving had his case enlarged to December 17th.

W. J. Wilson was fined $7.50 for speeding.

Meddy Mallett and Simone Hiamel charged with theft were each given suspended sentence of six months after paying costs of court.

Jean Dunbar appeared on a theft charge and her case was laid over until December 17th.

James McLeod, charged with assault, was fined $1 and $5 costs.

Ran Into Train.

Ivan Stewart who was alleged to have assaulted a police officer, had his case enlarged for one week.

On Tuesday a truck owned and operated by Vaclav Stack of Batawa was proceeding away from the Trenton Armouries when it ran into the rear of a slow moving train. Stack evidently did not notice the train moving and when the two came in contact with each other, the truck was pushed off the track damaging the left front fender and grill. The engineer of the train was Mr. T. Burden, Henry Street, Trenton, and the accident was witnessed by W. Whalen of Belleville and H. Pidgeon of the same city, both brakemen.

Struck by Car.

Charles Phillips of R. R. No. 3, Belleville, was travelling west on Dundas Street, East, on Tuesday last, when a child ran from the south curb directly into the path or the moving vehicle. The child, Sandra Asan, 162 Dundas Street, E., age five years, was knocked to the pavement by the left headlight and fender. She received a cut over the right eye which required stitches to close, also a bruise on her right hand. The accident was witnessed by Foster Rosenplot, Trenton, and Arthur Lockwood, a taxi driver, the latter taking the little girl to the office of Dr. J. V. Byrne for medical care. Constable Walter Youmans investigated the accident.

The presence of the Canadian aircraft carrier, "Warrior," cruiser, "Uganda," and destroyer, "Crescent," in Mexican waters made it possible for Canada to be represented by 100 officers and men at the inauguration ceremonies of the president of Mexico, Miguel Aleman. Captain F. L. Houghton, C.B.E., R.C.N., commanding officer of "Warrior," was naval attache to the Canadian special mission at the inauguration. The photograph shows the Canadian contingent marching before the Palace of Fine Arts, where the inauguration ceremony took place, as President Aleman was about to assume office.

Rawdon Junior Farmers Meet

The Rawdon Junior Farmers held their December meeting in the Department of Agriculture office at Stirling on Tuesday evening with 17 members answering the roll call. Two new members, Delbert McComb and Earl Thompson, joined the club.

President Dave Fargey announced the Eastern Ontario Junior Farmer Conference being held in January at Kemptville and Bob Cosby and Jack Dunham were named as club delegates.

Guest speaker for the evening was .Hary W. Burns assistant agricultural representative who showed a set of slides on weed control in eastern Ontario. A program committee of Wesley Finch, Ted Polock and Don Spencer was named to act at the January meeting while a program was also drawn up for the next six months.

103-YEAR-OLD FAN OF MOVIES TAKES A TRIP

Lincoln, Me., Dec. 12—(AP)—Safely back home, 103-year-old Warren F. Butler paid no attention today to the furore aroused by his 24-hour "disappearance"—he just went to the movies again, as he does three times a week. After Tuesday night's movie show he took an early morning train to Portland, had his eyes examined at a hospital, and came home again on another train yesterday.

Hollywood Photographer Dies

Hollywood, Dec. 12 — (AP) — Frank S. Hoover, 73, who opened one of the first photographic studios in Hollywood, died yesterday aboard a train in Wyoming, friends were advised.

Abortive Revolt In Venezuela Lasts 12 Hours

By SAM DAWSON

Caracas, Venezuela, Dec. 12 — (AP)—The government of President Romulo Betancourt emerged unscathed today after an abortive 12-hour revolt yesterday in which insurgents made a bold bid to capture the President and overthrow his year-old revolutionary cabinet.

"All is okay," Betancourt told newspapermen last night. He said all the instigators either had been captured or had fled the country. There were no fatalities and only a few were wounded, he added.

Many of the insurgents—seeing that their revolt had failed—took planes, which they captured at the outset of the uprising, and attempted to flee the country, the President said, but most of the ships soon ran out of gas, and were picked up by government forces after making forced landings.

To ships succeeded in reaching Caracas, where both pilots and 14 mechanics surrendered to authorities. In one of the planes was Maj. Carlos Maldonado Pena, described as a leader of the revolt.

"The leaders of the rebellion will get jail sentences," Betancourt said. "There will be no executions. The rebels were definitely linked with the faction of Lopez Contreras and (Gen. Isalas) Medina Angarita, both former presidents and leaders of the party overthrown in the revolution of Oct. 18, 1945."

Betancourt came to power after that uprising, and his party recently won the recent elections. A constitutional assembly is scheduled to meet Monday.

Queensboro

Queensboro — Mrs. L. Parsons, Toronto, is visiting her sister Miss Ida McCaw.

Mrs. Cecil Holland and children, of Crookston, spent a few days last week with Mr. and Mrs. Allan Holmes.

The Agricultural Society made it possible for the Girls' Clubs of Hastings to spend Monday in Peterborough. The girls numbering approximately one hundred and fifty went through the Canada Packers, The Quaker Oats Company and the CHEX radio station. Twenty-one members from Queensboro Club were privileged to enjoy this trip.

Miss Margaret Roushorn, Belleville, spent the weekend with her parents Mr. and Mrs. James Roushorn.

Mrs. H. Goodmurphy has returned home after spending the past week with relatives at Consecon.

Mr. Winston Parsons spent the weekend with relatives at Toronto.

Mr. Roy Rollins is a patient in Belleville General Hospital.

Misses Jean, Patricia and Carol Moore spent the weekend with their aunt Mrs. John Thompson.

Mr. Ray LaPalm spent the weekend with Mr. Felix LaPalm of Hamilton.

Mrs. Geo. S. Patten has returned home after spending the past week with relatives at Toronto.

Mr. Will Greatrix has returned home after visiting with relatives in Madoc.

A dance was held in the Orange Hall on Friday night sponsored by the Homemakers' Club of Cooper and Queensboro.

Howard Broad, R.C.A., Mountain View, spent last week with his mother, Mrs. N. Broad.

EDMONTON TEAM ACCEPTS INVITE TO TOUR EUROPE

Squad Western Canada Finalists Last Year in Junior Playdowns

Edmonton, Dec. 12 — (CP) — Officials of the Edmonton Canadians, western junior finalists last season, announced last night that the club had agreed to accept an invitation from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association to represent Canada in the European hockey championships at Prague, Czechoslovakia, in February.

Herb Shires, director of hockey for the Canadian Athletic Club which sponsors Canadians, said the club had agreed to accept provided final arrangements proved satisfactory. "We are now awaiting clarification of the complete arrangements," he said.

The invitation was extended to Canadians last Tuesday after being turned down by a number of other top Canadian sextets, including Calgary Stampeders and Hamilton Tigers, winners and runners-up, respectively of the Allan Cup last season, and the National junior titleholders, Winnipeg Monarchs.

The Edmonton youngsters will be faced with a difficult reputation to uphold if, and when, they sail from New York January 18 carrying Canadian colors into the European puck wars.

Lost One Series

Canadian clubs have almost invariably dominated former International hockey contests. Only once has Canada lost a major International Amateur Hockey series — that was during the 1936 Olympics when goalie Jimmy Foster almost single-handed turned back Canadian puckchasers to win the world's title for England.

Canadians will be the second Edmonton club to tour Europe. In November, 1932, Edmonton Superiors, a senior team, routed European opposition. They won 36 games and lost one.

Canadians' record last year was well above the average. They swept through the junior league schedule here without a loss, won the Alberta title in two straight games, conquered Nanaimo Clippers of British Columbia three games to one and ousted the Saskatchewan champions, Moose Jaw Canucks 4-1, before losing the western title to Winnipeg Monarchs 4-1. Monarchs eventually went on to capture the Memorial Cup.

Five Members Gone

The club will make the trip without five mainstays of the team that bowed before Monarchs last spring. Defenceman Bill Gadsby has moved to Chicago Blackhawks; Johnny Ryplen and Billy Black are with Tacoma of the Pacific Coast League and Cy Thomas and Bill Pettinger are playing for Edmonton Flyers in the Western Senior circuit.

But Canucks have added Norm Kirk, formerly of Nanaimo Clippers, Eddie Marchant of the champion Winnipeg Monarchs and Bob Gray of Oshawa Generals. Another new member to this season's lineup is Bob Goodacre, who is the leading scorer on the club this season.

Goodacre and goalie Johnny Sofiak, with the club last season, are the youngest members on the team. Both are 18 years old. Holdovers from last year include Ron Mathews, Harry Groves, Eddie Thomas, Doug Anderson, Leo Luchinni and Slats Slater.

Canadians will not strengthen the club from outside. Club officials said "We'll make the trip as we are."

HAMILTON TIGERS NOTCH 10TH WIN IN SENIOR O.H.A.

Shut Out Toronto Staffords and Move Five Full Games in Front

(By The Canadian Press)

The unbeaten Hamilton Tigers notched their tenth Senior O.H.A. victory in Hamilton last night with a clean-cut 5-0 triumph over the improved Toronto Staffords and moved a full five games in front of the five-team circuit.

Art Childs was the hero of the night as he marked up his third shut out of the season. Kicking out labelled Stafford shots all evening to rob the visitors of the better break in the scoring that their efforts deserved.

Veteran Clarry Shillington and Bert Peer netted two goals apiece for the victors while Shillington also picked up an assist on Johnny Conick's second-period counter.

In the two junior games played St. Michael's Majors surprised nobody by walloping Barrie Flyers for their 13th win in 14 starts while St. Catharines Falcons won their second straight by upsetting Stratford Kroehlers 3-2 in the Classic City.

Harrison Had Big Night

Ed Harrison had a big night in Barrie, ramming home no fewer than six goals, including four straight in a 10-minute stretch of the middle frame. Ed Sandford added two within 48 seconds in the third period and Les Costello and Fleming MacKell collected singletons.

Gord Heale scored two for the Flyers while Gariepy and Barrett got the others.

In Stratford the Falcons, who couldn't do better than a couple of tie games in their first 11 efforts, scored three goals in the last period to nullify a three-goal Stratford lead and down the fourth place Kroehlers. The win left the St. Catharines entry a point back of the eighth-place Toronto Young Rangers.

Maxie Haunn in the St. Catharines nets held off enough Stratford scoring threats to give the Falcons their victory. Jim Maxwell the juvenile graduate counted two goals and set up the third to spark his team's success for the second time in a row. MacDonald was the other St. Catharines scorer. Daniels and Robertson notched the Stratford goals.

Houston Skippers Tie Minneapolis

(By The Canadian Press)

Early in the season Minneapolis Millers appeared to be running away with the first place honors in the United States Hockey League's Northern Division, winning seven and tieing two in their first 10 games. But as the other clubs like Omaha and St. Paul began to click the lead was chopped down and finally the Millers were knocked out of the top rung.

Last night in the league's only contest Minneapolis had to go all out to tie the hapless Houston Skippers, 2-2 but the one point they gained was enough to put them in a first place deadlock with Omaha in the Northern Section.

Leo Gasparini registered both Miller goals. Paul Mundrick tallied twice for Houston, both times unassisted.

For the Skippers it was their third tie of the season against 14 defeats and only three victories.

REVIVE CUP MATCHES

Miami, Fla., Dec. 12 — (AP)—The Ryder Cup matches, to be revived in the United States in 1947, may be played earlier or later than the October date suggested by British golfers, president Ed Dudley of the Professional Golfers' Association said today.

Dudley said he had cabled England requesting that some other date be set, pointing out that in October the Ryder cuppers would be competing with football and the World Series for interest.

He had suggested September, but added that if that was too early for the visitors, the matches probably would be held in November or December.

GRAND CIRCUIT ACCEPTS PHOTO FINISH, TEST

Harness Racing Will Have Program of 25 Weeks Next Season

New York, Dec. 12 (AP)—The photo finish and the saliva test will be mandatory for the 15 member tracks participating in a record 1947 harness racing program of 25 weeks, the Board of Stewards of the Grand Circuit, Inc., has ruled.

And, as another step forward, the stewards at their 74th annual session here yesterday named a committee to study the possibility of using a mobile laboratory to take the saliva tests.

The proposal was made by Frank Wiswall of Saratoga, who suggested the laboratory could follow the circuit since there are no conflicting meets. Wherever a state racing commission has had supervision over harness racing because of pari-mutuel betting, there have been saliva tests, but at state fairs without mutuels it has not been compulsory.

The stewards, in approving the 25-week season, granted dates to three associations not on the 1946 schedule and dropped one, making a net increase of two over this year's record of 13.

The stewards dropped Old Orchard, Me., from the Grand Circuit and replaced it with Maywood, Ill., Toledo, Ohio, and Aurora, Ill., a trio of newcomers selected from a list of 20 applicants. The season will open April 29 at Hollywood, Cal., and close Oct. 18 at Aurora.

Octave Blake, South Plainfield, N.J., was elected president to succeed Charles W. Phellis, Greenwich Conn., who withdrew his nomination after serving nearly a decade.

Thomas S. Berry of Lexington, Ky., was announced as the top money-winning driver for 1946 with $98,000, and was designated to receive an appropriate trophy.

Harness racing's "derby" —the Hambletonian—will be run at Goshen, N.Y., during the Aug. 6-10 meeting but the exact date was not set. The race will have a value of $51,948. The stewards announced the award by the Trotting Horse Club of America, Inc., of other stakes at Grand Circuit tracks next year with a total value near $100,000.

Red Rolfe Takes Over Coaching Of the Huskies

(By The Canadian Press)

Robert (Red) Rolfe, brilliant third baseman of the New York Yankees when the team was known as the "Bronx Bombers of the American league, arrived at Toronto yesterday to coach Toronto Huskies, professional basketball team. Red, acquired early this week to pilot the Huskies, officially took over the basketball Association of America team soon after arriving although he had not yet signed the two-year contract offered him by Lew Hayman, Huskies' manager director. Red succeeds big Ed Sadowski as Huskies coach. The latter reportedly left the club in a huff because of newspaper criticism of his handling of the team.

Syd Howe, former star forward of Detroit Red Wings and Ottawa Senators of the National Hockey League and of St. Louis Flyers of the U.S.H.L., was back in amateur hockey ranks at Ottawa today. He was notified of his reinstatement yesterday and will play for Ottawa Senators League, a senior "B" circuit.

Maurice Richard Rockets Canadiens into Top Spot As Habitants Defeat Leafs 3-2

Boston Easily Defeats Black Hawks While Detroit and Rangers Tie

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Fiery Maurice Richard, the rocket who always seemed to fizzle on Toronto ice, saved up for two seasons for "The Big One" that swung the National Montreal Canadiens today in Hockey League lead back to their see-saw battle with Toronto's young Maple Leafs.

It was a second-period goal by the 25-year-old Richard that ended the scoring as the Canadiens edged out the Leafs, 3-2 last night. That tally, the 128th of Richard' five-year N.H.L. career, marked the first time since the 1944-45 season that Toronto customers saw him score.

The game, giving Canadiens a one-point edge over Leafs in three-game card in which all six clubs got into action.

At Boston, the third-place Bruins edged closer to the top by whiping the luckless Chicago Black Hawks, 4-1. The victory left Boston five points behind Toronto. New York Rangers and Detroit Red Wings deadlocked for fourth position, two points behind Bruins, when the played a 1-1 draw at New York.

Stage Brilliant Rally

The Canadiens had staged a brilliant rally to tie the count at 2-2 shortly before Richard shot his 14th goal of the season before a crowd of 13,815 at Toronto.

The Leafs, who held a tie and a 3-0 victory in previous games with the Habitants this season, seemed well on their way to extending the streak. Wild Bill Ezinicki, peppery Toronto winger, and Ted (Teeter) Kennedy shot them into a 2-0 lead in a rough-and-tumble first period.

The Canadiens steered clear of the bumps in the second session however, and the stratedgy paid off when Leo Gravelle and Billy Reay both beat goalie Turk Broda. With 41 seconds of the period left, Richard took a pass-out from Glenn Harmon for the winning counter.

Tied By Fluke Goal

Goalie Johnny Mowers' second comeback attempt in the Detroit nets just fell short of perfection by a "fluke" goal at New York. The Red Wings grabbed a 1-0 lead on Syd Abel's first-period tally and it wasn't until 7:01 of the third that Rangers got it back. Tony Leswick drew credit for the tally when Ab Demarco shot deflected off his stick into the Detroit net.

Mowers looked like his cat-like self.

The usual capacity crowd of 13,900 at Boston Garden watched their Bruins take an easy victory over Chicago, winners of but one game in nine starts. Veterans Bill Cowley, Milt Schmidt, Woody Dumart and Bep Guidolin tallied for Bruins while Red Hamill spoiled Frankie Brimsek's shutout.

THE BIG SEVEN

(By The Canadian Press)

Maurice Richard's goal which gave Canadiens victory over Toronto last night allowed him to come within one point of leader Billy (The Kid) Taylor, Detroit, held scoreless. Richard now has 14 goals and 10 assists for 24 points compared to Taylor's 8 and 17 for 25 points. Ted (Teeter) Kennedy, Toronto, moved into a tie for third berth with Roy Conacher, Detroit, also held scoreless. Each have 22 points. Milt Schmidt, Boston, notched a goal and an assist to take over fourth spot with 20 points.

HERSHEY BEARS 7 GAMES UP ON REST OF FIELD

Cleveland Barons Also Show Great Deal of Power in Other Division

(By The Canadian Press)

It is hardly a wonder that Hershey's Bears, who boast the best offence and defence in the American Hockey League, today stand head and shoulders above the rest of the eastern division clubs.

The Bears, whose scoring punch has clicked for an average of 4.5 goals a game, turned on their power last night to hip the weak Philadelphia Rockets 8-5 and increase their eastern division lead to seven full games over the idle New Haven Ramblers.

For Hershey's Harvey Bennett, the league's leading netminder, it was workout. Bennett, who tops the loop in shutouts with four and has the best goals against average—2.2 per game—found the Rockets a desperate club trying to snap out of one of the worst slumps in the league's history.

Philadelphia has won only two games in 24 starts, lost 19 and tied three. They are on their way to setting a league mark in goals against with 167—6.5 goals a game—so far.

Herb Cain paced the Bears with three goals. Armand Gaudreault scored twice and assisted in another and Frank Mario, Gordie Bruce and Gino Rozzini each scored once.

Phil Hergersheimer led the Rockets with a pair of goals and Wally Stefaniew, Augie Herchenratter and Muretich accounted for the others.

Barons Add To Margin

Cleveland Barons who lead the western division, also added to their margin by edging Pittsburgh Hornets 4-3 for their 17th victory in 23 starts. Given outstanding support by goalie Roger Bessette, the Barons took full advantage of their scoring opportunities. Johnny Holota, Pete Leswick, Lou Trudel and Bob Carse scored the Barons goals. Don Metz tallied twice for the Hornets.

In the league's only other game Providence Reds moved within one point of the second place New Haven club in the eastern half with a 6-4 victory over Buffalo Bisons. Charley Scherza, Bill Whittet, Vic Grigg, Bill McComb, Whitey and Bus Brayshaw notched the Providence tallies. The star for the losers was Murdo McKay who chalked up three of the Bisons' goals, Freddie Hunt getting the other.

Buffalo travels to New Haven tonight and Philadelphia plays at Springfield.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

The Cleveland Plain Dealer in a front page story of the recent Barry Hotel fire in Saskatoon, heads its yarn "11 Killed in New Canada Hotel Fire." . . . Tsk, tsk, tsk. We thought the Old Grewic editors knew better than that.

Clarence Campbell, war hero prexy of the National Hockey League, doesn't make any bones on his attitude toward the the boys and girls of sportdom getting their cut of the financial melon. At a recent sports meeting in Montreal M'sieu Campbell said, "I do say that the time has really come in sports when the girl or man who attracts the customers into the park or arena is worthy of his small share of the receipts."

So in the near future, the box offices may become the pay windows for the athletes after the final whistle has tooted. Later the N.H.L. boss said, "This is a commercial age and we are now embarked on an idea of sports where there should be less of a division between the pro and the so-called amateur." In other words the emolument, dinero, mazuma, honorarium, bonus, or just sweet charity, can now be passed across the table instead of under it.

"Danny Webb," says Tommy Dio who holds the New York state managerial contract on the whirlwind colored fighter who won the Canadian lightweight title from Dave Castilloux, "definitely did not run out on Gus Mell. He was signed for Mell under the impression that the match was December 10, not December 5, which would have given him a chance to get in shape. That's the story."

Dio claims that Webb is ready for Mell anytime. He'll go further than that, declared the dynamic little manager. "He fight KO Joe Pyle, or Mell or Castilloux and if he doesn't beat 'em he doesn't want a cent. Make no mistake. Webb is ready for anybody, but he'll want to be right physically. He needs a tonsil operation. He'll give Castilloux a return match and beat him. Mell and Pyle—he'll fight these guys on a winner take-all basis or give his end to charity if he doesn't beat any one of them."

And as Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson remarks, "sounds reasonable. Also it sounds strange. What! No pay?"

Prince Edward County hochockey sprang into the limelight with the speed of a Spitfire crashing down out of the sun, the other day. The "Boys from Spain" held an organization meeting attended by fifty (count 'em) hockey fans and started the shinny ball rolling for the season.

And just to prove that the grand winter sport hasn't lost any of the attraction it held for the Prince Edwarders last year, there are sufficient teams to form three groups in the land of tomatoes, corn and brilliant men. One group will include Bloomfield, Wellington, Picton and Picton airport. Another will have teams from Demorestville, Picton, Milford and Cherry Valley while the third will see squads from Wellington, Rosehall, Consecon and Hillier battle it out. Mountain View may enter a team in one of the groups.

Lyn Greer, Wellington is the new phexy of the league with Mike Finnegan, Picton, secretary treasurer. Directors are Art Moore, Bloomfield, Ralph McDonald, Wellington and Carson Scott, Milford.

American Hockey League referees are now using the "slow whistle" in calling offsides. Inasmuch as there seems to be thousands of hockey fans who do not understand what a "slow whistle" is, perhaps a few words might clear up the matter.

Team "A" has possession of the puck and a rush is made up the ice. In crossing the blueline a player on team "A" is off-side, however, a player on team "B" pounces on the rubber and rushes at top speed up the ice.

It is obvious that to stop play at this time would only penalize team "B" which, through alert play, has gained possession. In a case like this the referee does not blow his whistle thus permitting action to continue. On the other hand, had the offside pass been completed by team "A" the whistle would have blown for an offside and the puck would have been faced.

The slow whistle on penalties and injuries is also sometimes confusing to fans. Team "A" is attacking when a player on team "B" commits a foul. Team "A" does not lose possession of the puck so the referee merely points his finger at the offending player, letting him know that he saw it, and play continues until a goal is scored or team "A" loses possession. If a goal results, the offending player is not penalized. If not, he makes a trip to the penalty box.

Sometimes as a play is broken up a player will sprawl on the ice just as the other club gains possession. In this case the referee does not blow his whistle until the puck is touched by a teammate of the "injured" player. Were it not for this it would be a simple matter for a fast-thinking player to stop a dangerous rush by merely faking an injury and dropping to the ice.

OMAHA KNIGHTS IN FIRST PLACE

(By The Canadian Press)

Omaha Knights, in-and-out front-runners of the United States Hockey League's Northern Division, again top that section today with Minneapolis Millers in second place.

The Knights regained a one-point margin over the Millers by defeating Tulsa Oilers 5-3 last night. Melong, Homenuke, Bruneteau, Kennedy and Mousseau counted for Omaha. Hellyer, Wilson and Ubriaco tallied for Tulsa.

Two goals apiece by Bobby Dew and Bob Dill paced St. Paul Saints to a 6-3 victory over Houston Skippers in the only other game last night. Myles and Pecket also scored for St. Paul with White, Turner and Rockey clicking for Houston.

Sports Roundup

By JOHN D. HAMILTON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 11 (CP)—Interesting to note how many former National Hockey League players are leading the American League scoring parade . . . Right at the top is Normie Burns of New Haven, former New York record so far this year. . .In 23 Ranger, who has 38 points in 25 games. . . Others who saw action in the N.H.L. and are among the first 25 scorers are: John Holota of Cleveland, Don Metz, of Pittsburgh, Jack McGill and Frank Mario of Hershey, Jackie Hamilton of Pittsburgh, Bob Carse of Cleveland, Johnny Chad of Providence, Ernie Dickens of Pittsburgh and Jim Conacher of Indianapolis . . .

Rubber Feed

The Philadelphia entry in the A.H.L. has rolled up quite a games, 159 goals have been scored against the Pennsylvania team. . .Nich Damore alone has let in 117 goals in 19 games. . . On the other hand, the league-only racked up 106 goals. . . But they have let in only 51, thanks largely to star goalie Harvey Bennett.

Goodbye Pigskins

The trickle of resignations among college football coaches has become a flood. . . Latest to leave their jobs are Hobbs Adams of Kansas State and Charles Bachman of Michigan State. . . Others to quit this season include: Amos Alonzo Stagg of College of the Pacific, Dana X. Bible of Texas, and Andy Kerr of Colgate, J. A. Brown of Idaho, Jimmy Bradshaw of Fresno State, Ed McKeever of Cornell, Walt Holmer of Boston U., Clipper Smith of San Francisco U. and V. J. Green of Drake.

They Say In The Columns

Frank (N.Y. Journal American) Graham quotes Jack Dempsey as saying the ex-champ had 25 managers in his hectic career. . . Red (N.Y. Herald Tribune) Smith commenting on the forthcoming pro football playoffs: "Apparently a whiff of championship play-off cabbage like the more widely advertisized perfumes, brings out the beast in the players. . . " Jerry (N.Y. Post) Mitchell: "Money meant less than a Hollywood reputation at the recent baseball meetings. . . (but) about the only thing it wasn't used for was the purchase of ball players at fancy prices. . ." Ray (N.Y. World-Telegram) Trullinger (writing of a duck hunting expedition in Stuttgart, Ark.): "This is Mallard heaven and a wonderful place to shoot 'em provided expenses running to around $50 per day fail to dampen your wild fowling ardor."

New York, Dec. 12. (CP)—Runyon. . . Johnson. . . Johnson. . . Dwyer. . . three of the most dissimilar personalities in sport —yet they died within a few hours of each other. . . their respective careers produced some of the most fabulous sports legends of our time. . .

Damon Runyon, the brilliant reporter, was best known for his wry, cynical stories of Broadway—ranging from the sensitive "Lily of St. Pierre" to the sardonic "The Brain Goes Home". . . but it was not widely known that Runyon tried fiction only in his later years—and then somewhat by accident.

Joe Nichols, New York Times boxing writer, told this reporter the story . . . one day in the early '30s, the scribes were sitting around a local press room fanning about fights. . . One of the lads had written a magazine fiction piece and Runyon asked him casually how much he had been paid. . . "Oh, about $1,000 the airy answer . . .

"Why don't you try it, Damon?" somebody asked. "You ought to have a few pieces that would go over". . . "I've got a trunkful at home," Damon said, "but my present-tense style is too screwball for the magazines".

But, Joe says, the boys finally persuaded Runyon to submit one of his yarns to a fiction editor . . . He was an almost instant success. . .

The Big Train

Walter Johnson, the great Washington fireballer, was one of the half-dozen 'greats' of baseball and his name became a legend in his own lifetime. . . Billy Evans, president of the Southern Association and former American League umpire, says that he never once heard "The Big Train" protest a decision. . . Evans tells of one important game during Johnson's record 16-game winning streak with the Senators . . . The Senators were two runs up in the ninth with two men on and two out. . . The batter hit a terrific drive down first base way and the first baseman leaped at it to make the stop. . . Johnson covered first base and apparently had the runner by a step. . . Evans called him safe and the two men on base scored to tie the game. . .

Angry Washington players shouted "we was robbed" . . . Johnson returning to the pitching mound, passed the mob. . . "Without breaking his stride," Evans said, "Walter said quietly: 'Get off Bill. Get on me. I missed the bag.'" . . . And that is what is uncommonly known as sportsmanship. . . .

Canadian Sport Snapshots

Edmonton, Dec. 12—(CP) — A veteran Western Canada hockey referee — Reg. (Pep) Moon—has decided to hang up his skates after 15 years of taking the jibes and jeers that strew the thorny path of whistle tooters.

Moon, like all other referees, has had to take his share of catcalls and dirty looks from the fans, but he says it was a team's squawk that finally made him toss away his whistle.

A fair hockey player in his day, Pep turned to officiating and has a refereeing career stretching through every hockey division from midget to senior. He has been one of the top arbitrators in the Western Canada senior circuit since its formation two years ago.

Moon claims to have tossed in the "sponge" after being informed that he would not be allowed to referee games involving Calgary Stampeders who blasted their way through to Allan Cup glory last season.

Moon's comment as he tendered his resignation to league officials was "I call the plays as I see them, but someone apparently wants to do the dictating of officials for the league, if that is the case I don't want any part of it."

"If I am qualified to referee all other clubs which come here, that qualification should hold good for any club," he said.

Edmonton's golfing policeman — Henry Martell — isn't waiting until spring to keep in practice. The Canadian amateur golf champion keeps fit with daily strokes in the basement of his home. Henry has won just about every amateur trophy in Alberta — and upset the dope in winning the Dominion final last year.

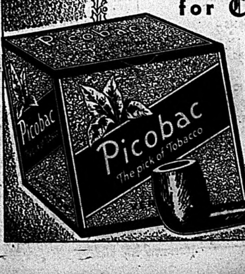
Picobac for Christmas



Picobac
Picobac The pick of Tobacco

A half-pound container of Picobac is the perfect gift for any pipe smoker. Picobac is the pick of Canada's Burley Crop, grown in sunny, southern Ontario, where an ideal combination of climate and soil produce a top quality tobacco. Give Picobac for Christmas! It's cool! It's slow burning! It's fragrant! It's sure to please.

The Movie Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The horse opera goes on forever. No matter what giddy will-o'-the-wisp Hollywood may pursue in passing, the moguls always come back to the sure-fire box-office formula: georgeous landscape, handsome horses and perhaps some plot.

The Western hasn't failed. Now it is on its way up from the low-budget brackets to extravaganza rating.

David O. Selznick's "Duel in the Sun," with a star-studded cast and a reported cost of $7,000,000 is still a horse opera. It is due for its debut soon.

"My Darling Clementine" can stand as tops in the field among Westerns currently available.

"Johnny Belinda," Elmer Harris' Broadway hit set in Nova Scotia, will be made into a movie by Warner Brothers. So far its stars have not been assigned.

George Calderwood, 26-year-old former R.C.A.F. corporal from St. Catharines, is back at school just like a host of other servicemen, but there's a difference. George is back in England, attending J. Arthur Rank's "charm school."

This school makes the most of its pupils' looks, but it also teaches them to act.

George has had his tall-dark-and-handsome looks polished up to the swooning point, his name changed to Calder Wood, and his Canadian accent partially eradicated.

George was suggested for the school by a London drama critic and was given a screen test just before returning home to Canada from the war. The results were so good he was barely home before he headed back with a seven-year contract.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Partner may have a fit without a fit. A fit in bridge means to have some cards in a suit partner has bid. Chances of making game are more favorable when partners have a fit.

However, a fit is not essential to the making of game. Lacking enough to end with some suit as trump, game may be found at no-trump. Enough high cards are all that a couple requires.

Each ace or king or queen (any high card) is counted as a no-trump trick. Nine of them in a pair will produce a no-trump game. And rule will land you in no-trump when no satisfactory trump suit is found.

Invite yourself back to this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH	NORTH
♠7 4	♠A Q J 5
♥A Q 7 5	♥8 4
♦Q J	♦K 7 6 4 2
♣A Q 9 3 2	♣K J

The bidding has gone this far:

South	North
1 C	1 D
1 H	2 S

Bids follow the order in T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump. No more takeouts are in south. Nor has he adequate support to assist either north suit. There is nothing left but to bid two no-trump.

North has no more takeouts. Nor has he adequate support for an assist of either south suit. There is nothing left but to bid three no-trump. Being a game, three no-trump will end the bidding.

Even with a preponderance of suit tricks, the bidding may not end at a trump suit contract. T-A-N will guide the pair into no-trump if that is where they belong.

With so many suit tricks, why not go slam in no-trump? No can do without finding enough no-trump (high card) tricks in the pair.

A player may insist on going to slam despite all rule warnings. When he does, he may say: "If this is wrong, I'll kill myself."

Not a bad idea.

BURNED FINGERS

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 28

"Oh well, Scott!" she answered eagerly. "That's different. All you said was that Scott searched for the South Pole and found the Norwegian flag there. But I got a book about that. I bought it in a secondhand store. It's called The Worst Journey in the World, by one of the men who went with Scott—Cherry-Gerrard. I told you about that book, Monty!"

"You didn't tell me Scott had become your hero."

"He hasn't! But some of the men who went with him are. Lashly," Jennifer said, her face animated, "and Bowers.... What is it?" she asked, a little self-consciously as she caught Monty's glance. She put her hand to her hair. "One of the girls was trying a new hair-do on me," she apologized.

"You look fine," Monty said absently. He gazed at the stove awhile in silence. "But what was that about a glacier? You had old Dr. Potter hypnotized," he presently said.

"Oh, Amundsen and the Heiberg glacier," she answered readily.

"I see."

There was another interval. Then Jennifer burst out suddenly, "Monty, I wish I was real!"

"Real? In what way?" he asked, rousing himself from thought.

"Not just pretending to know things. Not playing a game about it. But knowing. Knowing the way you know things!"

"You seem to me to be going about it pretty thoroughly. After all, kids don't remember much of what they learn in school. Most educated people are self-educated by what they read and hear and see and think long after school days. You certainly made a hit with old Stan. Would you like to know one of the things he asked me?"

The look that went with the question was different from any look he had ever given her. With sudden prescience Jennifer felt the blood rushing to her cheeks; she shook her head uncomfortably.

"Wondered," Monty said dryly, "how I could have a girl like you around without falling in love with her."

"Oh," Jennifer said with a thick throat. If he only wouldn't! "He—he's a little—I guess most musicians are a little crazy, aren't they?" she asked timidly.

"Think that was crazy, do you?" Monty asked over his pipe.

"Well, not that, maybe." She managed a shred of laughter. "But he wrote me," she said. And, leaving her chair, she carried the letter to Monty and stood like a child beside his shoulder while he read it.

She saw his face darken; his eyes followed the lines of the letter a second time.

"He has no right to send you anything like this!" he said testily after a moment. Jennifer's heart sank; she knew how deep was the affection between them.

"Well, he only says there that he—he liked me," she began placatingly. "He says—he says that he has a wife and all that. All he meant—"

"All he meant was something perhaps you don't understand," Monty said warmly. "I know damn well what he meant! Just because women flock to his concerts and faint when he plays he thinks he can get away with this sort of thing. He meets you at my house and hasn't any more respect for you—or for me either, than to—"

"Oh, Monty, Monty!" she protested, half laughing, dropping to her knees beside his chair and linking her fingers over his. "Don't get mad at him! He's — I guess he's just flirtatious — affectionate maybe. Don't pay any attention to it. I'll not even answer him."

"I ought to answer him," Monty said darkly.

"Oh no, no, no!" She caught the letter from his hands, twisted it lightly into a ball, leaned forward without rising from her knees, and tossed it in at the open stove door. Slamming the door shut upon the sleepy flames, she turned back to the man, her hands again on his, her bright face and soft tumble of hair close to his own. "I'm sorry I showed it to you, Monty!" she said, laughing at his scowl. "It doesn't mean anything. Forget it! He's probably forgotten it himself by now."

Somehow roughly he put her hands aside and got to his feet.

"I'm going for a walk," he said abruptly. Jennifer, bewildered and hurt, sat back on her heels for a moment, regarding him with troubled eyes.

"Forgotten it? No, of course he hasn't forgotten it!" he said angrily. "He knows damn well what he is offering you."

"But, Monty, he isn't offering me anything! He has a wife —he tells me that."

"Oh, certainly he does!" Monty said scornfully. "He hasn't seen her for years, but that doesn't matter. If you'll feel more comfortable knowing it's a staid old married man who's writing you love letters. . . ."

He got up, jerked his overcoat from a peg. Jennifer was on her feet too, her face scarlet.

"You're making too much of all this," she said warmly, getting angry in her turn. "I wish I hadn't shown you the letter; I shouldn't have! It's all too silly. He's a genius, Monty, and you have to make allowances for genius. 'The poet in a golden clime was born,' you know."

But Monty was in no mood for quotations.

"Promise me you'll not see him again," he interrupted.

"Well, I haven't any intention of seeing him; I haven't any plan to see him," the girl answered soothingly. "I'd like to go to the concert; it'd be fun. I thought you might go, and we could ask a few of the others—"

"Your stepmother wouldn't rate anything so grand, I suppose?" Monty said with a sneering look quite unfamiliar to her on his face.

"Betty, oh yes," she answered innocently. "I asked her first."

She saw the man's expression change, soften.

"You know why I don't like a feller like that to make love to you, don't you, Jinny?" he said.

"I suppose I do," she answered uncertainly.

"Yes, and why is it?" He was standing with one arm thrust into the dangling coat and sticking out at an angle from his shoulder. He had slapped his hat down over one ear; with his free hand he groped for the other armhole. Light shone on the portion of his bald head that the hat left exposed; from under the tipped brim one eye glared at her with a sort of angry appeal. Jennifer could not resist it; she burst into her own joyous young laughter.

"You think it's funny," he said resentfully.

"It is funny," Jennifer answered. "But seriously," she went on, "what's the matter? You know I don't like him; I hardly know him. What do you want me to do? Just not answer? Not go to the concert?"

Monty jerked off his coat as abruptly as he had attempted to jerk it on. He sat down, staring at her in sudden meekness and forlornness.

"You disarm me," he said. "When you put on that obedient-little-daughter look, with your little paws folded in front of you—"

"Monty, stop that silly stuff!"

He laughed apologetically. "You won't fall for him? Women do, in serried ranks."

"Fall for him! Don't be an idiot!"

"No, but you're not saying that just because I want to hear it?"

"You're not jealous, Monty — you of all people? 'The pity of it, Iago'!" Jennifer said. "Page eleven of the Montgomery Smith Capsule Culture Course," she added.

"Then how'll you answer that letter?"

"Well, just by saying..just by ..I could probably say.." Jennifer began, floundering. "Well, how?" she asked.

"You mean you'll take my advice?"

Her quick flush made the earnest little face that was turned toward him lovelier than ever.

"Whose would I take, Monty? After what you've done for me!"

"You will positively have to stop this," Monty said in a low tone. He got up and mended the fire. Jennifer, when he had resumed his chair again, stared at him distressedly. In a long silence they looked at each other.

"I'll tell you," the man presently said with an air of putting some restraint upon himself. "We'll all go to the concert, you and I and Betty and—who else?"

"Julie?"

"She wouldn't come from Oakland to hear anyone! She isn't particularly musical, Julie."

"Then the Coppinis? The little mousy lady who apparently knew every note he was playing."

"Beppo and Marie? Good idea. She's probably a subscriber for the gallery seats, but no matter, she can hand 'em out to somebody else; they live in a nest of starving musicians out in the Panhandle somewhere. All right, I'll get in touch with them. And you don't have to believe what that letter said. You won't, will you?"

"I was the one who thought from the beginning that it was all nonsense, Monty," she reminded him. "I did believe what a man said once," Jennifer added after a moment. There was a silence, Monty watching her with sudden attention. "But not again," she said in a low tone.

"You're still remembering that man," Monty said.

"Still remembering!" She echoed the words in mild wonder as if to herself. "Yes, I'm still remembering, Monty," she said reasonably. Then, with a long, deep sigh, she got to her feet. "I have to go. I said I'd only be a few minutes."

Monty walked with her to the window that opened on the roof terrace.

"No other man would ever have a chance, eh? I'm glad, Jinny. You wouldn't want to make your old professor jealous."

"You! Nobody will ever do for me what you've done, Monty," she said. "Nobody will ever take your place. My one hope," she went on with sudden feeling, laying her small warm hand upon his as they stood together under the stars, "is that someday I can show you how grateful I am to you!"

"Well," he said in an odd voice, "someday I'll tell you."

She stopped short, a moment later, crossing the gritty dark roofs, and spoke half aloud.

"He didn't mean..he couldn't have meant..not Monty. That would spoil everything! No, he didn't mean that!"

The concert was less thrilling than her anticipation of it. It was exciting to enter the big opera house, to mount superbly to the wide corridor of the boxes, to settle herself in a front seat beside little Mme. Coppini, who was quite speechless with felicity. But Betty showed on this occasion a sort of mincingness, an affected haughtiness that was entirely new to Jennifer and that bewildered her. Betty would under no persuasion take a front seat. "Nobody wants to see me!" she told Monty with a little vapid laugh that set Jennifer's teeth on edge. Nor would Betty be persuaded to go behind the scenes after the concert and congratulate the violinist. She said primly that she and Jennifer must be getting home, and as it was but a short distance and a fine night they left the others immediately after the performance. They had all had dinner downtown, a constrained and almost silent meal; now it was a relief to leave Monty and the Coppinis. But later Jenifer learned that with some half-dozen others they had taken Stan off for a midnight supper, and she felt cheated.

There was always a pleasant bustle at Vogelsang's just at noon. The girls who modeled frocks, the saleswomen, had to squeeze in their luncheon time as best they might; the fashionable world liked to lunch late and to shop at Vogelsangs just before lunch. Everything was rush and hurry, perfumes, lights, furs, laughter, and happy voices, all helping to make the city's smartest shop a Mecca for every woman who could afford to go there.

Of course there were disagreeable customers, women who made every separate sale an agony for the other women whose livelihood depended upon pleasing them. But these customers usually made their complaints behind the softly tinted walls of the [illegible]ons. On the main floors all was courtesy, harmony, [illegible]

"Miss Jennifer, will you slip on the chartreuse chiffon for Miss Winston?"

"Certainly, Miss Hollister." And Jennifer would float the delicious garment up upon her arm, sweep away to the models' dressing room, and put herself into old Mrs. Kohler's hands. In here saleswomen would be confusedly coming and going, stock girls handling new trunks of beautiful garments, buyers on hand to check with shipments and prices. The models might linger a moment to exclaim over new creations before they applied themselves to the important matter of hair arrangement and the adjustment of skirts, sleeves, jackets.

On the morning after the concert Jennifer was modeling a particularly impressive robe for an elderly woman when she glanced about to see Stanislaus himself watching her from a near-by chair. There were some fifty of these luxurious round-backed chairs scattered about the silver-and-blue salon, interspersed with mirrors, racks of clothes, and the high, lace-draped windows, so that he was not conspicuous among the customers and salespeople. He was sitting quietly, his hat on the table beside him, his hand with his gloves dangling from it resting on the head of his stick.

Jennifer gave him one shy half smile before remembering her instructions never to let her gaze wander from the immediate contemplation of the prospective customer; she was not supposed to volunteer a remark of any kind under these circumstances, but she could not resist a temptation to murmur to Miss Judson, who was making the sale, that that man was Lichtenstein, the violinist.

James Meagher President Read Junior Farmers

James Meagher will act as the president of Read Junior Farmers for the next year it was decided at their annual meeting held in the Parish Hall on Tuesday evening. Vice president for the next year will be Gerald Walsh, Secretary Treasurer, Terry Walsh, and Lorne McKenney and Allen Meagher, auditors.

The current president, William Hanley, took charge of the meeting, calling on H. W. Burns, assistant agricultural representative, who showed a series of slides on potato seed certification. C. P. Matthews, B.A., B.Paed., Inspector of Separate Schools for Eastern Ontario, complimented the Read Junior Farmers on their organization and the progressive attitude which they were taking toward agricultural education by sponsoring short courses which are now being held at Read.

Following a discussion on membership and program it was decided that members must attend 75 per cent of the meetings in order to be eligible to go on free club trips. A program committee of three was appointed for each meeting for the next six months, with each of the three members of the committee to prepare a talk of timely interest for the meeting program of which they are responsible.

James Meagher and Joe Hanley were appointed to attend the Eastern Ontario Junior Farmer Conference at Kemptville on January 2 and 3, while Raymond Hunt was delegated to represent the club at the Junior Conference in Toronto on January 8.

DON MOGARD K.O'S KEITH PROSSER IN MAIN EVENT

Last Enthusiastic Crowd View Swell Card at Mountain View Station

Sergeant "Hub" Smith and members of the sports department of Mountain View Air Station moved off on the right foot in their efforts to bring boxing back to the station and district last night when a large enthusiastic crowd attended their first show in the sports hangar of the station.

The card was the best seen here in some time and the reception given the participants and the quality of the bouts augurs well for future functions.

Don Mogard, one of Toronto's better heavyweights, who is definitely headed for better pugilistic things demonstrated his ability in a third round knockout of Keith Prosser, London, Ont., heavy in main bout. Prosser who is said to be turning professional gamely tried to stave off defeat but went down before the furious onslaught of the Toronto boy in the third heat after he had been dropped twice, once for a count of eight. He was out for the count after a little over a minute of rugged milling in the third round.

LAC Leury, of Mountain View showed plenty of willingness to mix matters in the five round semi-final against Glen Dafoe, Trenton slugger but lost a close decision after a bout that had the fans on edge.

Another Mountain View lad who should be heard from in the future LAC Eddie Senos showed plenty of willingness to mix matters with clever Billy Westfall, of Trenton and took a three round decision from the lad who was always popular with city fans.

Billy Graham, Oshawa earned a draw with Gus Rubicini of Toronto while Joey Duggie, Kingston took the decision over Geno Battista, a member of Vic Bagnato's Diamond Athletic Club's stable in Toronto.

Joe Wilson, Belleville boy lost the decision to experienced Al. R. Rowand of Toronto after taking a count of nine in one round.

A highlight of the evening's entertainment was the weight-lifting demonstration staged by Stan McBride and his Dominion champions from Peterborough. The boys showed plenty of strength and ability and received well-earned ovations after their different stunts.

Sergt. Smith was referee for the fights. It is understood that another attractive card will be staged in the near future if not once monthly.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 12 (CP)—The indices were down moderately at noon on Toronto stock exchange. Trading quieted down to a turnover of 452,000 shares for the first three hours.

Industrials weakened .47 on weakness of the utilities, liquors and steels. Consumers Gas and Canadian Celanese lost 2 points or more and losses of 3-4 appeared for Montreal Locomotive and National Steel Car.

East Sullivan firmed 15 cents to 3.80 and Nickel added 1-4. Prices were off narrowly for Golden Manitou, Smelters and Sherritt. In the gold section the tone was soft for McLeod-Cockshutt, Malartic Gold-Fields, Senator and Lingman Lake.

In the western oil group losses of 5 cents came out for Home and Calgary-Edmonton.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, Dec. 12 —(AP)— Moderate selling whittled away at prices in the stock market today after early stability.

Morning advances running to around a point were later trimmed or converted into losses.

Canadian stocks were generally easy at mid-day. Dome Mines and Hiram Walker softened ½ and Distillers Seagram ¼. McIntyre gained as much.

HOGS

Toronto, Dec. 12 — (CP) — Grade A, dressed, bacon-hogs, were unchanged at Stratford to farmers $29.85, to truckers $29.90, delivered, unchanged at Brantford $29.85, delivered, in markets reporting early today.

Obituary

MRS. NANCY M. KETCHESON
(Wallbridge)

Mrs. Nancy M. Ketcheson, wife of Mr. Bleecker Ketcheson, died suddenly at her home at Wallbridge, Sidney township, on Wednesday, Dec. 11th. She suffered a stroke on Tuesday evening and never regained consciousness. She was born at Frankford, 70 years ago, being the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Sarles and for the past 46 years has resided at Wallbridge and before that time lived in Frankford. She was well known and highly respected in the community. A member of Trinity Anglican Church at Frankford, she took a keen interest in the work of the church and also the Women's Institute of which she was a life member.

Surviving are her husband, one daughter, Mrs Cecil Smith of Wallbridge and one son, George M. Ketcheson also of Wallbridge.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

Last-Minute Appeal to Buy Christmas Seals

A last minute appeal to those residents of Belleville and Hastings County and district who have not bought their share of tuberculosis Christmas Seals to do so this week, was issued last night by Mr. D. L. Storey, chairman of the local Seal Sale Committee.

"We refuse to believe that the goal we have set will not be reached," Mr. Storey said, "but we have to admit that we are considerably below our objective. This could be rectified overnight if those who haven't purchased the Seals sent them through the mail would do so without further delay. I appeal to these people, many of whom have been Christmas Seal supporters in the past, to co-operate with us."

Mr. Storey pointed out that everyone in Belleville and Hastings County and district benefits from the work which Christmas Seal money helps to finance.

"Every cent is spent on tuberculosis prevention and control," he said. "During 1947 we plan to X-ray all citizens willing in the cities of Belleville, Trenton and Deseronto. This ambitious program can only be carried out if we are successful in our current campaign.

Christmas Seal campaign headquarters are at 51 Highland Avenue, telephone 1985, the offices are open from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Marmora

Marmora — (Special) — The December meeting of the Deloro Safety Committee was held in the Electric Shop on Tuesday afternoon with the chairman, C. H. Buskard, presiding.

Reporting for the suggestions committee, George Brooks mentioned the receipt of eleven suggestions. His committee had also dealt with four recapitulations.

H. Rennie reported for the competitive committee. The star had been awarded the General Division for the month and five of the eleven suggestions had been allotted an award. William Regan, for the inspection committee, said his committee had turned in eighteen suggestions. Fifteen of these had been completed, one was in process of completion and two had been considered unnecessary. Tom Cousins was appointed floating member for December.

A. W. Drew handled the report of the publicity committee. He said that, acting on a letter from the Ontario Safety League which sought ideas for preventing truck backing accidents, his committee had sponsored a contest in which eleven entries had been received and two prizes awarded. The ideas submitted in this contest had been gathered together and forwarded to the Ontario Safety League. Another contest on "Winter Hazards" was closing that day and results would be made known later.

In the absence of the chairman, J. A. Rice, the report of the health and investigation committee was given by W. J. Cottrell. He mentioned that the monthly prone method practice had been attended by seventeen men and that the inspection of first aid boxes had also been carried out. One accident had been investigated and recommendations made with regard to accidents previously investigated, had also been carried out.

The chairman then presented the monthly statement of the trustee relief funds. For the plant Bulletin staff, Editor M. J. Corrigan referred to the contest for a new design for the Bulletin's cover which the judges were engaged in. Under general business, mention was made by the chairman of a Safety First meeting recently held in Trenton, which was attended by himself, H. A. McNally, T. Cousins and H. Sabine.

He also reminded the various departments that the election of plant representatives should be carried out before the next meeting on January 7th.

Marmora — (Special) — Included in the Homemaker Clubs of North Hastings which are sponsored by the Women's Institutes, making an inspection of Peterborough plants on Monday, was the "Spicy Chatter Club" of Marmora, thirty-one of whose members made the trip. Interviewed over CHEX was Miss Virginia Robertson, president and Miss Patricia Lynch, secretary-treasurer of the club. Escorting the girls were their local leaders, Mesdames E. C. Prentice, M. Kouri and W. G. Chrysler and the president of Marmora Women's Institute, Mrs. W. D. Lavender. The ladies returned with great appreciation of the day's outing and of the work of those who made the day's program possible.

Mr. and Mrs. L. K. Crawford spent the weekend with relatives at Kingston.

Miss Helen Regan has been discharged from the R.C.A.F. (W.D.) and is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Regan.

Wallbridge

Wallbridge — After the opening Worship Service on Sunday evening Rev. H. H. Hillis conducted a very impressive installation service for the 1947 officers of the W.A. and W.M.S. The evening service was then continued with Mr. Hillis basing his address on a Beatitude "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." "This," said Mr. Hillis, "doesn't sound like good sense to the average man, but history has proved its truth, as those who gain territory or property by force, eventually lose it, and even in nature, the most savage animals and birds are gradually exterminated while the more dependent and meek multiply."

Friends were very glad to see that Mr. W. H. Nobes was able to attend the church service on Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Reid and Mr. and Mrs. F. Reid of Cannifton, and Mrs. H. Clarke of Belleville, called on Mr. and Mrs. F. Harris and Mrs. E. Bacon on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Millar and family, Belleville, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Sine.

A number from this community enjoyed a trip to Peterborough, sponsored by the W.I. They visited the Quaker Oats Plant and other interesting places in the city.

Miss Jennie Kiernan is slowly recovering from a fall in which her back was injured.

Mr. Douglas Ketcheson and friend were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. Smith.

Mr. Jas. Hinchcliffe spent a few days of last week with friends at Gilmour and vicinity.

The school teacher, Mrs. Phillips, is practicing the pupils for the annual Christmas concert to be held next week.

On Tuesday evening Mr. Douglas Ketcheson showed a series of films of an educational nature in the church. The pictures were splendid and those who were present enjoyed a real treat.

A number from this community attended a party at the home of Mr. M. Seward last Friday evening. Mr. Seward has sold his farm and intends moving in Mr. S. Nicholson's house for the winter. They were presented with a wardrobe.

W. A. MEETING

Thomasburg —(Special)— The December meeting of Christ Church Women's Auxiliary was held on Friday afternoon at the home of the president, Miss Emma Porter, with a good attendance.

The president opened this meeting with the singing of a hymn, followed by the Lord's Prayer and Members' Prayer in unison. The president read the Scripture Lesson.

Plans were made for the annual Christmas meeting to be held at the home of Miss Porter.

This being the annual meeting various activities of the year were reported by the president, secretary and treasurer, and the Dorcas Secretary, showing that despite the fact the members are few in number there has been advancement made in the work of the Women's Auxiliary. The president thanked the officers and members for their co-operation during the year just ended.

Rev. F. C. Beamer took charge of the election of officers which resulted in all 1946 officers being re-elected.

The chapter from the Study Book "More Than Conquerors," dealing with medical missions, was interestingly given by Miss Porter.

The offering was received and dedicated.

The meeting closed with a hymn and the Benediction pronounced by the rector.

The Crescent Rebakah Lodge held a very enjoyable card party in the Oddfellows Hall here on Monday evening.

The hockey club sponsored a dance and pie social in the Oddfellows Hall on Thursday evening the proceeds of which will be used toward the making of the rink. Several local young men were busy Saturday making preparations for the rink.

The annual meeting of the Moira Valley Cheese Manufacturing Company was held on Friday afternoon in the hall.

The public school pupils and teachers are busy practicing for their Christmas concert.

Mrs. George Robinson of Tweed visited recently with Mrs. Ed. Way and Mrs. James Way and also with Mrs. J. C. Morton.

Miss Elsie Richardson of Belleville spent the weekend at her home here.

Blackwell Announces Cocktail Bar Rules

Liquor by Glass Obtainable Until 2 A.M. Week-days

All Bars Must Close At 11.30 P.M. on Saturdays

Toronto, Dec. 13 — (CP) — When liquor-by-the-glass returns to Ontario Jan. 1 after a lapse of 29 years, drinks may be purchased in the province's five largest cities from noon until 2 a.m. on week-days, 11.30 p.m. on Saturdays.

The framework of the revised regulations was described by Attorney-General Leslie Blackwell in an address last night on the detailed requirements for the new establishments.

Previously liquor in Ontario has been purchased only on individual permits at government liquor stores, on a quota varying periodically. Recently the monthly quota was put back to eight quarts from one bottle. No liquor could legally be purchased elsewhere, and it could be consumed legally only in the home or hotel residence.

Beer and wine have been obtainable from government and commercial wine stores, also on a varying quota in the last few years. But beer and wine have been sold with restaurant meals, and beer in hotel beverage rooms —parlors for men only, and parlors for women and male companions.

Now two new types of licences are available for sale of liquor in Toronto, Ottawa, Hamilton, London and Windsor.

There's a dining lounge licence. This allows sale of all types of liquor with meals, from noon to 2 a.m. week-nights, 11:30 p.m. Saturday.

Can be Sold in Messes

There's a lounge licence, for sale of all types of liquor without meals, from noon to 6:30 p.m., then 8 p.m. to midnight week-nights, 11:30 p.m. Saturdays.

Liquor may also be sold after Jan. 1 in clubs, military messes, on railway cars and steamships. For banquets or similar entertainments a permit may be obtained permitting purchase and consumption of liquor on approved premises at stated occasions.

Liquor continues to be available on individual permits at government stores.

For the new dining lounges and just plain lounges, which aroused most interest of all the complicated legislation, stringent and specific rules are laid down.

No Liquor Displays

There will be no liquor displays in front windows of dining lounges or lounges. But lounges must have dispensing bars at which all brands available and in general demand must be in stock and displayed. Dispensing must take place in full view of the customer. Taps for draft beer must be labelled to indicate the brand.

Price lists must be displayed in all establishments, drinks containing spirits must have at least one ounce of spirts, and the price must be stated in relation to the ounces of spirits in any drink. Actual prices will vary with different establishments and no set standard has been laid down.

No licensed premises may have stalls or partitions obstructing the view.

No Purchases Before Noon

It is an offence under the Act for any parent to leave small children unattended while that parent frequents licensed premises.

Another penalty provides that civil action for damages may lie against any proprietor selling liquor to anyone whose condition is such that they would be intoxicated, or their intoxication would increase, where such person commits suicide or meets death by accident or injures a third person or his property.

Mr. Blackwell in announcing hours of sale said these were the "maximum hours," in which sale is permitted. "In communities where earlier closings are more suitable to the needs of the community and will not result in substantial numbers of the public patronizing the bootlegger, the Board will permit earlier closings."

This was a reference to beverage room hours, and dining room licences for beer and wine only, apart from the liquor sale in the large cities.

Charges Monopoly Stranglehold Held On Timber Limits

Toronto, Dec. 13 —(CP)— The pulp and paper industry apparently ignored the fact that Ontario's forest resources belong to the people of the province, not to the industry, it was asserted by E. E. Johnson of Port Arthur in a brief prepared for submission today to the Ontario royal commission on forests.

Mr. Johnson is president of the Pidgeon River Timber Company and the Great Lakes Shipping and Lumber Company of Port Arthur. He said his brief was a reply to the one submitted previously by the pulp and paper industry.

He charged that a "monopolistic stranglehold" on timber limits by the big pulp and paper companies had cost Ontario 100,000,000 feet of lumber in the last five years with consequent results on the housing shortage.

Claims Shutdown Avoidable.

He said that continuous shutdown of lumber mills because of lack of material would have been avoided had they been able to obtain accessible sawlogs of good quality and quantity.

"No doubt other interests such as pulp and paper mills will advocate sawmill pole and tie operations by themselves as a solution of the problem," he said. "Such a development would only tend to entrench and perpetuate a monopoly of our forests and result in all products other than pulp and paper being produced as a necessary corollary to a pulp operation instead of being produced on their own competitive merits.

"We need hardly point out the eventual exclusion of the entire lumbering industry under such circumstances."

Mayor C. W. Cox of Port Arthur yesterday told the commission that citizens of the Lakehead "view with grave apprehension the probable disastrous results of the continuation of past and present forest policies." He referred to the granting of large concessions of forest land.

Mayor Cox advocated "a strong, independent tribunal, free from political and other influence, be set up as a commission to resurvey our forest wealth, to enact such regulations as will be required to ensure continuity of forest growth and to determine the needs of existing mills."

Who's Afraid of 'Friday the 13th'? 13 Scrumptious Models Defy Calamity

By FRED KERNER

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 13 (CP) — Go ahead, look again! Sure today is Friday the 13th.

Pardon me while I break a mirror and spill some salt. I'm not superstitious—not any more. And I'll tell you why. Thirteen—13, that is—of New York's most gdamorous models have told me I'm crazy.

(They're right. I'm crazy about them!)

These scrumptious lassies took me aside today and told me to give my rabbit's foot back to the rabbit.

Today these luscious ladies became members of the National Committee of 13 Against Superstitution and Fear.

As I gazed pop-eyed, they each embraced a black cat, walked under a ladder, opened their umbrellas indoors, bragged about nature's beautiful anatomical gifts to them without knocking on wood and topped it off by lighting three cigarets on a match.

How did I get here? I had an "in." Like to meet her? This is Nancy Clapp of Vancouver. Note that dark brown hair, those hazel eyes, that...well, just note!

Like blue-eyed blonds? Meet Phyllis Baker, she's from New Jersey. Take a peek at Monique Van Vooren, the one with the dark red-brown hair and brown eyes. She's from Brussels, Belgium.

I'll have to leave now. It's time to dine and we're going to defy calamity by sitting 13 at each table.

We all break a mirror, spill salt without tossing any over our left shoulder, break bread into crumbs to flout poverty, cross our knives and forks to dare death and shake hands across the table to brave bad luck.

Beware mumbo-jumbo, lest you raise your ugly head around here!

20 KNOWN DEAD AND 30 INJURED IN N. Y. BLAST

Workers Claw Through Mountains of Rubble In Feverish Search For 17 Missing

New York, Dec. 13 — (AP) — Weary workers who dug the bodies of 20 persons from the wreckage of a collapsed tenement house in a slow, grim procession of death gave up hope today for the lives of 16 others believed buried under tons of rubble.

As the broken body of Rose Fucci, 15, was carefully extricated from the ruins, police said they planned to set three steam shovels to work on the ruins of the building in which more than 30 were injured. Workers had previously carefully dug by hand because they feared heavy machinery would cause more crashes.

The building in Upper Manhattan, which housed 22 families, was smashed early yesterday by a two-foot thick wall of an adjoining ice house which toppled on it after a five-alarm fire in the ice house.

Rescue workers toiled all night in the glare of huge searchlights which played over the six-storey structure's gaunt remains. They had to abandon most of their heavy power machinery and resort to bare hands and small tools in an effort to avoid another collapse.

Early today — nearly 24 hours after the building toppled following a fire in an adjoining abandoned ice-house — the bodies of a mother and two children were removed from the debris. One child still clutched a gaily wrapped Christmas package.

They were identified as Mrs. Elizabeth Biancardi, 37, and Joyce, 12, and Lucile, eight.

Refuses to Grant Permanent Injunction

Toronto, Dec. 14 — (CP)—Mr. Justice P. E. F. Smily of the Ontario Supreme Court yesterday refused to grant a permanent injunction to prevent the city of Toronto from holding a plebiscite New Year's Day on the question of cocktail lounges. R. W. M. Chitty made application on behalf of Joseph S. Stauffer, an official of the Ontario Property Owners Association, who last Friday obtained an interim injunction retaining the city from taking any steps to implement the vote until Mr. Justice Smily ruled on the permanent injunction application.

NATIVE OF BELLEVILLE DIES

Calgary, Dec. 13 — (CP)—Engineer on the first train into Calgary in 1883, William Pullar, 83, died yesterday. He was the engineer on the train bearing King George V, then the Duke of York, on his first visit to Canada. He was born in Belleville.

High Winds Cause Damage And Livestock Loss In Western Ontario Areas

Stratford, Dec. 13. (CP)—A 60-mile-an-hour gale cut a swath across this section of Western Ontario Thursday night, left in its wake thousands of dollars of damage to farm buildings, disrupted communications and took a fairly heavy toll of livestock.

Early reports could give no complete estimate of damage, but reports from several centres indicated livestock had been lost as buildings crushed them after being toppled by the wind. Dublin was particularly hard hit.

Electrical power was disrupted and telephonic communications to the stricken area are still out of order.

Today farmers were organizing their own clean-up squads, patrolling roads to remove fallen trees and surveying damage to property.

So far as could be learned early today no one was injured.

A foretaste was felt by Mitchell as a miniature "twister" struck near that Perth County town, felling trees and hydro poles and shutting off power for Seaforth, Clinton and Goderich.

Exeter suffered $1,000 damage and power interruptions when a heavy gale hit the town, damaging a storage shed at the Huron lumber mill.

The Muskoka district was also menaced as heavy gales, preceded by rain, swept eastward through the area. A lashing wind and rain storm felled trees in the Barrie district and the eastern extremity of the town was without power when a large tree cut hydro lines.

High winds were also reported at Cobourg while at Brantford there was a sharp drop in temperature. Heavy wind was reported in Toronto through the night but no damage was reported.

Elmore Kleinfeldt, whose farm is situated half a mile east of Dublin, lost his barn and driving shed. The wind lifted a barn belonging to Mowat Stacey off its foundation and a roof on his back kitchen was torn away. Trees in his orchard were flattened. Barns belonging to Jack Drake and John Ryan were also destroyed with considerable loss of livestock.

At Kitchener power was cut off in the south and centre business and residential districts from minutes to three hours by four major wire breaks caused by fallen trees. A half-built house of seven rooms was levelled to its foundation.

Power was disrupted at Seaforth, Clinton and Goderich and hours later highway crews were still clearing large trees from the roads. At Lakefield, a village 10 miles north of Peterborough, trees were uprooted and power was cut off an hour and a half.

Candles were brought out of emergency storage closets at Stratford General Hospital to provide lighting for wards and corridors after its power was disrupted for six minutes.

The storm struck hard in the Watford area. A building on the village fair grounds known as the "Crystal Palace" was flattened and roofs were stripped from several barns. In the Woodstock district one break was caused in the hydro system serving the rural area.

At London the mercury dropped from a high of 55 yesterday to a morning reading of 22.

At Toronto the wind reached a velocity of 52 miles an hour at times but other centres reported its speed as high as 65 miles. In Toronto snow fell intermittently throughout the night and before noon there was another light fall.

BROOKE CLAXTON DEFENCE MINISTER IN CABINET SHIFT

Paul Martin Goes to Health Dept. and Colin Gibson New Secretary of State

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 13 (CP) — The prospect of more cabinet changes before the next session of parliament loomed today as a result of statements made last night by Prime Minister Mackenzie King when he announced three readjustments of portfolios, bringing to six the number of switches made this week.

Mr. King announced that Hon. Brooke Claxton, 58-year-old Montreal lawyer and decorated veteran of the First Great War, will relinquish the Health Ministry to handle the three defence branches.

Hon. Paul Martin, 43, frequent representative of Canada at national and international meetings on health and labor questions, will give up the Secretary of State portfolio to succeed Mr. Claxton in the Health Department.

Mr. Martin, a lawyer from Windsor, will be succeeded by Hon. Colin Gibson, 55, another decorated veteran of the First Great War, who until now has been Minister of National Defence for Air.

These changes came on the heels of the announcement Tuesday that Rt. Hon. Louis St. Laurent was giving up his Justice Department portfolio to devote his full time to external affairs. Rt. Hon. J. L. Ilsley was moved from the Finance Department to take the Justice Ministry.

Hon. Douglas Abbott was appointed to succeed Mr. Ilsley and Mr. King said at the time that before long the Army-Navy Defence portfolio would be given to another man.

SMUTS CONFERS WITH DE GASPERI

Rome, Dec. 13 — (Reuters) — Prime Minister Smuts of South Africa conferred for 15 minutes last night with Premier Alcide de Gasperi. Field Marshal Smuts is enroute back to the Dominion from New York, where he attended sessions of the United Nations.

CANADA'S JOBLESS INCREASED BY 9,000 IN NOV.

Slackening of Seasonal Industries Cause but Overall Picture is Brighter

Ottawa, Dec. 13. (CP)—Slackening of seasonal industries added 9,000 persons to Canada's jobless in November, though the overall employment picture was brighter than a year ago, the Department of Labor reported today in its monthly manpower survey.

Scarcity of workers was reported in Central Canada, but in the Maritimes the inter outlook was described as "dark" and the Prairies and the Pacific Coast area were expected to see a growing surplus of labor during the cold months.

For the whole Dominion, unplaced applicants for jobs at the end of November totalled 143,000, against 180,000 at the same time last year. There were 121,000 jobs available, compared with 93,000 a year previously.

At the end of October, there had been 132,000 men looking for work and 133,000 jobs offering.

During November, the report said, employment eased in agriculture, fishing, transportation and construction. The only large-scale expansion was in the logging industry. In that trade, high wages were expected to provide enough men for the Winter cut, though a shortage of about 10,000 men had been reported a few weeks ago.

Summer strikes were still affecting employment in many manufacturing industries, the Labor Department said, since they were still beset by supply shortages growing out of the walkouts.

6,000 Vacancies

In the Maritimes, there were 20,000 unplaced applicants and 6,000 vacancies at the end of November.

In the Quebec region, available jobs outnumbered applicants by 47,000 to 35,000 with this province remaining the only one where vacancies exceed applicants in both male and female categories.

Applicants and jobs were almost evenly balanced in Ontario, where there were 44,000 jobs and 43,000 persons looking for work.

LONDON MAN HELD AS SUSPECT IN TORONTO SLAYING

Importance of Arrest Stressed by Fact Six Detectives Used In This Case

London, Ont., Dec. 13 —(CP)— Allan W. Greenfield, 41, of London, latest suspect in the recent Toronto slaying of taxi driver Alfred Reddish, and a woman companion, Mrs. Helen Nichols, 36, also of London, were remanded to Dec. 16 without plea when arraigned in city court today on nominal charges of vagrancy.

Greenfield, a slight, well-dressed man with a moustache and wearing glasses, and Mrs. Nichols, attractive brunette, were arrested in a Dundas Street apartment yesterday, but the news was withheld until after the arrival here of Toronto detectives.

"Greenfield is definitely a suspect in the Reddish case," said Detective Inspector William Snell today. He said that the woman now is being held only for investigation.

Possible importance of the arrest of Greenfield is indicated by the fact that six local detectives converged on the downtown apartment and all exits were closely guarded to prevene an escape.

Police said Mrs. Nichols was the tenant of the apartment.

At least four Toronto police officers headed by Deputy Chief Moses Mulholland and including Inspector John Nimmo, came to London overnight. Detectives William Mace and William Thompson were also in the group.

It was reported that the two men who were forced at gunpoint to give up their car to Reddish's slayer following the crime were being brought to London to view Greenfield in a police line-up today.

Local police were reluctant to reveal any facts about Greenfield except to say that "he has been a resident of London, on and off, for some time." It was learned from another source that he was a patient recently at Queen Alexandra Sanitarium here.

Experts Estimate Pilot Was Flying 700 MPH

London, Dec. 13 — (Reuters)— Britain's ace test pilot, Geoffrey De Havilland, was flying 700 miles on hour in his jet-propelled flying wing when he was killed last September, it was learned yesterday. Aviation experts here announced that De Havilland was the first victim of the "trans-sonic barrier" the wall of compressed air that builds up around an object travelling at the speed of sound (about 715 miles an hour at the altitude at which the jet was flying.)

MILLION IN PAINTINGS PRESENTED ART MUSEUM

Cincinnati, Dec. 13 — (AP) — Thirty-four paintings valued at $1,000,000 were presented to the Cincinnati Art Museum today by Miss Mary Hanna, daughter of the late Henry Hanna, who was a Cincinnati industrialist and Philanthropist. The masterpieces include the works of Gainsborough, Renoir, Canalette and a group of paintings by renowned 18th Century Dutch artists.

Pea-Soup Fog Blacks Out Streets And Paralyzes Traffic in London

London, Dec. 13 (CP Cable) — London traffic was virtually paralyzed early today by fog of pea-soup thickness.

Bus, tram and taxi services were cancelled as the grey pall settled down on the city during the night. Before dawn came, Oxford Street and other principal thoroughfares were blacked out as effectively as during the war.

The Air Ministry offered little hope of the fog lifting for some hours.

A feeble sun cut patches in the thick fog blanket in some sections but only in a few areas did visibility exceed 50 yards.

A 7,000-ton British tanker the Empire Kinsman, ran aground in the fog cloaked straits of Dover The Dutch motor vessel Nottingham put into Bridlington harbor badly damaged and leaking after being aground on Flamborough Head, Yorkshire.

Thieves took advantage of the og, looting a Mayfair flat and a Baker Street antique shop.

The Queen was the most distinguished person caught by last night's fog blanket in London. Her Majesty dined with the Middle Temple Benchers, an ancient association of legal men, and started home for Buckingham Palace after the heavy, gray pall had set in.

As the Royal limousine inched through the narrow streets, it was guided by policemen with flashlights who brought it safely to the palace.

Fast Passenger Train Crashes Into Wrecked Freights

Scene One of Terrible Havoc With Rails Badly Twisted

Mansfield, O., Dec. 13 —(AP)— An official of the Pennsylvania Railroad estimated today that at least 15 persons were killed and 50 injured when the railroad's "Golden Triangle" passenger train plowed into the wreckage of two freight trains early this morning.

The rail official, who declined to be identified by name, told newspapermen at the wreck scene he felt that was a "conservative estimate" after looking over the wreckage left by the pileup which occurred about 2:45 a.m. E.S.T., near Coulter, 12 miles southeast of here.

Five of the known dead were soldiers and three were members of the train crews.

The railroad spokesman said the soldiers killed were among an army movement of about 100 officers and men riding on the first two coaches of the "Golden Triangle," which crashed into two freight trains.

Some of the passengers were trapped in the wreckage and rescue crews with blow torches cut through twisted steel to reach the victims.

"The seats were twisted and turned every way," Sheriff Frank Robinson of Richland County said of the overturned coaches.

Physicians and nurses from surrounding communities administered aid to the injured.

The scene was one of terrific havoc, Sheriff Robinson said. "The rails were badly twisted, cross ties were splintered and torn from the road bed."

Pte. Kenneth Compton, 17, of Superior, Wis., a passenger on the train, gave this description:

Yelled "to Hit Floor"

"I had just lit up a cigaret when I felt the brakes slam on. I yelled 'hit the floor' and dropped into the aisle. There was a terrific crash and glass and steel flew everywhere. I was thrown outside the car somehow and landed under the wreck on the next track.

"I ran back inside, hollering for my pals. I couldn't find them and came here on the first ambulance."

The accident was caused by the breaking of an air hose on an east bound freight train, Sheriff Robinson said he was informed by a Pennsylvania railroad representative.

All Engines Overturned

"The first freight train stopped. Then another east-bound freight train rammed into it and both locomotives overturned.

"Just then the west-bound passenger train came along and ploughed into the two wrecked freights."

Two locomotives pulling the passenger train overturned also. At least three coaches on the rear remained on the tracks, their lights still burning.

Coroner D. C. Lavender said he saw seven dead—four soldiers and three others he believed to be train crew members.

An early arrival at the scene said he saw many persons trapped in the wreckage, "some apparently badly hurt."

Another observer said some of the passengers fought with each other in their efforts to get out of the cars.

TRAFFIC TIED UP

Whitby, Dec. 13 —(CP)— A transport, sideswiped by a automobile driven by Roland Henderson of Toronto, upset and tied up traffic on Highway No. 2 near here for three hours last night. The Transport was driven by Harold E. Verrall of Whitby.

Caretaker Finds Family of Skunks In Church Cellar

London, Ont., Dec. 13 (CP)— Even the churches provide no sanctuary against London's latest marauders—skunks.

When the caretaker of St. Michael's Roman Catholic Church went into the basement yesterday to check the furnace, he surprised five skunks gambolling about.

To gain time, he decided to wash the parish priest's car. But he gave up that idea. A sixth skunk barred the entrance to the garage.

Firemen said they were sorry but they couldn't do a thing about it.

While the harassed caretaker pondered his next step, the skunks strolled away of their own accord.

70 Holstein Cattle To Go to Palestine

Ottawa, Dec. 13 —(CP)— Seventy purebred Canadian Holstein cattle, believed to be the first to be sent to Palestine, will be shipped to Haifa next week aboard the S.S. Oceanside, Trade Minister MacKinnon announced today.

The shipment — 20 bulls under six months and 50 cows — will be loaded at Saint John, N.B., and will be used for breeding purposes in the Middle East. They were purchased in Western Ontario by the Palestine Cattle Breeders Association.

CREATED KNIGHTS OF HOLY SEPULCHRE

Boston, Dec. 13 — (AP)—Joseph P. Kennedy, former United States Ambassador to Great Britain, and former mayor Frederick W. Mansfield of Boston have been created Knights of the Roman Catholic Order of the Holy Sepulchre," which dates back more than 1,000 years in Christian chivalry, it was learned today.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Dec. 13—(CP)—Synopsis: Temperatures are dropping rapidly over Southern Ontario this morning as gale force winds are bringing much colder air from the northwest. This cold air has pushed well into western Quebec. The New England states are experiencing the unseasonable mild weather which covered Southern Ontario yesterday, the early morning temperature at Boston was 62 degrees. Extremely cold weather still prevails over the Yukon with temperatures at Mayo 65 below zero. This is their fifth day with temperatures of 45 below or colder.

SEVERAL MOTORISTS FINED FOR SPEEDING

That it does not pay to be apprehended speeding within the city limits was discovered to the sorrow of several local motorists in city police court today when fines of from $5 to $15 plus costs were assessed against the offenders.

Court was of extremely short duration as the majority of the cases were settled out of court with fines and costs being paid.

INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION MEMBERS IN MONTREAL

Robert A. Pringle, chairman of the Industrial Commission, Ald. Lorne McDougall, president of the Chamber of Commerce, Ex-mayor Harry Rollins and Mayor Frank Follwell, members of the Industrial Commission are in Montreal today on important business for the Commission. They will interview M. W. Maxwell head of the C.N.R. Industrial Department and F. W. Collins, head of the C.P.R. Industrial Department with respect to a number of prospects mooted for this city. In telephone conversation with one of the members of the delegation today he stated "prospects are exceedingly bright in the matter we are discussing with the industrial heads in Montreal."

LOCAL SEA CADET WILL BE SELECTED FOR TRIP ABROAD

Interest in the Quinte Sea Cadet Corps is steadily mounting. Thursday night upwards of sixty future admirals turned out for the regular training period which was the last until further announcement.

Sea cadets are all agog with the news that one of their number will be chosen to represent the corps on an over-all Sea Cadet Corps of Canada which will visit Britain next year.

One cadet from each corps will be selected and insofar as the local corps is concerned the lads are sprucing up and paying strict attention to duty in an effort to be the one selected.

ADJOURN INQUEST UNTIL DECEMBER 17

The adjourned inquest looking into the death of Benjamin Spiegel, Station Street, who died in Belleville General Hospital some days ago following being struck by a car on Front Street, has been postponed until Tuesday, December 17th. The inquest was scheduled for Thursday night, but was postponed when one of the jury was unable to be present.

The late Mr. Johnson, who was in his 79th year, was born in Belleville and his boyhood and part of his young manhood days were spent here. At one time he lived in Hamilton and for many years he made his home in Toronto where he lived retired of late years. During his residence here Mr. Johnson was well known and high esteemed. Old friends will regret to learn of his death.

Surviving him are one daughter, Mrs. Herbert (Ellen) Fowler, Toronto; one brother, Mr. James S. Johnson, Boston, Mass.; one sister, Mrs. Lillian Gilbert, Windsor; two grandchildren, James Fowler and Jane Fowler, Toronto. His wife the former Alma Barber died some years ago.

The funeral service will be conducted at the McDougall & Brown Funeral Home, 646 St. Clair Avenue, Toronto, at three o'clock Saturday afternoon. Cremation will take place at the Toronto Crematorium.

Rationing of Power May Be Necessary

Toronto, Dec. 13 — (CP)—Dr. T. H. Hogg, chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, said last night that rationing of electric power might be necessary in Ontario at the beginning of the new year. Dr. Hogg said that unless voluntary reductions in use of power were achieved the Commission would be forced to put municipalities on a quota basis, calculated on the amount they previously used and providing a reduction of 10 to 20 per cent.

Blind Veteran in His First Letter To Santa Prays for Two Blue Eyes to Light His Life of Darkness

Phoenixville, Pa., Dec. 13 (AP) —Cpl. Chester R. Perkins, blinded by a land mine in Germany and a patient in an army hospital for 21 months, has written his first letter to Santa Claus—

"If God chooses, let me find beneath my Christmas tree two bright, shiny blue eyes—so that the memory of the last Christmas I saw may be blotted forever from my mind."

Perkins wrote to the Indianapolis News that he planned to study journalism at Butler University, and enclosed the following letter, which the News copyrighted:

Dear Santa Claus:

Aren't we all children? Can't all of us, though some of us are adult in mind, ask for the things which we want most in life? I can't remember ever writing to you before, but I have found it so increasingly difficult to obtain this thing which I want, that I thought perhaps you could help.

As a small child, I can remember wanting playthings and candy; as a teen-aged youth I wanted smart clothing and athletic equipment; now, I want something entirely different. It's not as childish as a plaything or, as temporary as a piece of candy; nor is it as ostentatious as smart clothing, or as energetic as athletic equipment. It is practical. Most people would think it a necessity. It isn't. Only the person who doesn't have it can understand that. He knows, it is a God-given luxury.

In asking for this, I have to think of you as an intermediary between God and me, for I have already said that it is God-given. He gave it to me once before, when I was born, but I lost it. I have missed it so much, and would like to have it back.

Dear Santa, if God chooses, let me find beneath my Christmas tree two bright, shiny blue eyes brimming over with good health and true vision. Let me place them in my head, then let me look out through the window at the snow lying deep and crisp and even, as far as those beautiful eyes can see. Let me drink in the looks of joy on the faces of those who love me, who have seen me groping and stumbling in the dark for so long. Let me hold those eyes aloft to the Christmas star that I might not forget the true meaning of Christmas. Let me see all these things so that the memory of the last Christmas I saw might be blotted forever from my mind. Replace the screaming of shells, the rumbling of tanks, the sound of tired marching feet with the singing of hymns, the laughter of little sisters, and the voices of thankful people. Replace the filthy, smelly mud of battle and the drawn faces of dying men with the cool feeling of fresh, clean sheets and the hopeful faces of men born anew.

Bring me those eyes for these purposes, and I will be grateful forever to Him who once gave them to me. If, on Christmas morn, I should not find them there, I won't really mind, and I will still be grateful to God, for haven't I still a good mind, a strong body, friends who love me, and a desire to justify the reason for my existence. After all, aren't these the important things in life?

So, Santa, there it is. That's what I want for Christmas. Please try, won't you.

From a grown-up little boy,
Cpl. Chester R. Perkins.

Too Heavy Use of Weed Killer Cuts Grain Yield Says Dept.

Ottawa, Dec. 13 —(CP)— The Agricultural Department today warned against heavy use of the new weed-killer, 2, 4-D on field crops disclosing that application in too large amounts can injure grain and sharply reduce yield.

Although a light application of the weed-killer often boosts the yield of field crops because it kills many weeds, experiments by the department show the danger of too-heavy applications.

George Knowles, Field Husbandry Division, Central Experimental Farm here, today described the results of experiments conducted this year in several parts of Canada.

It was found that "some grain crops, such as flax and oats are more susceptible to 2, 4-D than are wheat and barley," he stated. In addition "some brands of the chemical appear to be more harmful than others."

A new method of applying the chemical on mustard-infested wheat gave good results when tested at the Central Experimental Farm and at two points in the Prairie Provinces this summer.

In some of these tests less than one pint of a certain brand of 30 per cent 2, 4-D applied in only 4½ gallons of water per acre killed practically 100 per cent of the mustard and increased the wheat yield by two to three bushels an acre.

German POW Retention Said Under Discussion

Ottawa, Dec. 13 —(CP)— The retention of German prisoners of war in Canada as workers was reported today to be under discussion between the Canadian and United Kingdom governments.

With the Dec. 22 deadline for the final embarkation of prisoners only nine days away, the negotiations were believed to be in the final stages, and announcement of a decision one way or the other was expected shortly.

While officials here maintained a tight lid of silence on the whole question, the matter was known to have been considered at length by cabinet, which has been under considerable pressure, particularly from the West, to retain some of the captives for farm work.

(The Lethbridge Herald said yesterday it had learned an undisclosed number of prisoners, now held in a camp at Lethbridge, would be liberated shortly and allowed to remain in Canada.)

On the basis of what information was available here, it appeared the External Affairs Department had the matter under consultation with the British government, which sent the prisoners here and has the ultimate control of them.

At present, 2,200 prisoners are left in Canada. These had been scheduled to sail originally from Halifax on Dec. 22.

CLOSE NAVIGATION DEC. 17

St. Catharines, Dec. 13—(CP)— Weather permitting, closing time for navigation in the Welland ship canal for 1946 will be extended to midnight, Dec. 17, canal officials announced today.

The closing date is two days later than usual due to a last minute rush of traffic and favorable weather. The canal was opened for traffic April 1 this year, and despite the lengthy season tonnage is less than usual due to the 28-day shipping strike in May and June.

Four Injured In Collision Of Two Engines

Result of a collision between a Canadian National Railways' yard engine and another engine proceeding to the shops, four persons were injured shortly after three o'clock Friday morning, two men being admitted to hospital for treatment.

Injured are Leo Bellinger, 23 Campbell Street; Brakeman B. Shaddock, Lingham Street; Engineer William Nickle, Bleecker Ave., and Fireman J. Ashbury, Lingham Street. The two first named men were admitted to hospital, Bellinger suffering from an injured neck and Shaddock with a leg injury. Nickle suffered lacerations to his face and Ashbury, injuries to his left hand and chest.

According to reports the accident occurred in the east end of the yards and resulted when a large engine proceeding in reverse toward the shops collided with the front end of a yard engine to which was connected a combination car. Bellinger and Shaddock were riding in the combination car while Nickle and Ashbury were in charge of the yard engine.

Cause of the accident was not known by railway officials who stated the matter was being investigated.

Jury Acquits Ralph Turner On Serious Charge

Inability of the Crown to establish the exact date upon which the offence was alleged to have been committed, resulted in the acquittal Thursday evening of Ralph Turner, former Coe Hill school principal on a charge of gross indecency. The charge was heard before Judge Reynolds of Kingston, with the jury remaining out for 30 minutes before bringing in "not guilty" verdict. Three other charges of gross indecency are to be heard.

Particulars of the charge on which his client appeared were asked by Defence Counsel Malcolm Robb at the beginning of proceedings against Mr. Turner. These were supplied by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan.

Five witnesses were called by the Crown while the defence called six witnesses to the stand proving to the satisfaction of the jury that the alleged offence could not have taken place on the date specified in the charge.

Arnold Campbell Special Speaker

Mr. Arnold Campbell was guest speaker at the regular Y's Men's dinner meeting on Thursday evening when he spoke on Boys Work in Belleville, dividing the program into four phases, intellectual, social, physical and spiritual. The speaker described his own efforts along this line, and pointed out a number of ways in which service clubs could help in Boys' Work. He was introduced by Jerry Hyde and thanked by Roy Menary. President Archie Boyd presided at the meeting. Bud Trill was song leader and Robbie Clarke, Sergeant at Arms.

A highlight of the meeting was a mock trial, when Bulletin Editor Roy Wilcox was acquitted of charges laid by Morley Lovelace. Roy Menary was lawyer for the defendant, while Don Williams prosecuted the case.

GIRL FOILS SAFE CRACKERS

Sudbury, Dec. 13 — (CP) — Alertness of a girl elevator operator averted a possible safecracking job Wednesday night at the Hotel Coulson and resulted in the arrest of John Lunek, of Toronto. Two other men are being sought by police in connection with the attempted robbery. Miss Pat Lahcnace, operating the elevator noticed the men in the hotel office on the second floor. Aware that the hotel manager and assistant manager were in other parts of the hotel, she quickly notified the bell-boy captain, Ted Tones.

20 KNOWN DEAD

The body of another Blancardi daughter, Monica, six, was removed from the rubble several hours later.

Timothy P. Guineen, assistant fire chief in charge of the rescue operations, said shortly afterwards he doubted there was anyone left alive in the wreckage.

Tenement Smashed

This blaze, which started at about 11 p.m. Wednesday night, was the second in the ice plant in a few hours. The earlier one, occurring around 5 p.m., was put out swiftly by firemen.

Two boys, Joseph McCabe, 13, and Joseph Elio, ten, were arrested last night and held at juvenile delinquents on arson charges in connection with the earlier fire. They, along with 2 other boys, had been questioned by Assistant District Attorney Jacob Grumet.

Fire Marshal Thomas P. Brophy, in a report to Mayor William O'Dwyer, said the first fire was caused by "mischievous boys."

The disaster, Brophy reported, was caused "by weakening the roof booms" of the ice plant by the second blaze, "which apparently had been burning intensely for some time before its discovery, resulting in the roof caving in and pushing out the north wall."

Sixteen of the dead were residents of the tenement; the other was a fireman.

Police reported that rescuers had heard no word after midnight from Joseph Arigo, who had been heard intermittently from the debris throughout the evening. He was the only one of the tenement's occupants definitely known to be still alive.

EXCHANGE OF COAL

Represents Hamilton.

Col Gibson, who has represented Hamilton West in the Commons since 1940, and Mr. Claxton, elected as member for Montreal St. Lawrence - St. George in 1940, were sworn in shortly after Mr. King announced their appointments at a press conference in his East Block office.

Mr. Martin, now heading the Canadian delegation to the United Nations meetings in New York, will be sworn in later. Mr. King said Mr. Martin, who represents the Ontario constituency of Essex West in the Commons, might make a special trip from New York for the swearing in ceremony.

Outside of the cabinet changes, the Prime Minister said he had no announcements to make. The date of the next session would be disclosed, possibly before Christmas. The opening would not "run into February" in any event.

Will Name Assistants.

He said additional parliamentary assistants would be appointed but he did not know who would be given the posts or when appointments would be made.

While Col. Gibson had been handling efficiently the air branch of the Defence Department, his appointment to handle all departments might bring charges that he was partial to the air force, no matter how impartial he might be.

Accordingly Mr. King had asked Mr. Claxton to take over the defence ministry. Mr. Claxton had participated in international conferences where military matters were an important part of discussions.

Col. Gibson, switched from the revenue ministry in 1945 to become air minister and had handled the R.C.A.F. through the demobilization and rehabilitation period.

When asked if the six portfolio switches finished his cabinet changes, Mr. King replied:

"Nothing is complete until everything is done."

He could not say what readjustments might be made. He did not preclude the possibility of additions to the cabinet.

Judge German Appeared Normal Says Witness

Cobourg. Dec. 13 (CP)—Defence witnesses yesterday testified at the trial of Judge J. C. M. German of Cobourg on charges of drunken and dangerous driving that the judge appeared sober and normal the night of last Sept. 3.

That was the night an automobile police allege driven by Judge German struck and injured Mrs. Jeanne Taylor of Cobourg.

Mrs. Edith Midgely, who operates a hotel near the Cobourg police office, said she saw Judge German enter the police office on the night of the accident. He walked "perfectly normally" behind a police officer, she said, and no one assisted him.

Son of the proprietor of another hotel, Jack Rogers said that he saw Judge German going up the steps of the hotel about 11 o'clock the same night

"He walked perfectly natural up the stairs," Rogers said.

Mrs. Helen Robertson, a graduate nurse, said she saw Judge German take one drink of liquor in her mother's apartment in a hotel about 5 p m. that day.

"I saw him after the accident around 11 p.m." she said. "I understood there had been an accident. I went in to see him. He seemed upst and nervous but not seemed upset and nervous but not after he had been in an accident. He displayed no symptom of being under the influence of liquor.

"I came back half an hour later. He was very unsteady, his hands were shaking and he was perspiring. I took it to be insulin reaction. I did not attribute his condition to the effects of alcohol."

Cobourg, Dec. 13 — (CP) — The defence proceeded Thursday to present its case in the trial of Judge J. C. M. German on charges of drunken and dangerous driving laid in connection with an accident here the night of Sept. 3.

Mrs. Jeanne Taylor is alleged to have been struck and injured by an automobile driven by the Judge. The injured woman is still confined to hospital with injuries.

Norris Roberts, night porter at the hotel here where Judge German lives, testified he saw the Judge before the accident as he came out of the dining room.

"The Judge was in normal condition when he stopped at the desk to buy some cigarets," Roberts said. "I again saw him around 11 p.m. after the accident. He said 'Good night' to me and walked on upstairs. He walked in normal condition along the hall and up the stairs. From what I observed of his condition there was nothing to indicate that he had been drinking."

Robert Love, Cobourg garage operator, testified he saw Judge German at about 5:50 p.m. the day of the accident and that at the time the Judge was sober and seemed in a fit condition to drive.

Capt. Phillip Cameron testified that the accused was with him and some wedding guests in a hotel apartment around 7 o'clock the evening of the accident. Before dinner they had some rye whisky but the Judge did not take any, Capt. Cameron said.

200 Out-of-Season Beaver Pelts Taken By Game Wardens

North Bay, Dec. 13. (CP)—A little quiet strategy by the Ontario Lands on Forests Department netted game wardens more than 200 out-of-season beaver pelts within 48 hours and left a number of district fur dealers with a little explaining to do today.

Describing the ruse, G. M. Parks of the Lands and Forests Department said fur handlers were lured into making large shipments when a number of Northern Ontario game wardens were sent to take a special courre at Dorset. A series of raids then uncovered the illegal pelts.

Mr. Parks explained that wardens could tell which animals had been trapped before opening of the season Dec. 1 by the appearance and color of the pelts, some of which indicated that the beaver may have been killed in October or early November.

Wardens are continuing to check fur shipments throughout the district. Trappers are allowed to take ten pelts each in the open season from Dec. 1 to Dec. 21.

Mr. Parks said that in taking action the Department's Fish and Wildlife Division was trying to stamp out illegal trapping. If dealers refused to buy out-of-season pelts, trappers would have no incentive to take beaver illegally.

Fur men consider early-season beaver inferior to those trapped during the legal season; but many trappers poach during the warmer weather when the animals are more active, he explained.

Wardens seized 100 pelts from one North Bay dealer, 60 from another and 45 from a third. Fifty more pelts were taken from Mattawa dealers. Names of the dealers involved were not released by the department as it had not been decided what legal action would be taken against them

British Production

Total employment and production in Britain's manufacturing industries are now higher than before the war.

The latest issue of the official digest of statistics, which each month gives an overall picture of Britain's economic recovery, shows that the number of workers employed in September was 6,845,000. This is 30,000 more than the total for June, 1939, and 25,000 more than the figure for June of last year.

There has also been a considerable decline in the number of ex-service men and women not yet back at work: 490,000 in September compared to 700,000 in June.

Production of most of the metal industries is now running at about a peacetime record. The weekly steel production in October was 254,000 tons—4,000 more than the prewar record of 1937. This figure has been only twice exceeded (in March and May of this year) and once equalled (in 1939).

In shipbuilding where the labor force is much higher than before the war, the tonnage of merchant vessels completed in October was 117,000. This is the highest tonnage for many years; except for 118,000 tons produced last February. Tonnage under construction in United Kingdom shipyards at the end of the month was 1,682,000 gross tons.

In the textile industries, particularly cotton and wool spinning, the increase in production is still slow. But the labor force in these industries rose again between August and September from 713,000 to 722,000.

The ouput of cars in October was 26,767, the highest since the war and only a little below the 1935 monthly average of 29,102. Of the October production, close on 12,000 cars were scheduled for export, compared to 4,500 in 1935.

Statistics on coal production in October are also encouraging. The average weekly production during the month was the second highest figure recorded since November, 1943, when the labor force was considerable higher. The total output in October was 16,800,000 tons compared with 14,300,000 last April.

Mr. Herbert Morrison, leader of the House of Commons, in a talk to North of England miners last night praised their recent efforts. He said: "We are nearly half-way back to 1938, measured by individual effort. A 6% increase per day within eleven months is something for miners to be proud of, and for the people to be grateful about." Mr Morrison concluded, however, on a cautionary note: "Not enough — but better."

Mr. Morrison had been speaking to the miners of the vital importance of their efforts for the future well-being of Britain. The shortage of coal now, he said, is not only a shortcut calamity; but it threatens us with permanent austerity. "Unless the United Kingdom industries are based upon a successful coal industry there will be no success for industry and a poor outlook for Britain. None of the plans for technical reorganization and improved conditions can be carried into effect unless the output of coal is raised immediately."

To Be Honored in Abbey

There may be erected in Westminster Abbey, the shrine of Britain's honored dead, a plaque in memory of the late President Roosevelt of the United States, so said Prime Minister Attlee in the British Commons. That this is the wish of the British people there can be no doubt for his life and activity during war years were linked with the British people as president of the United States, ally and friend of Britain. Mr. Roosevelt endeared himself to the people of the British race and his name will be associated not only with his own country's history but also with that of Britain. His memory remains in the hearts of the British people and will do so down the generations.

How deep the feeling of the British people is in this sense of grateful memory of the former United States President is indicated in a question which was asked Mr. Attlee. He was asked if a memorial to Mr. Roosevelt could be included in the reconstruction of the House of Commons which was damaged during the war. Mr. Attlee explained that there was a rule that no memorial could be placed there within ten years of an individual's death except after resolution by both Houses and that if such a resolution were passed, there would be delay owing to the time necesary to complete the work. Mr. Attlee explained that he has been in communication with the Dean of Westminster to have the memorial table to Mr. Roosevelt set up in a suitable position in the Abbey.

A statue of the late Mr. Roosevelt is to be placed in Grosvenor Square, London, according to a decision made some time ago.

Cradle of Mankind

Interest of historians and archaeologists is centering on East Africa as plans are completed for a conference to be held in Nairobi opening next month. Referring to the theory that East Africa was the cradle of the evolution of the human race, the Stratford Beacon-Herald mentions the wartime discoveries of stone-age relic in Kenya by Dr. L. S. R. Leakey which "promise to make the country a Mecca of prehistorians in the future. It is the first International Congress on Pan-African Pre-history ever held, and is attracting about 50 delegates from universities and scientific bodies from Britain, the United States, France, Sweden, Italy, Belgium, Ceylon and various African countries.

"The main task of the conference will centre in the evidence to be drawn from the remarkable palaeontological and Stone Age finds made in Kenya. These include fossilised apes with more human characteristics than have previously been found in others of that age, and pebble-tools and hand-axes similar to ones found in Europe, but possibly belonging to a much earlier period.

"With other evidence preserved in lake deposits and caves of the East African Rift Valley, these facts may help to build up scientific proof that this was the first home of man" and that from this place he spread over the entire world.

"The delegates will visit parts of the Rift Valley in Kenya and Tanganyika where finds have been made, camps and rest houses having been built for their accommodation. These include the famous site at Olorgesallie, where thousands of fossilised bones and stone-age tools were found by Dr. Leakey during the war.

Cortez

The cables from Mexico City recently told of the discovery of a crystal and gold coffin in the chapel wall of the Hospital of Jesus which scholars feel contains the long-lost bones of Hernan (or Hernando) Cortes, conqueror of Mexico four centuries ago. This is the sort of thing that interests a lot of people—just why is hard to say, observes The New York Herald-Tribune.

Stout Cortes was the adventurer who seized a world for Spain. With a few hundred soldiers he took the wealth of Mexico. Even with ships, horses and artillery, all new to the natives, the feat seems almost impossible. (The fact that Cortes was first welcomed as a descendant of the sun was, of course, no handicap.) Take down your Prescott's Conquest of Mexico and read one of the world's great narratives.

This Cortes was a cruel man of wild ambition and urge who at last came upon poor days at home. The story goes that he crowded up to the carriage of Charles V and when the emperor asked who this stranger might be, Cortes replied: "I am a man who has given you more provinces than your ancestors left you cities." Be that as it may, the box of bones in Mexico City calls across the centuries.

Beloved, the holly is ordered; the trees will be lighted for you!
Three stockings will hang at the chimney,
instead of the usual two.
Little Jane has learned all about Santa.
She is walking and talking, you know.
She's the baby with brown eyes you wanted,
and prayed the good Lord would bestow.
I'm afraid I shall spoil her with loving,
though I vowed that I never would do;
But you'd do the same, I am certain, for she is the image of you.
We're hanging the wreaths in the windows, and there will be one on the door.
There'll be the tree for the children, the creche nicely made on the floor.
Mary is making the pudding. The presents
by Ann will be tied.
The gifts Christmas Eve will be given, and Betty and Bud will preside.
The children will wake in the morning,
what Santa has brought them to see;
And Christmas, as far as we're able, will be as you wished it to be.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

TWO SIDES TO EVERY STORY

Your teachings about exposure to cold are true, as I have proved by my own experience, writes a banker. I was a regular hot house plant, the banker continues, when I was sent to the northwest Canada wilderness where the temperature was from 25 to 40 below most of the winter, with six or eight feet of snow on the level. I drove thousands of miles by open sleigh during my three years there—sometimes all day and all night. It was impossible to keep warm and often I had to walk the hills getting back into sleigh soaking wet. In the spring my feet were wet and I was soaked to the skin much of the time. But I never had a cold.

Nothing extraordinary about that. The banker just wasn't exposed to anything so he didn't catch anything.

But, shucks, what does he know about the effects of exposure to cold and wet? To be sure, banker's experience tallies with the experience of every Arctic explorer or hunter, every Bering Sea fisherman, every North Woods trapper, every shipwrecked sailor who drifted for days and weeks before rescue, every soldier who endured the rigors of trench warfare and winter campaigns. But again, what do these people know about exposure, as compared with the fireside philosophers who sometimes get caught in a draft or a sudden fall of rain or something?

The banker and the rest of them just waste their breath telling of their experience. The fireside philosophers have the thing all taped—they are backed by the public health authorities, by the great majority of medical practitioners and even the "specialists" (the fireside boys like to think a "specialist' knows more or has better training than an ordinary doctor). Furthermore when you misguided souls who have learned the hard way what exposure means tell the world no illness follows in consequence, the world doesn't take it seriously, for all the world or nearly all the world just knows you get your death of pneumonia from exposure, and nearly all of the medical profession and the health authorities, so-called, do their damnedest to keep all the world believing that. You see, if people believe most everyday illness comes from trifling exposure to drafts, changes of weather, dampness, and the like, the health authorities and the medical practitioners have a nice soft time of it.

Once in a while some reader asks why I invented the term cri anyway for most people have no notion what it means, and so if I would stick to the three words it stands for—Common Respiratory Infections—at least these words would mean something.

Oh, well, anyway I tried. Why do many persons use the term TB instead of tuberculosis?? It is old stuff—originally physicians used the initial letters of Tubercle Bacilli when reporting in the presence of the patient that the bacilli were found in the sputum. But no tubercle bacilli are found in the incipient or early stage of lung tuberculosis, the stage when proper treatment is practically certain to bring about a cure—and today it is the aim of all health agencies and all physicians to diagnose tuberculosis in the incipient stage (by means of physical examinations, X-ray and tuberculin tests) in order to give the patient the benefit of such timely treatment.

I'm grateful to the banker for his testimony—it comes at the right moment to counteract the criticisms of these people who refuse to call it cri.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Heading North

Have Ben Told I would sleep better if the head of the bed is toward the north—(L. R. S.)

Answer—Except in Ben's imagination there is no ground for the notion.

Masks in Japan

You will be interested to know that in Japan all persons having any form of disease that might be spread through cough, sneeze or conversation spray wear face masks. One custom that might be adopted in America with benefit to all.—(O. S. E.)

Answer —Thank you. But first you'd have to convert most of the physicians, health authorities and laymen from their belief that foul weather, drafts, dampness and the like cause such disease.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Have dogs always barked?

Barking is a form of vocal expression that seems to have been acquired by dogs since their domestication.

Wolves, foxes, wild dogs, and other members of the canine family in the natural state howl, growl, yelp, whine and make other characteristic noises, but they never produce sounds properly described as barking. Dingoes, the wild dogs of Australia, do not bark in their natural state. The dogs found among the Indians when Europeans first visited America are believed to have been more recently descended from the wolf than were the domestic dogs of the Old World. Early writers observed that these Indian dogs not only were savage and ugly in temper but that they howled rather than barked.

When Columbus visited the Island of Santa Marta in the West Indies in 1494 he found among the natives a breed of domesticated dogs that neither barked nor howled, apparently being completely dumb. Even dogs that had been carried to the New World by Columbus and his companions were said to have lost their propensity for barking after they had been in the West Indies for several years. In the "Federalist Papers" Alexander Hamilton quoted a French writer who said that all animals and human beings degenerated in America and that dogs ceased to bark after breathing American atmosphere for a while!

An ancient writer referred to the fact that shepherd dogs in the wilds of Egypt had lost the faculty of barking. A breed of domestic dogs in the Belgian Congo known as Basenji, "bush things," do not bark but make only a growling or "rumbling" noise. Individual dogs have been trained not to bark under any circumstances.

The characteristic noise uttered by the coyote or American "prairie wolf" is a dog-like yelping, half howl and half bark, and Thomas Say, the first naturalist to describe this species, named it "Canis latrans," - barking wolf. The cry of the American gray or timber wolf is a prolonged and steady, deep-bass howl, unbroken into anything like a true bark. It is a singular fact that, while wolves and wild dogs do not bark in the natural state, when Australian dingoes, Eskimo sledge dogs and other wild canines on the borderline of dogdom are placed in company with domestic dogs they soon acquire the barking habit, apparently by learning to imitate them.

Although barking seems to be as natural to the domestic dog as purring is to the cat or grunting to the hog, the habit evidently has been developed in the gentler environment made possible by the dog's association with man. It would be going rather far to state it as a fact, but it almost seems as if human speech had influenced the dog and caused it to develop a form of vocal expression unknown to its wild progenitors.

Ottawa, Dec. 13 —— Recruiting for permanervice in Canada's three armeebes will probably reach the tquarter mark by the end of year, a survey indicated tods.

The army has reac5,000 of its 25,000 objective as more than 27,000 all rankwing at present, 12,000 of whare "of undetermined status."

Naval recruiting to3,600 of a target of 10,000.

The R.C.A.F. has end or re-engaged 11,305 officead men of whom slightly monn 2,200 are new to the servThe air force is aiming at 1t which may be added to ifi when 2,000 personnel static on the Northwest Staging Roare included.

Post-war life in thee services won't be as toup it has been. New features ine abolition of "lights out" ru30 days annual leave ,better pay and elimination of many pre-war spit-and-polish regulations.

In addition to its basic force of 25,000, the army plans a 180,000-man reserve force. The navy reserve will number 18,000 and the air force 14,500 of whom 4,500 will be members of auxiliary squadrons trained and ready for immediate call-up.

Heaviest flow of applications has been to the air force, many of them from trained aircrew who were placed on reserve during the latter part of the war. A large number of fully-qualified men had to be turned down because of limitations.

Most of the air force enlistments have been for ground trades and only trained personnel so far have been accepted for aircrew. The service does, however, plan an aircrew training program to begin at an undetermined future date.

An R.C.A.F. spokesman explained that as time goes on many of the trained backlog will become over-age and outdated by modern developments.

The navy's strength will include two aircraft carriers, two cruisers, 18 frigates, 12 destroyers, 12 minesweepers and auxiliary vessels.

Spearheading the army will be an air brigade of 10,000 men.

Jacob L. Cohen, K.C., Toronto lawyer, sentenced at Haileybury to a term of six months on conviction of assaulting his secretary, fracturing her nose.

Jacob L. Cohen Given 6 Months In Assault Case

Haileybury, Dec. 13 — (CP) — Application will be made today to obtain the freedom, on bail, of Jacob L. Cohen, K.C., pending appeal against a six month sentence for assaulting Elizabeth Guenard, 20-year-old stenographer, who the Toronto labor lawyer admitted was his "mistress".

Conviction of Cohen was made by Judge J. A. S. Plouffe who said he disbelieved "in its entirety" evidence given by the accused, the victim, and J. L. Mitchell, the manager of the hotel where Cohen was accused of attacking Miss Guenard with whom he occupied adjoining rooms on Nov. 21.

On the other hand, said Judge Plouffe, he believed the evidence of Crown witnesses including Mrs. Dora McLean, hotel housekeeper, who told how she had been disturbed by a woman's screams and had later found Miss Guenard, clad only in a slip, her face puffed and bleeding. She also said she had seen "teeth marks" on Miss Guenard's chest and the secretary, according to witness, had claimed Cohen had bitten her.

"Your actions were either those of a man who may have been drunk or whose mentality may have been deranged, or who is what is commonly known as a pervert," the Judge told the accused.

The Judge added: "Should there be an appeal against this conviction I will give further reasons for my decision."

Defence Counsel J. J. Robinette, K.C., said "We definitely will appeal on the grounds the conviction is bad in law."

Cohen claimed he had not assaulted the woman, whom he took to Haileybury because he "wanted to have someone to talk to on the train," and had merely tried to quiet her when she burst into a fit of temper after an afternoon of drinking. He claimed the woman bit his hand and he may have pushed her nose in a bit to release her grip. The injury to the nose was described as a "hairline fracture."

More Than 20 Marooned, Wait To be Rescued

Seattle, Dec. 13 (AP)—More than 20 men, women and children, marooned by the flooding Green River, waited at the windows of upper floors of their homes south of Seattle early Thursday, while soldiers from Fort Lewis and sheriff's deputies failed repeatedly in efforts to rescue them.

Authorities reported that a bridge serving them was under water and too shaky for army trucks to risk, and that the swirling flood made foot passage across it too dangerous.

Heavy rains also resulted in slides in the Yakima River canyon.

Thieves Raid Tower And Steal Cigarettes

London, Dec. 13 —(AP)— Thieves raided the Tower of London, where the Crown Jewels usually are stored in peacetime, and stole a large quantity of cigarettes. The jewels were removed to another place of safety during the war and had not been returned. The cigarettes were stocks of a canteen for the military detachment in the Tower.

Distribution Cost Will be Probed By Labor Govt.

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 13 —(CP)— A high government source said that a drive to bring down the costs of distribution is among early items in the labor government program. Thus the government hopes to reduce food costs, although prices to farmers and other primary producers are considered fair.

"It has never been quite clear why a lettuce which brings the farmer twopence should cost the city housewife a shilling—six times as much," the spokesman said.

"Now a full-scale inquiry into distribution will be made, perhaps through the food ministry."

Farmers' prices for major crops now are fixed by the government after annual review of farm income in relation to other professions in the rural community. Labor sources said that the present government never would attempt to inform farmers of how they should handle their own production problems but would continue to tell them what was needed from the fields and what crops were unessential.

British agriculture has become more efficient in recent years under the watchful eye of agricultural committees, said these sources, and the government hopes the trend will continue, with farmers trading ideas on new crops and new methods rather than under compulsion or even advice from official sources.

More fruit and vegetable production probably will be encouraged, although distribution methods and costs will be organized so that home-grown supplies can compete with those from the Continent and overseas.

Two Shootings In East London Still a Mystery

London, Ont., Dec. 13 — (CP) —As a movement started in Middlesex county council for re-establishment of a county police force to compete with the rising crime wave in rural areas, provincial police reported Thursday that the two shootings in suburban East London Dec. 4 were still a mystery.

James Robert, 32, is in hospital recovering from a bullet wound in his side. In the second incident, three miles away, Albert Evans, 35, was fired at by a masked gunman but was not hit.

Crown Attorney Claude Savage has linked the flareups with organized gambling, and within 24 hours of the shootings called on provincial authorities for aid in the probe. Inspector Alex McLeod of the provincial police in Toronto was reported still in the district, but has not been available for comment in the last two days.

Provincial police here have offered no theories in the shootings.

In county council Wednesday night Reeve William Goddard of London township and Reeve Frank Gerry of Westminster township said Middlesex should again have a police force of its own. The county has been patrolled by the provincial police for several years.

"It is high time something was done about it," said Reeve Goddard, referring to the Dec. 5 shootings and also to the assault and robbery of a district farmer Dec. 8 in which two youthful gunmen are sought.

Reeve James Orr of Parkhill, chairman of council's Criminal Justice Committee, said he had "a feeling that London and Westminster townships are not getting their fair share of police protection."

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Juby, of Shannonville, spent Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Juby in Toronto and attended the Canadien-Maple Leaf hockey match.

On the afternoon of Dec. 7th, Mrs. Fred Robinson, Corbyville, entertained at a trousseau tea in honor of her daughter, Miss Bernice Robinson, bride-elect. Guests were received by Mrs. Fred Parrott, and the trousseau was displayed. Mrs. S. LaFontaine and Mrs. Carman Lowther served tea to the guests in the dining-room, where the wedding cake, flanked by tall pink tapers, attracted considerable admiration.

Messrs. Justice Wells and Beverly Matthews, K.C., of Toronto, along with Mr. L. Fair, agricultural representative for Hastings, were entertained at an afternoon tea by Mrs. Emile Masse, Trent Rd, following their inspection of Mr. Masse's herd of pure bred Holstein cattle, his milk cooling system and all dairy equipment, in connection with the Royal Commission on milk held in Belleville, this week.

WEDDINGS

LAWRENSON—SMITH

At half past seven o'clock on the evening of Dec. 7th., All Saints Anglican church in Windsor, Ont., was the scene of a pretty but quiet marriage when Miss Ethel Maude Smith of Belleville, became the bride of Mr. Glenford Ralph Lawrenson of Corbyville, with Rev. Francis W. Watts officiating.

The bride was charming in a street-length dress of heavenly blue crepe with a matching headdress of blue veiling, and pink ostrich tips. She wore white elbow-length gloves, and a corsage of Johanna Hill roses with fern.

Miss Mary Lawrenson, sister of the groom, was the bride's only attendant, wearing black crepe with sequin trim, matching headdress and Kelly green elbow-length gloves. Her corsage was of yellow baby 'mums.

The groom was assisted by Mr. Gerald Courtney, of Windsor.

Following the ceremony a buffet supper was served at the home of the groom's aunt, Mrs. Mary Stenlake, 384 Cartier Place, Windsor, Ont. After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Lawrenson will reside in Windsor.

JOHNSON—CHISHOLM

A double-ring wedding ceremony was solemnized at half past two o'clock on the afternoon of December 7th., in Bridge Street United Church, when Miss Betty Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Chisholm, Belleville, became the bride of Mr. George James, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Johnson, Belleville, with Rev. D. C. Amos officiating, and Mr. Alec Gordon presiding at the organ.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride made a charming picture in a gown of white slipper satin, with net skirt; her finger-tip veil falling from a Mary Stuart headdress. She carried a bouquet of red roses.

Mrs. Arthur Colden was her sister's matron-of-honor, attired in a gown of white silk jersey with a net skirt and wearing a shoulder length veil with a headdress of pink carnations. Her bouquet was of pink roses.

Little Patsy Chisholm, sister of the bride, was very attractive in a gown of white organdy, with a headdress of pink carnations, and carrying a nosegay of baby 'mums and forget-me-nots.

Mr. Gordon Chisholm, brother of the bride, performed the duties of the groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. William Messer and Mr. Arthur Colden.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold compact, the bride's gift to the groom was a cigarette lighter; to the matron-of-honor, a gold compact; to the flower girl, a plastic purse and to the groomsman, a cigarette lighter. The ushers received cheques.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where Mrs. Chisholm received the guests wearing a mauve crepe ensemble, and a corsage of white 'mums. She was assisted by the groom's mother wearing brown crepe and a corsage of white 'mums.

Tea was poured by Mrs. Everett Vance, aunt of the bride, and by Miss Madeline Robertson, cousin of the bride.

For a trip to Toronto and other Western points the bride chose a green ensemble with brown accessories. After their return Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will reside in Belleville.

NOT IN TIME FOR CHRISTMAS

Chatham, Dec. 13 —(CP)— Of small comfort to Chatham children is the announcement that candy supplies may be increased in the new year. They want candy for Christmas and there just isn't enough to go around. Wholesalers say they are receiving only 55 per cent of their 1941 quota. They claim, too, that shortage of labor and wrappings and a rise in the cost of glucose are responsible.

The heavy rains during the week were much appreciated by many farmers who were still short of water for their stock.

IVANHOE W.I.

Ivanhoe—The December meeting of the Woman's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. J. C. Sills with an attendance of 27.

Mrs. W. French opened the meeting with "O Come All Ye Faithful", and a short poem, after which the Institute Ode was sung and The Lord's Prayer repeated.

During a business period, it was decided that $5 be sent to The Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

Mrs. A. Wood, Home Economics' convener, opened the program with "Silent Night", after which Mrs. G. Wood gave a reading on "Cancer, It's Common Locations, the Signs and Treatments". Many questions were asked, and the answers given with the help of literature from The Canadian Cancer Society.

Mrs. E. McMaster gave a very interesting demonstration of homemade Christmas decorations and wrapping gifts.

Mrs. C. Mitz read the story "Unto Us a Child is Born", bringing to all minds the true meaning of Christmas.

The January "At Home" in the Town Hall, Ivanhoe, will be one of interest to the ladies and men of the community who like to hear a good debate and get better acquainted with the Women's Institute.

Mrs. Sills expressed appreciation to the ladies presenting the program. Thanks were extended to Mrs. Sills for opening her home for the meeting and an enjoyable afternoon.

The meeting closed with refreshments being served by Mrs. Fargey, Mrs. Hassels and Mrs. Sills.

"MIRACLE" MACHINE

Dr. Ruth B. Drown, of Hollywood, Calif., shown with one of the instruments that won her the certificate of merit of New York Museum of Science and industry. Using this machine and a drop of dried blood from a patient, Dr. Drown claims that she can intercept the energy from the patient's body — even if that person is half way round the world — and diagnose the patient's ailment. The blood which is introduced into the machine on a blotter, acts as a crystal for tuning, just as radio and radar waves are tuned through the air, to the body of the patient and back to the machine which produces X-ray photographs.

Recent Bride Guest Of Honor at Shower

Mrs. Tommy Belnap, (nee Nadine Galbraith) was the guest of honor at a miscellaneous shower held at the home of Miss Phyllis Galbraith, 38 Dunbar Street, on Wednesday evening, when Miss Galbraith and Mrs. Ross Row were co-hostesses. Mrs. Row welcomed the twenty friends who spent the evening making dusters, each product being initialled by the girl making it. After all the dusters were completed little Sharon Arnold, wheeled in a doll carriage decorated in pink, and containing many interesting packages wrapped in white, into the room and presented same to Mrs. Belnap. After opening the parcels Mrs. Belnap expressed her thanks and appreciation to her friends.

In the dining room Mrs. J. Grindrod poured while dainty refreshments were enjoyed.

W.M.S. CHRISTMAS PROGRAM

Plainfield. — The regular monthly meeting of Plainfield W.M.S. was held on December 11, at the home of Mrs. Erle Denyes with attendance of 25 adults and four children, it being the Christmas meeting, when the Baby Band members and their mothers were guests for the afternoon.

A lovely Christmas tree decorated with lights, a star and many colored decorations adorned the corner of the room, and the children's toys and books were hung upon it to be distributed at the close of the meeting. Mrs. A. C. Campbell had charge of the devotional period which was in the form of a candlelighting service. Assisting her as Indian women were Mrs. Clarence Hall, Mrs. Prindle, Mrs. Norman Hall, Jr., and Mrs. Clayton Hall; Canadian women were, Mrs. A. Meeks, Mrs. Charles Beatty, Mrs. S. Parks and Mrs. V. Elliott. Candles were lighted as each member spoke. Mrs. Campbell read the Scripture lesson and carols were sung throughout this part.

The offering was received by Bruce Hall and dedicated by Mrs. Campbell. Mrs. S. Hazard, Baby Band superintendent, read a children's story "Come to Christmas". Mrs. W. Sills sang for the Band members. A special collection was taken for the Baby Band work and mite boxes were collected.

Treasurer's report was given by Mrs. C. Hall and Mrs. Elliott offered her home for the January meeting.

Mrs. Arthur Hall, group leader, opened the program with "Silent Night", Mrs. Clarence Marshall read the "Christmas message from the Moderator" found in the monthly. Mrs. Hall contributed "A Christmas Story" and Mrs. Marshall closed the meeting with prayer.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants.

Centenary

Centenary — Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Reid and children and Mr. and Mrs. Horace Palmer of Foxboro, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Percy Sutherland.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Glover, of Belleville attended church at Centenary on Sunday and were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Blakely.

Mr. and Mrs. Cooney and family have moved onto the Harry Roblin farm.

The community was grieved to hear of the passing of Mr. James Hannah. It has been said of him that if he could not do a person a good turn he would never do them a wrong. What more could be said of anyone? Sincere sympathy is extended to Mrs. Hannah and family in their bereavement.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Aikens entertained friends to dinner on Sunday.

The Farm Forum met on Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Sargent, with a good attendance.

BEAUTY

MAKING-UP FOR NATURE'S LACKS

The red-head has real make-up problems.

Strange as it is, some movie stars look younger as they get older. Early photographs of Greta Garbo, Gloria Swanson and many others are less glamorous than those taken recently. Fashions in clothes, the arc of make-up, the marvellous offerings of hair stylists all are based on ideas of youthfulness. Old Meanie Time is losing out. Nobody seems to be afraid of the old gent with the scythe and the long white whiskers. As long as the cosmetic chemists stay on the job, the sisters can give Time the laugh.

Not so long ago, make-up was regarded with suspicion. The "painted lady" was looked upon as a sort of social outcast. Now, if you haven't a touch of rouge on the cheeks, a bit of brightening color on the lips, you don't blend with the times. No doubt many wall flowers were saved from their sad fate by the permanent wave and the lipstick. Now it is a rare woman who appears frumpy, who can't hold her good looks and her man. Everything is in her favor. All she has to do is to keep healthy, keep sweet and get wise to the right kind of make-up.

She must adapt make-up, coiffure and clothes to her personality. That means she must use her head, keep her eyes open as to what changes are going on in the world of fashion. She can't afford to get out of step or lag behind the parade.

The time has come when make-up no longer means an appearance of artifice, when the smart woman makes every effort to attain as natural an effect as she possibly can. The idea is to impart the illusion of beauty. An excess of facial batik is bound to make a woman look hard and bold; it adds to her years. Delicate applications of the right shades of powder, rouge and lipstick give freshness, make the countenance more interesting, a bit more vivid.

Make-up, as a rule, can be classified as light, medium or dark. Blondes at all times should use sofe, pastel shades that are favorable to delicate skins of fine texture. Blondes with sallow skins need bolder tones. Those who have become blonde by bleaching are still brunette personalities, and should apply brunette cosmetics.

Brunettes are in the medium bracket, except when the skin is golden, hair black, eyes very dark. When selecting rouge and lipstick, the brunette must remember that the darker product is more likely to carry a blue cast, and blue-reds are cold colors.

The redhead has real make-up problems. No matter what the shade of her skin may be, her flaming thatch always must be taken into consideration.

Beauty Depends on More Than Lovely-Looking Features

The upsweep hairdo worn by movie-star Janis Carter would give any woman's costume a lift.

By HELEN FOLLETT

VANITY is not the motive power that sends girls and women chasing beauty rainbows. No, my little chickadee, it is self respect, as all of us know. The better we look, the better we feel. One experiences a glow when one fares forth in gay, chic attire, complexion clear, eyes sparkling, hairdo the latest whoop-la. It all helps one to stand the wear and tear of human existence, carry on the job whatever it may be.

Suppose the sisters were to decide that beautfying is a waste of time and money, let themselves grow old, go to seed. The world would be the loser because Woman is, in a way, a spectacle. Everyone enjoys the sight of a pretty girl. She is part of the scenic show. It is up to her to contribute in the best form she can attain.

Up To Date

Every fellow wants his girl to look tip-top; if she does not it is no reflection on his taste in femmes. Children desire that the mama be up to date. The kids are likely to be critical, as every mother knows who wears the same old clothes, the same old hair-do for too long a time.

Beautiful women make beautiful homes and beautiful homes make a better world. You can't get around that, you sour ones, who continue to believe that too much time is spent on prettying. The thing for the long-nosed critics to do is to join up with the puchritude seekers, get younger, sweeter, better looking.

More Than Just Features

We realize these days that beauty is something more than finely chiseled features, the svelte shape, the perfect coiffure. It includes admirable traits of character, and active mind, tolerance, humor, effervescing spirits.

Those radiant qualities are of our own making. The smart woman is on the job every waking moment, endeavoring to find out how to get along happily with her fellow beings, how to avoid arguments and irritations. She inspires affection and deep feelings of friendship. She expresses beauty in its highest form.

H. & S. Club Holds Christmas Meeting At King George

Members of the King George Home and School Association met for a Christmas program on Monday evening, with a good attendance of parents and teachers.

Owing to the illness of the president, Mrs. J. R. McCullough, the Vice President, Mrs. N. Meldrum, was in charge. A sing-song of Christmas carols was much enjoyed, at the conclusion of which the guest, Miss Norma Arkles, contributed an appropriate solo.

Mr. Fairman introduced the speaker for the evening, Rev. D. C. Amos, who spoke on the subject, "The Home". Mr. Amos said in part—"Each child has four sets of teachers, namely: 1. Playmates, who are valuable to the teaching of co-operation, but who need careful oversight by parents. 2. School teachers, who only participate in child education but cannot take over. 3. Community teachers, such as newspapers, magazines, radio, movies and church, all of which are valuable in the construction of character; 4. The parents: three aspects of your job as parents are 'vision', 'emotional harmony' and 'concern'. The greatest asset for a child is parental vision of what a child may do.

Education cannot do alone without love and prayer in the home. Responsibility for emotional harmony rests with the parents in planning and building for harmony, which should be rooted in the lives of the parents through their relationship with God. The concern of the parents shows in the child's ability in making decisions, in leadership among his equals, and in skill in handling all situations arising therefrom. Parents often fail to recognize the powers with which God has invested them, to re-shape and re-build their own lives. But the fulfillment of life can only be through the families. Home can be either a help or a liability to child welfare."

Mrs. E. W. Bolton, on behalf of those present, expressed gratitude to Mr. Amos for his very fine address. As social convener she invited the parents and guests to the Teachers' Room where a table gaily decorated in the traditional Christmas colors was spread with delicious refreshments to which all did ample justice as a social hour was spent together.

"Be Your Age" a Wise Slogan

The upswept hair-do of movie star Evelyn Keyes has dignity, charm.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Be your age is a good beauty slogan. Some of our young ladies are making themselves look older by doing their pretty tresses into uppity, sleek, severe arrangements. Many of the slick movie stars are sticking to soft, ringleted effects. They know what they are about all right. Youth and good looks are their stock in trade.

And now let us consider some of the misguided oldsters. If they didn't try to look so young, they wouldn't look so old. You know them, my paper friend. They are still wearing knee length skirts though Madame Fashion has ordered them a wee bit longer. They have flowing locks when a smart upped hair-do would give them dignity and charm. Make-up? They're the girls who shovel it on. They start with a heavy application of foundation cosmetic, haping it will conceal the wrinkles; instead it reveals them, plays them up. Too much rouge that forms a shadow on their cheeks, makes them look tired, all played out. They put lipstick on in double doses. It just doesn't make sense.

Unafraid of Birthdays

Birthdays don't seem to touch some women for the very reason that they aren't afraid of birthdays, don't dress as their grandchildren do. They take life as it comes, without worry, knowing that every age brings its own kind of charm.

One should grow old graciously, as well as gracefully. One should, above everything else, keep sweet. One should be useful, one way or another. It won't do to let the mind dwell too much on the past, feel regret for lost illusions. Talking about the past dates one, seldom interests younger people. All that stuff about the "good old days" does not make an appeal.

If life teaches a woman anything at all, it should teach her the folly of argument and controversy. It just isn't worth while. You can't change people; you shouldn't want to.

New Soapless VEL Lightens The Family Wash

by Frances Thompson
noted homemaking authority

Let's keep abreast of the times! Soapless VEL is the new, modern cleanser for use on washday. But its use must be understood to be appreciated. Letters from satisfied users are enthusiastic in praise of VEL for the family wash. One such letter says, "I poured in the VEL, put the clothes in the tub to soak as usual, and went about my other work for an hour or so, then came back all ready for a tussle with the washing. To my surprise the water was already filled with dirt, and with very little elbow grease the clothes washed clean as never before".

NO SUDS NEEDED

Because VEL is light in weight, you use less of it. For instance, if 1 cup of soap will do the job in your washing machine, use about ¾ cup VEL instead. Experience will soon teach you the amount you need. Put VEL in first then add the water, which need not be hot. The foamy suds will soon subside but no matter! Unlike soap, the washing power of VEL is right there in the solution and it keeps on cleaning clothes long after the suds disappear.

VEL LIFTS OUT DIRT

VEL is quite different from soap. It literally lifts out the dirt which can be seen, through the darkened water, deposited at the bottom of your wash tub or machine. For this reason, and because VEL is equally good for all kinds of materials, the same water can often be used for the entire wash. A little dry VEL sprinkled on stains or extra-soiled spots will help to remove them. For extra soiled clothes—try soaking overnight with VEL.

NO SOAP SCUM

VEL forms no soap scum on clothes to make them gray and dingy so much less rinsing is usually sufficient. Nor does it leave any hard-to-remove ring around the tub. VEL is swell when used correctly.

Kingsley Mann Given Six Years' Imprisonment

Niagara Falls, Dec. 13—(CP)—Kingsley Mann, 30, was sentenced to Portsmouth Penitentiary for 6 years by Magistrate John B. Hopkins Thursday, when he pleaded guilty to two charges of armed robbery at Stamford and Thorold, and a charge of car theft at Thorold.

Mann told the court he has not worked for six months, because he is crippled with arthritis. "I was married a year ago, and my wife is expecting a baby. We couldn't find a place to live and I was desperate," he said.

Toronto police captured Mann after a Thorold taxi driver reported the theft of his car.

Appeal Entered Against Decision

Chatham, Dec. 13 (CP)—An appeal has been entered by Geo. Stratton, of the Prices Board, to the county judge against a decision of Magistrate Ivan Craig dismissing a price ceiling charge against Noble Duff, Windsor.

The charge, heard sometime ago, alleged that at a auction sale at Duff's Chatham township farm Feb. 15 last, Duff sold a passenger car and a used half-ton pickup truck at a price in excess of the ceiling price.

Evidence presented was to the effect that the two vehicles were sold together at auction for $850.

Duff, it was alleged, stopped the bidding when it reached this figure.

AID GEORGIA IN PROSECUTING COLUMBIANS

Confessions made by Lanier Waller, RIGHT, and James Ralph Childers, REAR, former members of the "Columbians," implicating the leaders of the allegedly Nazi-like organization in a scheme to take over the United States government, were discharged by Georgia's attorney-general, Eugene Cook, who has filed against the group in an effort to revoke its charter. At the LEFT is Renee Forrest who played a dramatic role in compiling evidence against the organization. Sent down by the non-sectarian anti-Nazi league, she obtained a job in the office of the Columbians and later prevailed upon Childers and Waller to see the error of their ways and give evidence against Homer L. Loomis, secretary, and Emory C. Burke, president of the group. The photo was made in the league's office during a visit made by Waller and Childers to New York.

Washington Spotlight

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Dec. 13 — (CP) — When John L. Lewis dramatically called off the soft coal strike he proved once again what most Americans now will promptly forget, that he holds and wields the power of economic life and death over the United States.

He was able effectively to stifle the industry and public services of the United States by a world to his soft coal miners. And when the situation was approaching the crisis, another gesture from Lewis ended it and brought relief to a shivering, apprehensive nation.

Lewis never revealed what single circumstance prompted him to retreat. Probably it was a combination of circumstances but mainly the fact that in imperilling the economic life and physical well-being of the public he was hitting his own army of followers and inviting destruction of his union and his own powerful position.

But the lesson for Americans is that in ending the strike no less than in precipitating it, Lewis demonstrated the extraordinary power he holds and does not hesitate to use.

That probably will be forgotten quickly by the relieved rank and file but not by the anti-labor union members of the Senate and House of Representatives.

It would seem certain that a flock of anti-labor measures will be brought into the new Congress opening Jan. 2 and that the president in his message to Congress will recommend legislation designed to remove from the hands of labor leaders such absolute power as that exercised by John L. Lewis.

One direct result of the soft coal incident was a slight boost to President Truman's prestige. The president handed Lewis and the miners over to the courts and remained resolutely silent until pressure finally induced him to announced a radio appeal to the miners. But before the time for his speech his "silent treatment" had brought results and the Lewis retreat made his appeal unnecessary.

Washington correspondents, tightly encased in evening clothes no longer the slick fit they were when war put them in mothballs, stood in line in the overheated White House East Room the other night and waited as long as 45 minutes for their turn to shake hands with President Truman and his wife. The president and Mrs. Truman, with one 10-minute recess to sit down and have coffee, smilingly greeted an officially counted 1,477 correspondents and their spouses.

PRESENTATION

On Tuesday evening a number of friends from the community met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Fitchett and presented the newly-weds with a glass top coffee table.

Mr. Fitchett, with a few words in his usual genial manner, thanked those present and Mrs. Fitchett joined him in asking them to come again to their home.

Refreshments were served and a social evening was enjoyed.

COMMITS SERIOUS OFFENCE

Napanee, Dec. 13 — (CP)—Wilfred Baker, 32, of Harlowe, married and father of four children, Thursday was sentenced to nine months definite and nine months indefinite in the Ontario Reformatory, plus 10 lashes, on conviction by Judge J. E. Madden on a charge of having carnal knowledge of a 12-year-old girl at nearby Kaladar last April.

Evidence was that Baker left for an unknown Ontario address after committing the offence and was not seen in this area until arrested by provincial police here last September.

Paper Demands 'Drastic Reform' In Courts Martial

London, Dec. 13 — (CP Cable) —"Drastic Reform" in army courts martial was demanded by the Daily Mirror in an editorial citing the case of a British soldier who was sentenced to death in Italy for allegedly murdering a little girl, then reprieved through the chance intervention of a padre.

"The circumstances constitute a scandal of the first magnitude," said the independent newspaper, adding: "These tribunals hold the power of life and death but are conducted on archaic lines which conflict in many ways with the canons of British judicial procedure . . .

"These antique courts cannot go on blithely handing out sentences of death by methods which put justice to shame."

Points Out Conditions Under Which Raffles May be Held Legally

Hamilton, Dec. 12. (CP)—The purpose of the Ontario Attorney-General's Department in circulating memorandum among provincial crown attorneys concerning the law as it applies to raffles is not to launch drive against organizations conducting Christmas turkey raffles, C. L. Synder, said today.

Mr. Synder, Deputy Attorney-General, said the memorandum "merely draws attention" to a section of the Criminal Code outlining conditions under which raffles may be held legally. The most important condition is that the total value of any Christmas fowl raffled must not exceed $50.

War Bride Mother And Terrier Save Child From Creek

Delta, Dec. 12. (CP)—Two-year-old Jimmy Arnold owes his life today to a team play by his 24-year-old Scottish war bride mother, Mrs. James Arnold, and his spotted terrier, Judy.

Jimmy, who came to Canada only three months ago and had never before seen Winter turn Canadian creeks into skating rinks ventured out on thin ice with his five-month-old pup and broke through.

Judy ran back to the house and attracted the attention of the mother, who plunged into the icy water to rescue the boy.

WIFE BECOMES ILL

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 13 (CP)—Mrs. Harry Macko, whose 24-year-old husband has been missing since early Saturday, has become seriously ill since his disappearance, police said.

They issued a newspaper and radio appeal to Macko to get in touch with his home immediately. His wife's condition had become increasingly worse since he left.

Melrose

Melrose, Dec. 13.—Mrs. Russell Macfarlane entertained the W.M.S. at her home Wednesday afternoon for the regular monthly meeting.

Miss Price is busy practising the public school pupils for their Christmas concert to be held next week at the church hall.

Recent guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sherry Demille were Mr. and Mrs. Will Doxtator and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Milligan.

On Saturday evening a meeting was held in the Township Hall for the purpose of appointing trustees for the school area. I.P.S. Mr. Macklem showed slides at this meeting.

The Melrose W.I. supper and bazaar was a decided success, the proceeds amounting to over $90.00.

Little Shirley Pascoe has been suffering from bronchitis and pleurisy and is under the doctor's care.

Miss Marie Badgley of Peterborough Normal School spent the week end with her parents here. Marie will be a student teacher at one of the Belleville schools this week.

Mr. Malcolm McLaren of Oshawa spent last weekend with his parents here. Other Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. McLaren were Mr. and Mrs. Grant McLaren and Jean, Miss Ruth Blatherwick and Mr. Jack McLaren and John.

Miss Phyllis George spent the week-end with Mrs. Jack Macfarlane.

Mrs. Jack McLaren and baby son arrived home from the Belleville General Hospital on Tuesday last.

Mrs. J. Hinds is visiting her daughter Mrs. H. King, in Oshawa.

The community extends its sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Bradshaw (nee Betty Cole) whose clothing and furniture were destroyed in the fire which extensively damaged the house in which they were living in Belleville last week.

JACOB L. COHEN TAKES THE STAND IN OWN DEFENCE

Labor Counsel Claims He Did Not Assault Nor Beat His Private Secretary

Haileybury, Dec. 13 (CP) — With a denial of almost every vestige of crown evidence, J. L. Cohen, Toronto Labor lawyer charged with assaulting and beating his 20-year-old stengropaher and mistress, Elizabeth Betty Guenard, took the witness box yesterday in his own defence.

The defence, conducted by J. J. Robinette of Toronto, ended with crown attorney E. H. Wilkins of Sudbury, getting from Mr. Cohen an admission that the girl had been his mistress and that he had had intercourse with her.

"It's rather an extravagant term" the accused said, when the crown used the word "mistress" "but it might apply."

"You acknowelge having had intercourse with Miss Guenard" asked the crown.

"Yes" was the reply.

Judge J. A. S. Plouffe adjorned proceedings shortly before noon.

Cohen took the box for the first time today as the trial resumed. Yesterday the girl he was said to have assaulted refuted evidence given by other prosecution witnesses in an about-face that surprised the court.

No Desire To Defame

Mr. Cohen's testimony occupied most of this morning.

"I have no desire to defame or injure Miss Guenard," he said, in prefacing his remarks by saying "She has dragged herself up by her bootstraps from poverty and a home life that was sordid. She is intelligent and has initiative, but unfortunately she is addicted to the use of alcohol, and when under its influence, becomes abusive and creates scenes."

He then described two previous incidents which occurred before the Kirkland Lake occasion out of which grew the charge of assault and another charge of indecently assaulting Yvette Vallier the same day.

He said that in Windsor Miss Guenard once had consumed "more than half a bottle of liquor," created a scene, and used abusive language. He had dismissed her from his employ in August, 1945, but she rejoined his staff later.

Another incident Cohen described occurred on a train coming from Nova Scotia. Accompanying him as his travelling secretary, Miss Guenard had, Cohen said, attacked him on the train after drinking. "She was furious," said Cohen. "She struck me severely, she screamed and the conductor came."

Asked to Leave Train

"As the result of the incident", he said, "he was asked to leave the train and oaid a five dollar fine at a small town for what he termed was an infraction of the railway regulations—"contributing to a disturbance" on a train."

Miss Guenard accompanied him to Kirkland Lake on a business trip in November, Cohen said. They came by train, but as there was no sleeping car accommodation available, Cohen made arrangements for a taxi to take them back to Toronto as he was too tired to face the train trip, on which he said he would meet people and have to talk to them.

About 4 p.m. Nov. 20, he said, he took a sleeping pill and "two fingers" of whisky and went to b-d after telling his secretary he did not feel like eating supper and was going to rest.

Awakened by Sobs

"Later," Cohen said, "I was awakened by the sound of sobbing in the next room (Cohen and Miss Guenard were in adjoining rooms at the hotel in Kirkland Lake).

"I called 'what is the matter?' and she told me to come in. I put on my dressing gown. I saw that the bottle of whiskey had shrunk. It took me an hour to get her settled down. I went back to my room, took another pill and went to sleep.

"I was awakened again, I don't know how much later, by a smack in the face. Miss Guenard was rushing around the room calling my wifes' name in a sneering manner. She had a bottle of wine. She went into her room and locked the connecting doors. She was very abusive when I tried to ascertain what the trouble was."

Let Out Terrible Screams

"I went into her room to try to get her to go to sleep," continued Cohen. I had no sooner opened the door than she began to let out the most terrible screams. I had no desire to hurt her. I put my hand over her mouth but she bit me so hard my main concern was to get my hand out. I tried to get away and pushed her with my hand on her face. I finally got away and went to the sink to wash the blood of my hand.

"She followed me, kicking and trying to strike me. I held her by the shoulders and tried to reason with her. I unlocked the adjoining doors and went to my room and started to dress. I heard her moving around and saying she was going to leave at once."

Talked With Manager

Asked about previous evidence by witnesses who said the girl had accused him of biting and beating her, he said "there was no statement made by anybody in my presence about biting or threatening."

He went to his own room and talked with the hotel manager, Cohen said, and never saw the girl after that until she returned to Toronto.

Concerning statements by Mrs. Dora McLean, hotel housekeeper, that Miss Guenard had accused him of biting her and that Cohen had tried to force his way into the housekeeper's room to see if the girl was there, Cohen said "there is not the slightest foundation for Mrs. McLean's statements."

I walked around the hotel, and spoke to Mrs. McLean through her door because I was concerned about Miss Guenard. As I was walking away I heard her door open. She came out, flipped off my glasses, called me a dirty——. There was something sinister about her attitude. There is no basis for her statements."

Only Said She Was Leaving

There was no statements by Miss Guenard in his presence, Cohen said, about biting or hitting. "She said only that she was going to leave the hotel."

Cohen said he carried her teeth marks in his hand for weeks. He left in a taxi that day for Toronto. Before he left, he said he had been told that Miss Guenard had left the hotel. Actually, the girl was in another room where she had been taken by the housekeeper.

When she returned to his office in Toronto, Cohen said, she made no complaints. "There was none of this she-devil identity," he said.

"You knew her tendencies?" crown Attorney Wilkins asked as he took up cross-examination. "Yes, but I didn't think they were incurable."

Judge Gives Answer

"Why did you bring her to Kirkland Lake with you?" asked the crown. Mr. Wilkins was not satisfied with Cohen's explanation, and Judge Plouffe finally interjected by saying "he wanted a companion."

"Why did you take adjoining rooms?" Cohen was asked.

"Because I wanted my stenographer convenient." He admitted asking for a suite.

"You knew her addiction to liquor?" pursued the crown.

"Yes, but there had been no incidents for some time. I'm no believer in original sin."

There was no whisky left, Cohen told the crown, when he was awakened the second time by Miss Guenard.

CHARGED WITH ARMED ROBBERY

Taking no chances of being caught unprepared in any future hold-ups are Mr. and Mrs. George Trache, Stamford, Ont., shown here checking their shotgun. They were held up twice in two nights, the armed bandit escaping with $9 in the second hold-up.

Remanded in custody when he appeared in court at Thorold, Ont., was Kingsley Mann, 34. He was charged with armed robbery following his arrest in Toronto.

Taxi-driver Leonard Purdy, Merritton, was tied with shoelaces during the hold-up.

COLLEGE HOCKEY LEADER AT STAKE IN GAME TONIGHT

McGill and Varsity Meet in Toronto for First Time This Season

Toronto, Dec. 13 — (CP)—Perennial rivals for the senior intercollegiate hockey championship and the Queen's University Cup, McGill Redmen and University of Toronto Blues clash here tonight in their first encounter against each other this season, and with the league leadership at stake.

Both clubs won their opening games, the defending champions from McGill having defeated University of Montreal and the Blues Queen's University. The Redmen are not considered as strong as last season when they scraped through to the title, defeating Toronto in a sudden-death playoff game in Montreal after being tied with them at the end of the regular schedule.

Perhaps never before has the rivalry between the two clubs been more intense. Toronto has not forgotten how the Redmen came from behind in the third period of the playoff game to wipe out a two-goal lead and take the cup for the 13th time since it was presented for competition in 1903.

But the honor of winning the title the most times belongs to the Blues. Varsity has captured the crown 17 times and its record includes the achievement of having won it 10 years in succession — from 1920 to 1929 inclusive. McGill's biggest consecutive streak in seven years, with victories from 1933 to 1939 inclusive.

Queen's has won the championship only five times but the last year they accomplished the trick was in 1940. University of Montreal, the other club in the four-team league, has yet to win its first championship.

Unless Queen's and the University of Montreal have been hiding a reserve stock of top-notch players, the battle for the 1946 championship will be once again between McGill and Varsity.

Two forward stars missing from McGill's lineup this year are:—Johnny Peirson and Dan Porteous Another forward ace, Jimmy O'Connor, has been unable to play yet this season because of illness.

Jack Celineau, said to be on the negotiating list of the National Hockey League Montreal Canadiens, still is the McGill goalie, and it was his brilliant playing in the last season's playoff game that beat Toronto

Bob Broderick, Doug Heron, husky halfback of the school's football club, Gord Gosselin and Babe Thomson share the defence duties.

Among the players coach Ace Bailey of Varsity will call to stop the Redmen are goalie Dick Ball, Ed Kryzanowski, a rushing type of defenceman, rearguards Bob Larosa and his first string line of centre Don Bark and wingers Frank Rutledge and Don Remanick. Bark and Bob Henry, right winger on the Blues' second team, played for the college's football team.

HOCKEY RULES By BILL GRAY

"OFF-SIDES" At Attacking Blue Line

Rule 63, Sec. (a)

The position of the player's skates and NOT THAT OF HIS STICK shall be the determining factor in all instances in deciding an "off-side". A player is "off-side when BOTH SKATES ARE COMPLETELY OVER THE OUTER EDGE OF THE LINE.

Intentional Off-side

Rule 63, Sec. (c)

If the intentional off-side shall have been made from the Neutral Zone into the Attacking Zone, then the puck shall be faced five feet inside the Defending Zone of the offending team and midway between the sides of the rink.

(Note) This rule does not apply to a team below the numerical strength of its opponent. In such cases the puck shall be faced at the spot from which the pass was made.

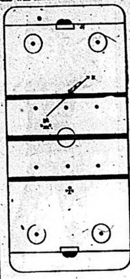

Illustration:

Player B4 has intentionally passed over his attacking line to team-mate B5 who takes the pass in order to stop the play, in this case the face-off shall be at point "X" which is five feet inside the defending line of team "B" and midway between the sides of the rink. The face-off only takes place here if both teams are playing an equal number of players or if team "B" are playing more players than team "A".

If team "B" is playing fewer players than team "A" the face-off shall be at spot from which the pass was started by player B4 or at "xx".

PERFECT CRIBBAGE HAND

Toronto, Dec. 13 — (CP) — It took seven years for a member of Toronto's Winnett Cribbage Club to turn up a perfect hand but Wednesday night E. F. Perrerson did it at last.

In a four-handed game he scored 29 points with a jack of spades, five of hearts, five of clubs and five of diamonds and the five of spades turned up on the cut.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

CULLED FROM YE OLD SCRAP BOOK

He Had It.

Harry H. Frazee, owner of the Boston Red Sox back in the dawn hour of sports golden era, was doing the town one hilarious night when the one a.m. curfew cut off the celebration. Still rarin' to go Harry suggested to his cronies that they grab a cab and head for the ball park where there was a plentiful supply of champagne.

Frazee's party poured itself into the cab and Harry roared, "The ball park, cabbie."

"Lookit, Buster," retorted the weary taxi pilot. "I'm in no condition for humor. I'm tired and this is my last haul for the night. Wherelnell do you wannago?"

"The ball park," reiterated the Red Sox boss.

"Aw, c'mon pal. There aint no ball game out there at this time. Lets git goin'. Where to?"

"Look, driver, do you know who I am? I'm Harry Frazee, owner of the Boston Red Sox. Now take us to the park, and quickly."

With that the cabbie shot out from behind the wheel, yanked open the door on Frazee's side and exploded:

"I've been lookin' for you, you so-and-so. You're the bum who sold Babe Ruth to the Yankees."

Knute Was Cute.

And here's another yarn about Knute Rockne, famous Notre Dame football mentor.

One Saturday afternoon Rockne was suffering from an acute attack of laryngitis, and could scarcely speak. As the Green waited expectantly in the locker room for the great coach's customary pre-game pep-talk, they could hear the rival coach in the adjoining room haranguing his players in a last minute tirade.

Winking slyly, Rockne placed his hand over his throat and whispered hoarsely:

"Listen to what he's got to say and go out there and win.'" That day the Irish won by three touchdowns.

And So He Would

Then they tell the story of the horse which tried to break into baseball. The nag showed up at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn several years ago and asked Lippy Durocher for a try-out.

He looked pretty good. He clouted several balls out of the park. During the infield practice the horse made several plays. And he fanned both Dixie Walker and Pete Reiser during a spell of work on the pitcher's mound.

"I want to see if you can run," Durocher said. "Go out there around the bases once."

"Run?" said the horse incredulously. "If I could run I'd be in the third race at Belmont Park this afternoon."

Whoa, Mayor

Mayor Frank (Fleetfoot) Follwell, whose racing 'dogs' brought him fame both here and in Cornwall is not going to rest on his laurels as Ontario's fastest mayor, if youthful mayor-elect Lloyd Galloway of Cornwall can help it. The new boss-elect of the eastern city's civic department has issued a challenge to our budding chief magistrate before the votes are dry on the ballots, to a skating race come Monday.

However, as "Three-Term" Follwell is now in Montreal with the City Industrial Commission on very important business, and due to the fact that he had another engagement the Cornwall municipal Sonja Henie must perforce wait until a future date.

Which may be just as well, perhaps, for the grapevine down in the city where there are five gals to every check-payer, has it that their up-and-coming mayor is not only blessed with youth, beauty and brains but is a blood relation to one Don Gallinger who has no other claim to skating fame than the fact that he is one of the current Boston Bruins star performers. All of which may not mean a thing—but it's a tip anyway.

UNDERSTANDABLE

The Dodgers aren't supposed to lose, and the genus Brooklyn citizen is suspicious of the whole democratic system when his beloved Bums aren't doing well.

A street radio was blaring the play-by-play of the 1946 Dodger - Cardinal playoff game in St. Louis.

"What's the score?" asked a passer-by, evidently not a burrough native.

"The Bums are behind 1-to-6," said a Brooklyn citizen, pointing to the radio box "if you can believe what that thing says."

HE KNEW—

Fatty Fothergill, Detroit fence buster who had a stomach like a Shetland pony and could hammer holes in outfield walls, made two hits one afternoon.

When he picked up his evening newspaper he saw he had gone "4 for 0." Fatty promptly telephoned a sportswriter friend who patiently explained they were typographical errors.

"Typographical errors, hell!" Fatty roared. "One was a line drive over third and the other was a scorcher over first!"

Sports Roundup

By JOHN D. HAMILTON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 13. (CP)—His ring triumphs and defeats virtually forgotten, Joe Jeannette lives quietly in Union City, N.J. —The proprietor of "Jeannette's Auto Service" . . . Among the mournful histories of many old-time fighters, the story of the big negro strikes a more cheerful note. . . .Jeannette was one of a crop of able workmen who battled from about 1905 to 1920 and who included Sam Langford, Jack Johnson, Sam McVey, Joe Walcott, Harry Wills and the lightweight, Joe Gans. . .Those were the days when boxing still wasn't respectable in the United States and ringmen fought all over the world—in Australia, South America, Paris and London. . . .

Langford, the Boston tar baby who originally came from Nova Scotia, is rated at the top by Jeannette . . ."If you want to know which was the toughest of the lot, it was Langford. Not Jack Johnson. I fought them both. I wouldn't wonder if Sam could have beaten any man who ever fought." . . .

Memory Book

Jeannette remembers his 1905 fight in Paris with McVey best. . . . He was down nine times in all but he won the fight when McVey collapsed while trying to answer the bell for the 50th round. . . Jeannette rates Johnson as a "very clever" boxer who could hit too. . . .He says he fought Langford about 15 times and fought Johnson about six or eight times. . . . Jeannette met Wills 19 times. . .

Happy Ending

Jeannette retired from the ring when he was in his 40's. . . Today he is a quiet, absent-minded man who drives his limousines to funerals and is in reasonably prosperous circumstances. . . . His story is much more cheerful than that of Langford, who went blind several years ago, and Johnson, who ended his life travelling with a flea circus . . .And all in all it is a much happier story than one usually runs into on Friday the 13th.

Tramping The Beat

Organized hockey marks its 50th anniversary Dec. 15th. . . The game started locally in 1896 when a group of sportsmen organized an amateur league. . . .

The group was headed by Bartow S. Weeks, then captain of the N.Y.A.C. and the first league had four clubs—N.Y.A.C., St. Nicholas Skating Club, the Crescent Athletic Club and the Brooklyn Skating Club. . .Travis Tidwell of Auburn, is the ground gaining kind of college football in 1946. . . The freshman accounted for 1,715 yards in 10 games and completed 79 of 158 forward passes thrown . . . Bob Fenimore of Oklahoma A. & M. was leader of the last two years.

LEADING CANDIDATE

New York, Dec. 13 (CP)—The Herald Tribune says in a Washington dispatch that Graham Towers, Governor of the Bank of Canada, is a "leading candidate" for the presidency of the International Bank.

The post was vacated by the resignation of Eugene Meyer.

The dispatch said that Mr. Towers, reached by telephone in Ottawa, declined comment. It added that the 49-year-old Canadian was backed for the post by highly-placed United States authorities.

Toronto, Dec. 13 —(CP)— No matter where Toronto Maple Leafs finish in the National Hockey League schedule there can be no greater tribute to the hockey sagacity of Conny Smythe than Leafs' present pace.

The pace shows this Foxy Grampa of the Leafs knew what he was doing last spring when he took out his pruning knife and took a ruthless run along the Leflan roster that left many folk gasping.

He lopped left and right—such "name" players as Babe Pratt, Sweeney Schriner, Lorne Carr, Mel Hill, Billy Taylor. In came a youthful injection in the persons of Gus Mortson, Vic Lynn, Harry Watson (obtained from Detroit for Taylor), Jimmy Thomson, Garth Boesch, Joe Klukay and Bill Ezinicki.

Earlier this season you heard Dick Irvin of Montreal Canadians say Leafs would be "bumped back into their cradles" if they went along trying to match checks with such seasoned performers as the Habitants, or, say the Boston Bruins.

But Smythe sat up in Maple Leaf Gardens and just laughed and laughed and today you find him chortling about the Leflan youth while other N.H.L. clubs — notably Chicago Black Hawks and those same Canadiens — like to find some. In a hurry too.

Hockey Talk:

Boston Bruins' Bill Cowley, in effect, says to forget about Howie Morenz as the greatest hockeyist of them all and gives his nod to Milt Schmidt. At least he keeps it in the Bruin family . . . From the way old Dit Clapper keeps himself in good playing condition you can look for the wearer of that big Boston No. 5 to reel off playing season No. 20 with Bruins with no trouble . . . Remember Detroit Red Wings' and New York Rangers' goalie John Ross Roach? Well, he's still in hockey, coaching an International League outfits that plays in Detroit.

Players Will Benefit In Sunday's Game

New York, Dec. 13. (AP) — The Chicago Bears and the New York Giants have reason to believe Santa Claus will hit town early.

The Windy City whizbangs and stout Steve Owens' touchdowners probably will be pitching at the fanciest pot o' gold in all pro football history when they play for the National League championship Sunday.

League Commissioner Bert Bell's office figures if sales continue at the present rate there'll be 50,000 fans on hand and $185,000 in the pot when the stew comes to a boil at the Polo Grounds.

Top previous gate was the $164,342.40 chipped in by fans in Cleveland last year.

Last year the rams took home $1,469 each, while individual Redskins collected $902 for losing.

This time the best guess is that the Giants will collect about $1,340 each if they finish on top, and that if the Bears win the "take" will e $1,315 per Bear.

COBOURG MAN KILLED

Cobourg, Dec. 12 — (CP) — Harold Litster, 19, R.R. No. 4, Cobourg, was killed last night on the Shelter Valley road near Vernonville when the car in which he was riding upset after going out of control. Police said the car was driven by Arthur Jaynes of Cobourg.

The two were on their way to a dance, and rounding a curve the car went out of control. Coroner G. Peacock of Grafton said no inquest will be held.

BUS DRIVER'S BRAVERY AVERTS TRAGEDY AFTER TRIPLE CRASH
RUSSELL McMASTER WINS Dow Award

For a few seconds after the terrific noise of metal crashing against metal, Russell McMaster was stunned. It was just outside Brighton, Ont., and his bus had smashed into the rear of an automobile, ricocheted off, and careened into the path of a truck going the other way.

In a split second, roaring flames enveloped car, bus and truck. Almost as quickly, McMaster started to get his terrified passengers out of the blazing bus. Although suffering from burns on his hands and face, he kept up his rescue work until he had everyone free of the flame-swept vehicle.

Thanks to the cool bravery of Russell McMaster of Gananoque, Ont., no one was critically injured. We are proud to recognize his gallantry through the presentation of The Dow Award.

THE DOW AWARD is a citation for outstanding heroism and includes, as a tangible expression of appreciation, a $100 Canada Savings Bond. Winners are selected by The Dow Award Committee, a group of editors of leading Montreal daily newspapers.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

Learn the rightful rules to heed. When it comes your turn to lead even though it starts a fight, know at least your lead is right. Always keep this maxim hot: Rules succeed more times than not.

Of course, accidents can happen. You may have no guide and still make a good opening lead. Or you may have a good guide that you fail to follow and still make a good opening lead.

But if you follow a good guide, your lead will be correct more often than not. And if your partner also knows that guide, your lead will give him valuable information he may sorely need.

The best overall guide is: Don't lead a suit bid by opponents. Against a suit contract, don't lead away from an ace or a king; then follow the order of preference in tops, longies, shorts.

However, you may run into some odd situations. Like the deal that just ended with bidding like this:

South	North
1 C	1 D
1 H	2 S
2 NT	3 NT

It is your opening lead from this west hand:

♠ 10 8 6
♥ K J 9 6
♦ 9 5 3
♣ 10 8 5

Rule says not to lead a suit bid by opponents. All four suits have been bid by the other pair. What are you going to do about it?

You dare not go home. You must not refuse to lead something. So, use this guide: When all four suits have been bid by opponents, lead the last suit bid by the dummy hand.

The last suit revealed by dummy in the north was spades. Lead a spade. It may not be the best lead. But with nothing else to guide you, it is a lead your partner has a right to expect.

Almost any guide is better than none.

The Movie Column

By HELEN HANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Bob Hope is the latest of the big-names to get into the lucrative horse-opera field and will burlesque Westerns in "Pale Face" as soon as he finishes "Road to Rio", which also has Bing Crosby and Dorothy Lamour. The story tells the adventures of a small town bath-house attendant who heads west and gets mixed up with Indians, cowboys and gun-toting Western beauties.

Legal uproars with United Artists had caused David O. Selznick to terminate his distribution contract with them and set up his own, Selznick Releasing Organization. "Duel in the Sun" first released handled by the new company, will have its premier in Los Angeles Dec. 31 so it can make the 1946 Academy Award nominations.

Other releases of the new company include Alfred Hitchcock's "The Paradine Case", with an all-star cast headed by Gregory Peck, Charles Laughton, Charles Cobourn, Ethel Barrymore and Ann Todd, and introducing in co-star spots, Valli, Italian actress, Louis Jourdan from France and Joan Tetzel from the New York stage.

After it will come a re-issue of "Intermezzo" with Ingrid Bergman and Leslie Howard; a new technicolor version of "Little Women" with Diana Lynn, Lionel Barrymore, Charles Coburn and a newcomer, Bambi Lynn, who will play Beth. Other releases will be "Portrait of Jenny" co-starring Jennifer Jones and Joseph Cotten, and "Sands of Time" with Cary Grant and Dorothy McGuire.

Herbert Marshall has been signed for a leading role to complete the cast of "Ivy" which will star Joan Fontaine. Peter Murray-Hill, the British actor whose wife is Phyllis Calvert, will make his American debut in the film and Miss Fontaine's mother, Lillian Fontaine will also be in it.

Ronald Reagan, currently at work with the Swedish find, Viveca Lindfros, in Warner Brothers "Night Unto Night", will write and direct a series of sport shorts for the company. He was a college athlete and sports announcer before going into movies.

Bing Crosby is due for an unusual kind of fame for a movie star next month when he will be the subject of a profile, "Big Business Bing", in the January issue of Fortune magazine. The profiles record the careers of business tycoons.

QUALITY OF TEA

As a general rule, a small leaf tea is usually better than a large leaf one but a large leaf tea from the right plantation where climate, altitude, soil and other conditions are ideal may be better than a small leaf from another plantation.

Union Security Main Stumbling Block in Strike

Noranda, Que., Dec. 13 —(CP) —The question of union security was one of the main issues which led to deadlock in negotiations for settlement of the three weeks old strike at Noranda Mines, Limited, T. F. McGuire, district co-ordinator for the International Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (C.I.O.) said Thursday.

In an interview in which he presented the union picture of recent meetings between company, union and Dominion government officials in Ottawa and Toronto, McGuire said that J. S. McCullagh, federal labor department representative, submitted several recommendations and dealt particularly with the matter of union security.

"The department offered to conduct a vote at Noranda mine among the members of the bargaining unit on a question of whether they desired some form of union security," he said. "If such a vote was in favor of a form of union security, then an arbitrator would decide the form.

"The union committee offered to accept this proposal and the company rejected it. Before we broke off negotiations in Toronto, Mr. McCullagh also suggested that both parties agree to having a commissioner sent to Noranda under the authority of the Minister of Labor.

Company Rejects Proposal.

"This commissioner would continue negotiations among both parties on the scene of the strike. Again the union committee accepted this proposal and the company rejected it."

The Noranda strike, in Canada's biggest copper producer, began Nov. 22. It was called by Local 688 of the union which is seeking a wage increase of 16 cents an hour and a union check-off. The company has offered 10 cents an hour increase.

The mine and smelter, employing 1,147 workers of whom approximately 600 are union members, have been idle since the strike began although maintenance workers have been allowed to pass through the picket lines to keep fires shouldering in the giant smelter furnaces.

Mr. McGuire said two membership meetings of Local 688 rejected the company offer of a 10-cent wage increase retroactive to Nov. 1 and a Christmas bonus of a seven-cent increase for the period between May 16 and Nov. 1.

"Their position is that they won't celebrate Christmas Dec. 25 with the $80 or $90 promised by Mr. Roscoe but rather at the end of the strike with a much larger sum than the one mentioned," he said.

H. L. Roscoe is vice-president and general manager of Noranda Mines Limited.

Steel Imports Are Far Below Expectations

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 13 —(CP)— A prospective gap of 2,000,000 tons between 1947 demand and availability of steel threatens to curtail British exports and delay the long-awaited speedup in home production.

Labor disputes in Canada and the United States have cut steel imports far below expectations.

Already steel exports have been brought down to rock bottom, Herbert Morrison, Lord President of the Council, told the House of Commons. The general rule is that no steel is sent abroad unless failure to export will injure the wider interests of the United Kingdom economy.

Supply Minister John Wilmot forecast a 500,000-ton shortage during the first quarter of 1947 and automobile manufacturers have expressed fear their output must be cut.

The cabinet must be seriously wondering whether the present output (of steel) is enough to maintain the policy of full employment," wrote the industrial correspondent of the Sunday Times.

The Board of Trade Journal, weekly government publication, listed steel among materials which are "already, or are becoming, insufficient to keep fully employed the labor available to use them."

Mr. Morrison said the effective home demand for steel is about 16,000,000 ingot tons a year, a figure never matched in war or peace. Production of sheet steel is at record pre-war levels, with total output about 12,700,000 tons a year.

Before the war imports were some 1,000,000 tons a year and the government, by all reports, expected to get more than that during 1946. Mr. Mrorison, however, estimated imports at only 500,000 tons "at the outside."

$1,000 Donation Received For Hall of Fame

Kingston, Dec 13 (CP)—A $1,000 donation to the fund for the construction of the International Hockey Hall of Fame here has been received from owner Al Sutphin of the American Hockey League Cleveland Barons, Honorary Treasurer R. G. H. Travers announced Thursday.

The contribution raised the total amount of the fund to $33,740. The objective is $50,000, but as yet no public appeal has been made for funds to finance the proposed hall. It will be erected on Kingston fair grounds.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was playing marbles in frunt of my house with Shorty Judge and Sid Hunt, the game being to shoot each others marbles out of a chalk ring, and pop came home and stood there watching us, saying, Pritty good teckneek, boys not bad.

G, Mr. Potts, did you used to play marbles? Shorty said, and pop said, Dont make me laugh, they used to call me Professor Potts the Marble Marvel, because the other boys all came to me when they wanted to brush up on the fine points.

And, he kept on watching, saying, A little more follow through there, Benny, a loose wrist and a free wheeling elbow is what does the trick.

Gosh, pop, why dont you play with us a while? I said, and pop said, It wouldn't be fair. We'd have a crowd around us muttering under their breaths about the big grown up expert taking marbles away from innocent little boys, he said.

Aw come on, Mr. Potts, play with us, Shorty said. Me and Sid will play sides against you and Benny, and we'll play you for keeps, too, wont we, Sid? he said, and Sid said, Sure, what do we care, we're sports.

G, pop, come on, here's our big chance, I said.

Meening mine, and pop said, No thanks, boys, I dont think I'd better risk it. I could even be arrested for taking advantage of you like that, he said.

And he went in the house with his newspaper, and Sid and Shorty claimed he was only bluffing and they could of beet us all hollow, and I offered to bet any amount of money that pop could beet them at marbles any time he wanted to, and their fathers too.

Which I bet he could.

PLAMORS BEAT FORT WORTH 3-1

(By The Canadian Press)

The last place Kansas City Plamors of the United States Hockey League' northern division bounded back in a three-minute spurt last night to trounce the southern division's first place Fort Worth Rangers 3-1 at the latter team's home ice.

The Rangers, tied with Tulsa Oilers and Dallas Texans for top slot in the south section, looked for two and a half periods as though they would move out in front by themselves. But then the Plamors came to life and closed the gap between them and the third place St. Paul Saints to half a game.

Jack Hewson's first period tally at the 15.06 mark on a pass from Frank Eisenroph was a big margin for the Rangers. A scoreless second session was highlighted by penalties galore.

Ken Blade tied the count on a solo effort at 11.41 in the last frame. At 12.09, Red Mitchell gave Rangers a lead and at 14.42 Gopher Ashworth took Dick Butler's pass-out for the final tally.

Tigers Looking Forward to Busy Evening

(By The Canadian Press)

At first glance there wouldn't appear to be much interest in tonight's O.H.A. senior A clash between Hamilton Tigers (10 wins, no losses) and Owen Sound Mohawks (two wins, seven setbacks) but the wily old men of Hamilton are looking forward to a busy evening nonetheless.

Early in the season the Tabbies knocked off the Mohawks 8-0, but in the return game they were lucky to grab a 4-2 verdict. And since then the lowly visitors have looked good in splitting a pair of decisions with the second-place Toronto Staffords.

Meanwhile Hamilton Pats, tied with Staffords for the second spot, will have a chance to gain ground on the idle Torontonians, have taken two out of three from the Indians so far this season. No junior games were scheduled tonight.

AUSSIES GET MORE GAS

Canberra, Australia, Dec. 13 (CP).—Private Australian motorists will get more gasoline this month. The ration will be increased to the British scale, which gives about 270 miles a month. Commercial users will receive an increase of up to six gallons a month.

NOMINATION FOR THE COCKEYED
COMEDY AWARD of 1946

WHEREAS, Keenan Wynn, who has done most to advance the cause of laughter in 1946 by his performances as the frustrated telephonist in MGM's 'Ziegfeld Follies' and as the harassed bridegroom in 'Easy to Wed', establishes a new fun record in MGM's 'The Cockeyed Miracle', we nominate him The King of Comedy.

The committee, which is not cockeyed, selects this cockeyed comedy as the funniest of the year BECAUSE:

Keenan Wynn, as Ben Griggs, can squeeze out a rainstorm at the drop of a top hat. Though he's been around more years than he cares to admit, he still has an eye for an ankle.

Frank Morgan, that old swindler, is Keenan's problem child—a hilarious situation if we've ever seen one!

Audrey Totter (the 'Slivovitz' siren of 'Sailor Takes A Wife') is panting for love but has a boyfriend (Richard Quine) who'd rather classify rock specimens than caress a cutie!

If you don't get at least 100 laughs out of 'The Cockeyed Miracle', you'd better see a doctor, pal!

BURNED FINGERS

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 21

A little stir ensued. Jennifer paid no attention to it, but a moment later she had an almost inaudible message from some girl who flitted behind her: "Hollister spoke to him; he says he's' waiting for a friend."

Everyone on the floor was presently conscious of his presence, Jennifer the only one who never dared move her eyes in his direction. The dress was sold and she had turned to go back to the dressing room when she found herself face to face with him. His eyes were glowing and she felt his hands tremble as they grasped hers.

"You are so wonderful!" he breathed, drawing her to a somewhat secluded alcove. "Come here —come this way." And, apparently unconscious of observers, he stood beaming down at her. Jennifer, in her candy-striped stiff taffeta gown, wanted to free her fingers, wanted to run away — run away anywhere that was safe from the eyes that were all about her.

"What are you afraid of?" the man said. "Nobody is looking at you! My beautiful wonderful angel," he added under his breath.

"I have to go take this off," Jennifer murmured, freeing her hands. She ran away upstairs, flustered, frightened by the encounter. He was crazy, of course, but what an exciting thing to have a man crazy in that particular way! The other girls would be all agog. Jennifer would probably never see him again, but it was certainly thrilling!

On the other hand, she thought, cooling, probably most of the absorbed customers had not noticed the violinist at all, much less identified him. Perhaps she had just imagined that, while she kept her eyes so sedulously fixed upon the customer and the taffeta robe, everyone was conscious of Stanislaus Lichtenstein's presence. There would very likely be no comment upon it whatsoever, and all this panting and flushing and gasping were nonsense. Jennifer put on her clothes, pulled on a small hat, and went out to lunch.

Vogelsang's had a deep street doorway, flanked by show windows. It also had a bright little entrance around the corner, on a side street, which came directly into the stocking section. But the employees as they came and went were expected to use the alley.

The alley was reached by the big freight elevator to the basement level, and through the gaunt lumber-scented, tar-scented, disorderly shipping department where excelsior and great sheets of brown paper, crates, carpenters, sawdust, long, blackened, shabby wooden tables, the ringing of hammers and shrieks of saws had it all their own way. Beyond this region were great winged doors and a trembling, immense scale sunk into the earth and level with the oily floor, and beyond again were open air, a strip of sky far overhead, the many-windowed, smooth brick walls of a great hotel. Below these in the alley, were battalions of garbage cans, boxes of wastepaper, trucks loading and unloading, heavily grilled basement windows thick with dust and grit, and mud or dust heavy underfoot.

Jennifer picked her way through all his confusion, meditating upon the, morning's adventure, which might be told with some little pride and complacency to Betty but certainly not to Monty, and turned toward the old bookstore on Third near Market Street. The March day was one of untimely sweetness and warmth; windows were filled with Easter suggestions and hot cross buns. Sidewalks on the south side of the spring sunshine was as soft as June. Wagons loaded with potted tulips and baby rosebushes went clop-clopping along the curbs; girls wore new straw hats or tied gay handkerchiefs over their curled heads; Market Street was swarming with life.

Jennifer felt the languor of spring in her blood. "What a day to play hooky!" said a bold, joyous voice in her ear, and she laughed at the rangy big boy who said it as he hurried past her in the friendliest way imaginable. She had never seen him before, she would never see him again, but it was pleasant. She was still laughing when a hand went with sudden authoritative firmness under her elbow, and she looked up to see Stanislaus Lichtenstein smiling eagerly down at her.

"Who speaks to you?" he asked. The girl looked bewildered. "Then you didn't know him?" Stanislaus said.

"That man who went by? No, I"d never seen him before."

"But he spoke to you."

"Oh yes. He said, 'What a day to play hooky.'" Jennifer smiled remembering. "Where are we going?" she asked, finding herself propelled briskly along as they talked.

"We are going to lunch," he answered joyfully. "Yes, I know— I know you have only a short time," he answered her unspoken protest. "But we will be quick. A chop—no, not a chop. They take too long with their chops! We'll see what's all ready. In here."

They went down the long arcade of the Palace Hotel; Jennifer had never lunched here before. She could not but be enchanted with the open court, the flowers, the type of men and women who were waiting in the high-backed great chairs of the lobby, and the gay little tables, flooded with light from the high glass roof far above and surrounded by laughing and well-dressed lunchers. Tall palms drooped their light fringes here and there for a setting, waiters went quickly to and fro, and—there was no mistaking it this time—Stanislaus was certainly recognized here, and to be the girl with him, to be watched by all eyes, gave Jennifer a sensation she had never had in her life before, a sensation of gaiety and confidence, of delight in flowers and spring and perfume and, admiration, a sheer joy in being herself and being alive.

They took a small table. Stanislaus set his watch beside his plate. What he ordered or what she ate Jennifer hardly knew; she knew that everything was managed very quickly and that she got back to Vogelsang's promptly and was left in a completely bewildered condition to dream her way through the afternoon hours in the hot, crowded shop, remembering the ecstatic expression on Stan's face, his passionate attention to her every word, his complete absorption in her during the meal.

Well! A thing like this certainly took one's breath away. He had said to her: "You will lunch with me tomorrow and the day after? Tomorrow night I will play in Oakland, but you have had enough of me and my music. I will not ask you to do that. And then lunch on Saturday—yes. I will call for you at one; you are free after that for the afternoon? What shall we do? As if it mattered what we did! And on Saturday night your mother and the sisters, shall we go to dinner? At the St. Francis? At the Fairmont? Whichever you like. That would please them, wouldn't it? At nine o'clock I must go to my train; we will dine early for the little girls. Butcher will take all my things to the train. And then you will write to me, and I will try to come back to stay here a week with no concerts to bother us. I will be tired; I will want just to go out to the beach and rest and talk to you. Will you do that?"

She had laughed at some of it, had been oddly embarrassed by a little of it, had found herself puzzled at her own reaction to the hour of music and perfume and luxury and pleasure. Altogether, it was somewhat exhausting. Jennifer walked home through the languid sweetness of the dying day; even the shabbiest of the gay streets was irradiated by the long soft light. Asparagus and strawberries were already in the markets, and apricots and figs and corn would follow, Jennifer thought. She felt a general relaxing and mellowing of spirit and flesh; spring was a heavenly time. Jennifer stopped and bought a bunch of freesias for fifteen cents.

That night she invited Faddy and Elna to go out for a walk, and they wandered up the hill past the park and sat on a stone coping looking down at the sea. The moon was slowly moving across the sky; there was still light in the west. The little girls were in high feather and chattered with increasing confidence and recklessness. There were boys at school, and—look, one of them said this, and another wrote that on the wall. Wasn't that awful?

Jennifer, feeling old and wise and sad, agreed soothingly that it was too bad but boys were like that; they didn't really mean anything much, they were just—well, like that. Faddy said that she hated boys; Elna did not commit herself. Two or three times the small girls were moved to violent and joyous laughter at Jennifer's observations, and then she laughed too. They came back three abreast arms linked, in great affection and felicity.

"Your friend telephoned," Betty told her when they came in.

"Monty?" Her eyes brightened. She had fancied him out of sympathy with her.

"He said to say "Stan," Betty answered dryly.

"Oh. Oh, he's crazy," Jennifer said lightly. Disapproval was in Betty's manner.

"He certainly sounds that way," Betty assured her. Nothing more was said on the subject.

Crazy he might be, but the world in which Stan moved was an enchanting world for Jennifer, and it was hard for her to resist its appeal. The intoxication of it was swift in taking hold of her, and for the next few days she lived in a dream. No girl alive but would be affected by this glimpse of money and luxuries and perfumes and the beauty of spacious great places; the big hotel lobbies, the restaurants, the magnificent opera house were all new to her. They lunched together hurriedly, for her time was limited. Betty would not consider her going off to dinner with Stan, giving in finally to the plan by which they should all dine together on Stan's last night. He wanted to buy Jennifer orchids; sent her extravagant gifts of perfumes and gloves and such nylon stockings as made both Betty and Jennifer lose their breath. On Saturday at noontime he waited for her at Vogelsang's and whirled her off into freedom and space and the greenness of the park.

They lunched late at the Cliff House with the blue Pacific seas rolling in beneath the piazza railing where their table was set. Time meant nothing to Stan; he had insisted that they first walk along the bright bare line of the beach, past the twinkling black lines of parked cars and close to the foaming inrush of the surf. Coming back, he bought her a woolly stuffed panda. She saw the tag that said twenty-five dollars and reflected that that was more than she and Betty paid for rent; but no matter, all this was great fun!

Stanislaus had duly given a concert in Oakland on Thursday night; he told Jennifer that it had proved to be such an ovation that he wished she had been there.

"Oh, I wish I had!" Her eyes glowed; her face was radiant under the brim of a new hat— a cheap hat, but it had three fresh cotton gardenias on it, and Jennifer wore a cluster of the real blossoms on her shoulder,

"Do you know," she told him, leaning across the table confidentially, the gesture as he leaned toward her bringing his own head close to hers, "that I quite suddenly wanted to go? I felt so—well, restless. About half past seven I said to Betty, "Well, we could make it!' and Betty said, 'Make what?' I said, "Stan's concert.""

"Ah, now, you didn't!" the man breathed as she paused, laughing.

"I did. Betty thought I was crazy. But it seemed to me I just had to go and hear you play again and hear them all clap and shout, 'Bravo!' But of course," Jennifer went on sensibly, "that would have meant a taxi over the bridge and tickets and everything. And besides, it was after seven; So I just had to settle down."

"Oh, that is terrible—terrible!" Stan whispered.

"Terrible nothing!" Jennifer said, laughing again. "I've had too much as it is. But I'm getting a taste for you, like olives, Stan," she finished with a full, serious look. She knew the value of this look now; it rendered him speechless for seconds during which her heart beat fast with a sort of frightened triumph.

"Come on,' he said abruptly a few moments later, "we have to go downtown again. I have picked out a little present for you. I want to see if you like it."

It was now after three o'clock. Betty and the girls and Jennifer were to dine with him at the hotel at half past six; she had promised to be at home in time to curl Faddy"s and Elna's hair for the occasion. She began to be uneasy about the time. A general sense of disappointment, disillusionment, took possession of her. The glow and thrill of the morning were dissipated; she felt oddly flat. Stan was leaving for Los Angeles at nine; she was glad that he was going—one could not keep things up at this pitch. And yet—what was left, beyond tomorrow? Confused emotions disturbed her and made her somewhat silent, somewhat artificial in manner during their drive downtown.

His present for her, it seemed was in his hotel suite. Would she come up? His accompanist would be there practicing, probably, but she would not mind him?

No—o, Jennifer said hesitantly, she wouldn't mind him. Well, but she mustn't have such a doleful face about it! Stan told her, laughing. This way.

They went up in the big elevator; other persons, boys with bags, a man with a beautiful collie, were coming and going. This was all right. This was a perfectly normal proceeding.

The room into which he ushered her was beautiful; a corner room with windows on two sides looking down on the square — creamy carpets, creamy walls, furniture upholstered in dark blue, flowers, mirrors; everything was mirrors and brightness and creaminess and the rich sweetness of flowers.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, Dec. 13 — (CP)—The gold stocks were stronger and the industrial and base metal issues weakened moderately in the early session on Toronto's stock exchange today. Western oils posted a minor index gain. Trading was a little more active than in the previous session and the turnover for the first three hours was 809,000 shares.

Massey-Harris common featured the industrials, moving in volume on a point advance. The utilities, papers and liquors were moderately heavy.

Stronger issues in the gold group were Regcourt, Donalda, Eldona, Heva, Paramaque and San Antonio. East Sullivan was in the spotlight, trading actively on a rise of 15 cents to 4.15. Smelters weakened 2 points and small losses came out for Golden Manitou and Steep Rock.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, Dec. 13 —(AP)— Utilities and assorted industrials shifted to the recovery side of today's stock market although many leaders continued to suffer from light selling.

Hopes for a year-end rally, in addition to pleasing dividends and earnings prospects, received the principal credit for timid bidding.

Canadian issues were narrowly irregular with Canadian Pacific and Hiram Walker off ⅛, Dome Mines up as much and Distillers Seagram up ¼.

PRODUCE MARKET

Toronto, Dec. 13 —(CP)— Produce prices in the spot market here today were reported as follows:

Churning cream unchanged No. 1 lb, 41 fob, 45 delivered, plus 10 cents subsidy; first grade solids 40, second grade solids 39; market firm, offerings light.

Five of Army's Old Districts Go by Board

Ottawa, Dec. 13 (CP)—Canada's five regional commands will absorb the functions of five of the 11 long-standing military districts and become completely responsible for the other six at the beginning of 1947, it was announced last night.

Finance Minister Douglas Abbott, in his last announcement as Defence Minister, disclosed that the long-anticipated second stage of the reorganization of the military command system would mean that:-

1. Maj.-Gen. F. F. Worthington's western command at Edmonton will absorb M.D. 13 headquarters under Col. Eric Snow at Calgary and will have charge of M.D. 11 under Brig. E. C. Plow at Vancouver.

2. Brig. M. H. S. Penhale's Prairie command at Winnipeg will absorb M.D. 10 under Brig. R. O. G. Morton at Winnipeg and will take charge of M.D. 12 under Col. Geoffrey Morton at Regina.

3. Maj.-Gen. Chris Vokes' central command at Oakville will absorb M.D. 2 under Brig. Alan Sparling at Toronto, and take charge of M.D. 3 under Col. Pat Bogart at Kingston and M.D. 1 under Brig. Philip Earnshaw at London.

4. Maj.-Gen. E. J. Renaud's Quebec command at St. John's, Que., will absorb M.D. 4 under Brig. William Home at Montreal, and will take charge of M.D. 5 under Brig. Paul Bernatchez at Quebec City.

5. Maj.-Gen. H. W. Foster's eastern command at Halifax will absorb M.D. 6 under Brig. Graham Gibson at Halifax and will take charge of M.D. 7 under Brig. D. R. Agnew at Fredericton.

The move was the final blow to the military district, as such, as the basic framework for army administration across the country. The district headquarters that do remain will be redesignated area headquarters.

Their disappearance will place the five command headquarters, created early this year, in a position of complete military authority over the regions they command.

The regional command headquarters are expected to expand as the result of a move that is interpreted as a further step in decentralization of army authority.

They will absorb not only the functions of the vanishing districts, but also a considerable proportion of their staffs. The remaining district staffs, now to work for area headquarters, will carry on as before but their direct and only boss will be stationed at a command headquarters, not at Ottawa.

ARE MINEWORKERS RESPONSIBLE FOR ACTS OF J. L. LEWIS

Question of Fine on Union Confronts U. S. Supreme Court

Washington, Dec 13 (AP)—The question of whether the United Mine Workers should be responsible for the acts of John L. Lewis confronted the Supreme Court today.

The point was raised in a U.M.W. petition attacking the legality of the $3,500,000 fine assessed against the union by Judge T. Alan Goldsborough, after he found the U.M.W. guilty of contempt udring the recent soft coal strike.

The petition, filed yesterday by union counsel, raised again a number of the points which were presented unsuccessfully during the Lower Court hearing.

A government petition, similar to that filed by the union, has been granted by the court. Court action on the new petition for a writ of certiorari is expected next Monday and, if favorable, the two cases undoubtedly will be combined in the arguments set for Jan. 14.

Lewis, President of the U.M.W., personally was fined $10,000 for contempt in addition to the fine imposed on the union. His action terminating the union contract with the government resulted in the general strike of the soft coal miners last Nov. 20. Last Saturday Lewis ordered the miners to return to work.

Petition Asks For Ruling

The union petition, noting that the U.M.W. is an unincorporated association, asked the court to hear arguments and to rule whether it can be held responsible for:

"Acts of an individual officer, member or agent in the absence of clear proof of actual participation in, or actual authorization of such acts, or ratification of such acts after actual knowledge thereof."

Among other points which the union seeks to raise in the Supreme Court are:

1. Whether Judge Goldsborough's temporary restraining order against Lewis and the union of Nov. 18, in advance of the strike, was constitutional in view of the free speech and anti-slavery amendments.

2. Whether the order was legal under the Clayton and Norris-La Guardia acts.

(The Clayton act exempts nonprofit labor organizations from the anti-trust laws and limits the use of injunctions against them; the Norris-La Guardia act restricts the use of injunctions in labor disputes).

DUCHESS WINS DIVORCE

London, Dec. 13 —(AP)— The Duchess of Westminster was granted a decree of divorce today on grounds of adultery by the 67-year-old, thrice-married Duke, one of Britain's wealthiest men. Miss Nancy Sullivan, not otherwise identified, was named as co-respondent. The Duke did not contest the suit.

Leadership of N.H.L. to Be An All-Canadian Affair As Weekend Schedule Approaches

Leafs Can Take Over Top Spot by Beating Rangers and Hawks

By KENT STRONG
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Two Canadian teams are currently fighting it out for top berth in the National Hockey League with Montreal Canadiens perched in the top spot ahead of the youthful Toronto Maple Leafs.

Toronto gets a chance to leap ahead of the Canucks Saturday night when they meet the re-inspired New York Rangers.

Rangers were floundering in the league cellar after the first two months of season play, but coach Frankie Boucher's boys have been burning up the loop lately with their great comeback ability.

Canucks, who have played one more game than coach Happy Day's rookie-studded Leafs, play at Madison Square Garden against Rangers Sunday.

Leafs hop the train for Chicago after encountering Rangers and play the Windy City boys Sunday night. The Chicagoans have proved a door mat for N.H.L. teams lately and now are deeply entrenched in the cellar. A win for the Queen City boys will keep them in the running for the circuit's top spot.

In another Sunday game, the pesky Detroit Red Wings meet the disappointing Boston Bruins. The Bruins, who were picked as one of the teams to beat in pre-season predictions, will be out for the scalp of the motor town boys and get in the running for the Stanley Cup marbles.

96 NOMINATED FOR BIG STAKE

Arcadia, Calif., Dec. 13 —(AP) —Ninety-six three-year-old thoroughbreds have been nominated for the $100,000 added Santa Anita Derby on March 8, marking the second year the race has boasted a hundred-grand price and the first time it has been run at the regulation 1¼ miles derby distance.

Nominations fell short of the high 141 named when the route was 1⅛ miles.

Included was a generous international flavor, however, as was evident in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap. Six British hopefuls, Sir Laurence, Sullivan, Middle Abbey, Lolimi, Lodge Night and Milder, were named, with the first two named heralded as stake winners abroad.

ATHLETICS OUT TO VACATE ROLE OF LOOP DOORMAT

Connie Mack Quite Willing to Spend Money to Make Team Better

Philadelphia, Dec. 13 — (AP)— The word was out today that the Philadelphia Athletics are going to join their National League cousins, the Phillies, in vacating their role of league doormat "no matter what it costs."

Arthur Ehlers, newly-named manager of the Athletics' farm system, said 83-year-old Connie Mack, who has piloted the A's since 1901, wants to build another winning ball club, "that he wants a strong organization with no thought of the cost."

Mack, now vacationing in California, has often been criticized for failing to spend large sums of money to purchase players for his club and for selling his top-flight stars.

Ehlers said Mack feels he has the nucleus of a strong club, particularly in pitching and in the outfield and that the veteran manager is anxious to build up his farm system.

"The A's are eight to 10 years behind the other clubs in the majors," Ehlers declared, but added that "I feel sure that we can produce something worthwhile in the next few years."

"Money will be no object" in rebuilding the club, Ehlers said, explaining that he hopes to purchase at least seven new farm clubs to give the A's the material to climb from the American League cellar.

At present, the Mackmen own five minor league clubs outright, two class D. outfits, two class C and one class A team.

Ehlers estimated it will cost the A's at least $1,000,000 to build up its farm system. "We have teams to get, players to find, scouts to engage, managers to hire and business managers to develop," he said.

The A's last won a pennant in 1931.

Burma, Dec. 13 (CP). — The status of all grades of laborers in Burma is likely to be raised so far as the standard of living and salaries is concerned, said U. Kyaw, Burma's adviser to the British delegation to the I.L.O. Conference, on returning from Montreal.

British Tennis Assoc. Opens Doors to Pros.

(By The Canadian Press)

With greater public awareness of what has been called "sham amateurism" in sport and many quarters advocating a narrowing of the dividing line between amateurs and professionals, a significant move yesterday was action of the British Lawn Tennis Association in opening the door for professional athletes in other sports to participate in amateur tennis tournaments, such as its own Wimbledon championship.

The measure won unanimous approval at the annual meeting of the Association in London but will not be put into effect unless it is ratified next March by the International Lawn Tennis Association, which now has a closed shop rule against all professionals.

Boston Bruins' Bill Cowley, veteran centre ice star who used to play with the Halifax Wolverines of the Maritime Big Four and Miss Jessie Wilson of Vancouver were married yesterday at Brookline, Mass. Cowley, a native of Bristol, Que., started in hockey at Ottawa.

John A. Hillerich, Louisville manufacturer of baseball bats who died Nov. 28, left an estate valued at $467,059, it was disclosed yesterday when his will was filed in court.

American interests have made a bid of $10,000 for a six-month lease of the racehorse Shannon and a similar offer for Cordale, winner of several important Australian handicaps, it was stated at Sydney yesterday by the owners. One termed the offer "ridiculous" and the other said he was considering it.

Samuel Moore Peacock, widely known in U. S. tennis circles, died yesterday at his home in Philadelphia. A former president of the Middle Atlantic States Tennis Association and manager of the U. S. Davis Cup squad in 1928, he also served as a member of the executive committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

With Gerald Kelly, obtained a few days ago from the Jersey City club of the American League, scoring 21 points, Boston Celtics last night downed Detroit Falcons in a basketball Association of America game by a score of 73-66.

Lord Burghley, who used to set records as an Olympic hurdler and later was Governor of Bermuda, married Mrs. Diana Forbes yesterday in London. Lord Burghley was divorced by his previous wife Oct. 18.

Victories, However, Make Little Difference in the Standings

(By The Canadian Press)

Fourth place teams in both the eastern and western divisions of the American Hockey League added wins to their point totals last night. For Springfield Indians, who defeated Philadelphia Rockets 5-3 at home, the victory had little effect on the standings, but for Buffalo Bisons, the 2-1 win over New Haven Ramblers at the Connecticut city meant sole possession of the west section's fourth slot.

Bisons, tied with St. Louis Flyers before last night's tilt, now are a pair of points ahead of the Missourians and are four games in hand to the bargain. The Buffalo boys tallied twice in the first period to grab a lead they refused to relinquish.

Johnny Mahaffey, the former N.H.L. Montreal Canadien, fired the first counter just after the minute mark and Bob Blake mare it 2-0 before Jean Paul Denis, another Montrealer, netted New Haven's lone tally in that frame. From then on it was a netminder's field day and the teams remained scoreless to the final whistle.

The Springfield team also ran their score up the good-egg way until Rockets retaliated in the final frame. On first period goals by Eldy Kobussen and Karry Frost and second stanza tallies by Johnny Quilty, Bill Gooden and Paul Courteau, the Indians were 5-0 to the good at the start of the last period.

Then a spurt by the lowly Philadelphians who have won but two games this season, netted three goals off the sticks of Narduzzi, Unger and Warwick.

Molotov Criticizes U.S. A-Bomb Stock Pile in Debate

Unanimous Approval Arms Limitation Program Expected

By JOHN A. PARRIS, JR.

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—The world's three mightiest military powers led the United Nations toward expected unanimous approval of an international arms limitation program today, but Russia threatened to press for a global troop inventory even after Great Britain and the United States had voluntarily disclosed some figures on their armed forces.

While expressing complete accord with Britain and the United States in the arms program, Foreign Minister Molotov charged that America's stockpile of atomic bombs had been built up for use against foreign territory and not for defence.

Molotov's declaration was one highlight of a pace-setting assembly session that included these decisive steps along the road toward peace and security.

1. State Secretary Byrnes disclosed to the world the disposition of all American troops outside U.S. borders, setting the figure "at less than 550,000", and thus became the first major power to meet Russia's original demand for such data.

2. Foreign Secretary Bevin said his country was ready to supply any information desired, reported that Britain had slashed its forces from "over 6,000,000 to well below 1,000,000" and observed that after occupation commitments had been discharged the figure would go down even further.

3. By a vote of 36 to 6, with Russia dissenting, the assembly adopted a watered-down resolution on the controversial security-council veto which does little more than urge the big five to use their special voting privilege more sparingly.

Set up New Council

4. The way was paved for setting up U.N.'s last major body—the trusteeship council—with the approval of eight trusteeship agreements for League of Nations mandated territories submitted by Great Britain, France, Belgium, New Zealand and Australia.

The assembly whipped through these issues in a speed-up campaign aimed at final adjournment early tomorrow morning.

Byrnes, Bevin and Molotov entered last night's assembly session to give all their support to the arms limitation program which had been hammered out and finally approved unanimously in the 54-member political and security committee.

Byrnes, making his first platform appearance before the assembly here, surprised the delegates by naming the countries where U.S. soldiers were billeted and then set down the exact figures on all units outside former Axis territory.

Make Claim of Back Wages

Los Angeles, Dec. 14 — (AP) — Two thousand employees of National Biscuit Company sued in Federal court today for $500,000, claiming that amount due them from the company in back wages for 15 minutes daily spent in donning uniforms and arranging tools, and 20 minutes in washing flour from their bodies and dressing for the street.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Dec. 14 (CP).—Synopsis: Pressure is low along the Labrador coast and high through Western Canada and the central United States. This pressure distribution is causing a persistent flow of cold air from the northwest across Ontario, Quebec and the northeastern United States which will continue over the week end. The air is gathering moisture as it crosses the Great Lakes causing frequent snow squalls in the Georgian Bay, Lake Huron and Haliburton regions. Scattered snow flurries are occurring elsewhere. Temperatures this morning are 12 to 15 degrees below in Northern Ontario while in Southern Ontario they are generally 15 to 20 above.

Reported German Plane Flew Over U.S. During War

Boston, Dec. 14 —(AP)— A report that a German airplane flew over U. S. cities along the Atlantic seaboard, including Boston and New York, during the war was made yesterday by the former commander of an American photographic reconnaissance squadron.

Richard S. Leghorn of Winchester, who held the rank of lieutenant colonel, told a group of optical scientists that documents found after the German surrender claimed a modified Focke Wulf "200" flew the reconnaissance trip over the Atlantic seaboard in 1943.

Speaking at ceremonies marking the opening of the Boston University army air forces optical research laboratory, Leghorn said that the flight of the German plane originated at an airfield in France.

He declined to comment further.

Three Famous Battle Areas Have Become Scenes Smuggling Operations

By WES GALLAGHER

Aachen, Germany, Dec. 14 — (AP)— The three famous battle areas of Ardennes, Huertgen Forest and Aachen — engraved into history books two years ago with the blood of Allied soldiers —today have become the scenes of a great smuggling operation.

It is estimated that more than $1,000,000 worth of illicit goods monthly are crossing the German-Belgian-Netherlands frontier.

British border guards say that much of the smuggling is being done by Allied soldiers — British, American, Belgian and Polish. Some of these men may once have fought in the same areas, although almost all the soldiers who saw combat here either have gone home or are sleeping in nearby Belgian cemeteries.

This battered city of Aachen (Aix-la-Chapelle), is the hub of the smuggling operations, so large that the chief British intelligence officer of the area described them as "fantastic."

A handful of British border guards, aided by regulation-bound German police and none-too-enthusiastic Belgian soldiers, are trying to halt the smugglers.

The loot going into Belgium includes jewels, furs, radios, kitchenware, automobiles and needles. Coming out of Belgium are coffee, food and cigarettes.

Three times in the last six months, large needleworks in Aachen have been burgled of millions of needles which days later popped up in Brussels.

A typical deal works this way: Two pounds of coffee from Belgium, smuggled into Germany, are traded for a silver fox fur. The fur, smuggled into Brussels, may bring the equivalent of $100 or more.

Smuggled goods go over the frontier in soldiers' knapsacks, in suitcases and by truckloads. Although mile after mile of the border is mined, the smugglers know paths through the mine fields which the guards do not.

Many U. S. Army deserters, living by their wits with German girl friends, are reported to be in the area.

Overcrowded cities and huge stretches of forest and lonely roads make it easy for deserters of all armies to hide in safety.

The commander of the British border control said his unit had just been able to "scratch the surface."

"Much of the smuggling is on an individual basis, but the big stealing is organized by international gangs headed in some cases, I am afraid, by Allied soldiers," he said.

32 BODIES ARE EXTRICATED FROM TOMB OF RUBBLE

Officials Give Up Hope Of Finding Others Alive And Only Four More Remain Buried

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—Haggard rescue workers, counting 32 bodies extricated from the tomb of rubble that marked the site of a six-storey Upper Manhattan tenement, neared the end of their grim task today in the search for further victims of the tragedy.

Officials who had given up hope of finding any others alive expressed belief early today that only four more bodies remained buried under the tons of twisted steel girders and clumps of bricks of the building which housed 22 families.

The structure was smashed early Thursday morning by a two foot thick wall of an adjoining ice house which toppled on it after a five-alarm fire.

The bodies of the 31st and 32nd victims, Peter Sloane, 38, and his daughter, Louis, five, were removed from the wreckage early today, several hours after the work of digging was halted briefly while a Roman Catholic priest climbed atop the rubble heap to give conditional absolution to those still entombed.

All five members of the Sloane family died in the tenement collapse. The bodies of Mrs. Madeline Sloans, 36, and her daughters, Rita, 11, and Judith, four, were removed previously.

Huge Cranes Used.

With all hope gone that any one was still alive, huge cranes and pneumatic drills again were used after the diggers had resorted to bare hands and small tools in an effort to minimize the possibility of another collapse.

Fire Marshal Thomas P. Brophy reported to Mayor William O'Dwyer that two fires in the ice house Wednesday caused the roof to cave in and push the wall onto the tenement.

Two boys, 13 and 10, were held as juvenile delinquents on arson charges in connection with the first blaze.

Justice Hubert T. Delany of Children's Court convicted the boys yesterday in connection with the first blaze, but said:

"There is no evidence that was disclosed that the fire they set caused the collapse of the ice house. I don't want any neighbors or schoolmates to point out these children as the ones who caused the deaths of so many persons. There is no proof that they did."

Five Youths Questioned in Death

Los Angeles, Dec. 14—(AP) — Five youths, ranging in age from 15 to 18, were booked today for investigation in the brutal rape-bludgeoning of Mrs. Naomi Tullis Cook, 52, sportswear clerk, whose body was found Wednesday behind a park rest room.

Millard Advises Steel Fabricating Workers To Seek Minimum Wage

Toronto, Dec. 14 — (CP)—C. H. Millard, Canadian director of the United Steel Workers of America (C.I.O.) today called on steel fabricating workers to seek a "temporary minimum" weekly wage of $37 for a five-day 40-hour week.

Annual two weeks' vacations with pay, six statutory holidays with pay and a "high degree of union security" were set forth in Mr. Millard's "short term program" at a meeting of the union's National Advisory Committee.

In addition, locals were asked to consider introduction of some form of guaranteed annual employment and income.

General purpose of the meeting, union officials said, was to correlate fabricating plant earnings with those secured in basic steel plants at Sydney, N.S., Sault Ste. Marie and Hamilton, following the basic steel strike last summer.

"In view of the labor rates of 64½ cents at Hamilton and the Sault and 59½ cents at Sydney, the differentials in vacation plans and statutory holidays, lack of check-off or any form of union security at Stelco up to Oct. 4, the strike settlement — though falling short of our objectives — is an important victory," Millard told the meeting.

"Actually," he continued, "since the work week has remained at 48 hours, the strike settlement has give nour steel workers in the three mills a weekly minimum of $37.20 or $3.60 more than the $33.60 accepted as a weekly objective. This weekly minimum, if there is no lost time, will mean an annual income exceeding $1,980, which is $150 more than the $1,750 objective included in our policy."

"Because of the sharp increase in cost of living the need for a wage increase became acute. It is doubtful if the real income obtained from 48 hours' work at 77 1-2 cents is an adequate minimum for the average steel worker Certainly anything less than $37.20 weekly will be found to be totally inadequate, even if there is no marked increase in cost of living," he said.

RAY LAWSON IS NEW LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR OF ONT.

60-Year-Old London-Born Industrialist Hopes it is Opportunity for Service

London, Ont., Dec. 14—(CP)—Ray Lawson, O.B.E., whose appointment as Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario was announced by Prime Minister Mackenzie King yesterday, said last night that he and his wife expected to make their home in Toronto and hoped to find a house or apartment there.

The 60-year-old London-born industrialist, who will take over his new duties Dec. 26, said the post was "an opportunity for service and we are looking forward to it."

"I have been endeavoring to get out of active business for some time past and devote my time to cultural and other interests," he added.

Mr. Lawson and his sister, Mrs. Duncan McArthur of Toronto, widow of the late Ontario Education Minister, sponsored the Lawson Memorial Library at the University of Western Ontario.

"I have never taken part in politics except to exercise my franchise," he said. "I have a farm four miles out of London and that is my hobby. My chief recreation is fishing and I used to do a lot of riding up until the outbreak of war."

Mr. Lawson from 1940 to 1943 directed operations of Federal Aircraft Ltd., Crown company at Montreal.

Wife from Sarnia

His wife is the former Helen Newton of Sarnia. They have five children, all married, and eleven grand-children. His three sons and two sons-in-law served in the war and one of the latter, Capt. Robert Kindersley, was killed in action in May, 1943.

A year after Mr. Lawson took over direction of Federal Aircraft, the company produced its first plane. A year later the company had delivered nearly 1,300 aircraft, has completed its third contract and was working on engineering and designing for future contracts.

Active in educational development, Mr. Lawson has been chairman of the medical students' loan fund at the University of Western Ontario since the fund's inception. A few years ago he sponsored a special post-graduate course in surgery at Dalhousie University in Halifax.

At the outbreak of the Second Great War he headed London's first Red Cross drive and donated his fast lake cruiser to the Royal Canadian Navy. Throughout the war he was prominent in charity and war savings drives.

SALMON INCREASED

Ottawa, Dec. 14 (CP)—A retail price increase of one or two cents a tin of canned salmon, depending on the size, has been authorized by the Prices Board.

An announcement by the Board today said the action was taken following a review of data submitted packers. "General cost increased was the resaon given for the upped price.

DEATH TOLL 18 FROM RAILWAY WRECK IN OHIO

Four Crew Members and 14 Soldiers on Christmas Leave, Victims

Mansfield, O., Dec. 14—(AP)—Results of a 13-hour search in the wreckage of three trains near here set the death toll today at 18 — four crew members and 14 soldiers headed home for a Christmas leave before shipment to Japan.

The injured list totalled 50, also mostly soldiers, four of them in critical condition.

The Pennsylvania Railroad's "Golden Triangle," Pittsburgh-Chicago flyer, plowed into two eastbound freight trains that had crashed a few seconds earlier 12 miles southeast of here early Friday.

Engineer Louis Petoskey, 55, of Toledo, whose freight rammed another freight train which had stopped because of a broken air hose, last night denied a statement by a Pennsylvania spokesman in Pittsburgh that he failed to heed a signal to slow down.

The "Golden Triangle," running at about 70 miles an hour, struck the freight wreckage a few seconds after the pile-up which blocked the passenger train's westbound track.

Petoskey said he received "clear signals all the way to the crash" and did not know that the other eastbound freight had stalled in front of him until his fireman, Robert E. Keith, 31, of Toledo, yelled that he saw red flares.

Keith and Petoskey scrambled over the coal tender after setting the brakes about "20 car lengths from the other freight," Petoskey said. Keith was killed, but Petoskey escaped with minor injuries.

F. J. Hughes, brakeman on the second freight, and E. H. Patterson, engineer on the second passenger train's two locomotives, also were killed. Charles Reed, fireman on the second passenger locomotive, died in a hospital a few hours later.

TWO BREAK-INS IN CITY REPORTED

Two different break-ins in the west end of the city were reported to police early this morning as during the night entry had been gained to Reid's Dairy and to the Weston Bread Company warehouse.

At Reid's Dairy a small rear window had been broken with $12 in change, seven flashlights and 22 pounds of butter having been taken. At Weston's entry was also gained by a window, but efforts to open the company safe proved unsuccessful. The break-ins are being investigated by Inspector Clair Hayes and Sgt. Arnott.

"Cuddles" Now U. S. Citizen

Hollywood, Dec. 14 — (AP) — Multi-chinned S. Z. Sakall, movie character actor known affectionately as "Cuddles," and his wife, Boezsike, became United States citizens yesterday. Born in Hungary, they came to this country in 1939, after Sakall had made 105 European pictures.

THIEVES ACTIVE DURING LONDON'S THREE-DAY FOG

$22,000 Worth of Cash And Jewels Stolen From American Woman

London, Dec. 14 (AP)—Fog today dogged Britain for the third straight day, hopelessly snarling traffic, tying up shipping, causing at least three deaths and giving comparatively free rein to thieves and pick-pockets.

Train and plane schedules were disrupted and motor traffic was at a virtual standstill.

Scotland Yard operatives, already hard pressed by a series of new crimes, announced that the American-born Marquise De Zahara was robbed last night of £5,500 ($22,000) worth of jewels and cash by someone who apparently cut her handbag from its shoulder strap in Victoria railroad station.

Police also sought a mysterious "woman in slacks" in connection with recent burglaries. The officers disclosed that a woman's heel print was found outside a bedroom near Bagshot, where Mrs. Irene G. Roberts was robbed Thursday night of £8,000 in jewelry. It also was understood that there was other evidence that a woman was a member of a gang suspected of a long string of robberies, including the theft last October of 80,000 worth of jewels from the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

The strangest crime to come out of the fog was the disappearance of £8,000 worth of silver coins from a sealed express car of a train bound for Wales. Although the seals were intact when the car was opened at Cardiff, the coins were gone. The remainder of the shipment, worth £10,000 was untouched.

The liner America docked at Le Havre, France, this morning after cruising aimlessly for more than 12 hours because of fog.

Two motor trucks disappeared in London, one containing $4,000 worth of clocks and the other 1,200 pairs of shoes.

An automobile plunged off the Southampton pier in the fog last night and Mrs. Frederick Arthur Burgess, her brother and another woman were drowned. Mrs. Burgess' husband, who was driving, was rescued.

Govt. Forces Seize Yencheng

Nanking, Dec. 14 (AP).—Government forces seized Yencheng, the newspaper Hsin Min Pao reported today, virtually completing their recapture of Northern Iangsu Province.

A dispatch dated Chinkiang, the provincial capital, reported National forces drove the Chinese Communists from Yencheng in a four-day and night battle. There were heavy casualties on both sides. The city is 88 miles northeast of Chinkiang. Remnants of the Communist garrison fled to a village eight miles to the northwest.

With the fall of Yencheng, the Communists hold only one important city, Funing — 35 miles northwest of Yencheng — in Northern Kiangsu.

Married Nurses Will Quit Work In Hospitals Magazine Warns Ottawa

Montreal, Dec. 14 (CP). — Possible closing of wards in some hospitals as a result of loss of married nurses when new income tax regulations come into effect Jan. 1 was foreseen today by the Canadian Hospital, publication of the Canadian Hospital Council.

"Letters from all parts of Canada indicate that married women employed in hospitals are giving notice that they will give up their positions early in the year, many of them on Jan. 1," the magazine said with reference to the Dominion Government's decision to reduce the tax exemption on incomes of married women.

"These statements come from nurses, office staff, maids, kitchen help and others," the article said. "In one large eastern hospital 48 married nurses have announced that they will quit at the end of this month—a crippling blow for this hospital.

"There is some justification, from a general viewpoint, for this revision (of income tax exemption), but it does not alter the fact that hospitals must remain open and that a large percentage of them simply cannot provide the services needed without the assistance of married women....

"In some hospitals this loss of married female staff will probably mean the closing of whole wards."

The publication said protests from hospital councils in Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia had contained the suggestion that the new tax regulations should exempt from their provisions married women who are doing essential work.

"As far as hospitals are concerned," the article continued, "it has been pointed out that practically none of the work done by married women—nursing, maid service, etc.—would be done under any circumstances by men."

Order Effective On April 1st; Tax Placed During War

Ilsley Decides on Removal Before Leaving Finance Dept.

Ottawa, Dec. 14 (CP) — Finance Minister Abbott announced today the Dominion government has decided to withdraw its three-cent tax on gasoline sales, effective next April 1.

Explaining the proposed action, Mr. Abbott said:

"The Dominion gasoline tax was put on in wartime in order to meet the urgent needs of war and it was not intended to retain it as a feature of the Dominion tax structure in peacetime any longer than was necessary.

"Indeed, it has been regarded as a particularly suitable tax for use by the provinces to enable them to finance the construction and maintenance of highways.

Mr. Abbott said that during the last Dominion-Provincial conference it was urged almost unanimously by the provinces that the Dominion withdraw from this field.

He added that individual provinces with whom the Dominion has been negotiating over the last three or four months for separate financial agreements have again made the same request.

Mr. Abbott's announcement concluded

"Before his retirement as minister of finance, my predecessor, the Rt. Hon. J. L. Ilsley, had decided that the Dominion's financial position had improved sufficiently to warrant the discontinuance of this tax from the beginning of our next fiscal year and I am pleased to be able to announce this decision at this time.

Much Livestock Killed as Storm Topples Buildings

Toronto, Dec. 14—(CP)—Gale-force winds which caused damage estimated at thousands of dollars in Southwestern Ontario abated today but in the Stratford, Goderich, Watford and Woodstock areas — the sections hardest hit by the last punch of a Texas tornado — farmers still tried to estimate the damage.

No figures on damage were available but loss was reported "heavy" in the Stratford area where many livestock died in farm buildings toppled by the storm.

Skies were generally clear today and temperatures dropped as Polar air settled over most of the province. The cold weather spurred farmers in the Watford region to repair barns and other farm buildings left roofless by the storm.

Elmer Kleinfeldt, whose farm is half a mile east of Dublin, lost his barn and driving shed. In the same district the wind flattened barns owned by Jack Drake and John Ryan and killed livestock.

King George Marks 51st Birthday

London, Dec. 14 (AP). — The King today celebrated his 51st birthday quietly with his family.

Official celebrations are held in June.

A 21-gun salute was fired at noon by the Royal Horse Artillery and a similar salute was planned at suburban Windsor Castle where the King and Queen planned to spend the week-end. This was the first time for the Windsor salute since 1938.

Turner Given 9-Month Term

Convicted on a charge of gross indecency involving a 14-year-old boy, Ralph Turner, former Coe Hill school principal, was sentenced to nine months definite and nine months indeterminate, by Judge Reynolds of Kingston, at the General Session of Peace on Friday.

The former Coe Hill continuation school principal had been acquitted of a like charge by the jury on Thursday. Turner still faces two additional charges of gross indecency involving male persons.

The charge heard against Turner on Friday was presented by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., with Malcolm Robb as defence counsel.

Dancer Convicted Of Manslaughter

Montreal, Dec. 14 —(CP)— Night club entertainer William S. (Bill) Acorn, who said he accidentally killed his best friend during an argument over the conflicting hours they kept, was convicted yesterday of manslaughter and will be sentenced Dec. 20.

The six-feet-four-inches entertainer from Providence, R.I., had been charged with murder following the dagger slaying of boxer Lester Velez of North Merrick, L.I., in an actors' rooming house Sept. 20. The defense said the killing was accidental and the prosecution called it manslaughter.

The Court of King's Bench jury, which began hearing the case yesterday, deliberated three hours before reaching its verdict. Twenty minutes before their decision was announced they returned to the courtroom, where Mr. Justice Wilfrid Lazure presided, to ask for further explanation of the law dealing with manslaughter.

Evidence at the trial was that Acorn, dancer and comedian at the Shamover Club, shared a room in the mid-town Crescent St. house with Velez, an old friend whom he had invited to stay with him during his Montreal run.

INSPECTOR THOMPSON AND TRAFFIC SGT. ATTEND MEETING

Inspector H. A. Thompson of Provincial Police Headquarters in this city and Traffic Sergeant John Kay have returned to the city after attending since Monday a meeting of the 13 District Inspectors of the Province in Toronto. They were addressed by department officials on police work and the means of betterment of law enforcement in Ontario.

Youth Group To Hold Carol Service

Almost a year ago, a committee of young people from the various churches of the city organized for the purpose of promoting fellowship among the young people's church groups. The ministers of the city have taken an active interest in their endeavour, and a number of youth gatherings have been held under their sponsorship in which the young people of many of the various denominations of the city have taken part. The meetings have been characterized by inspirational singing, musical presentations, short addresses by the young people themselves, and interesting and profitable addresses by speakers from out of the city.

On Sunday this group has planned a Christmas Carol Service to be held in Bridge Street United Church after the regular service. The committee invites the general public to attend this service, and has expressed much appreciation to the Rev. Donald Amos and the people of Bridge Street for allowing them the use of their spacious church for the purpose.

PLAN HUGE CYCLOTRON

New York, Dec. 14 — (AP) — Columbia University announced today plans to erect a 2,500-ton cyclotron capable of producing energies of 300,000,000 electron volts. The machine will be on a par in energy with the great cyclotron at the University of California.

Marjorie Lawrence Awarded Diamond Cross of Legion of Honor

Paris, Dec. 14 — (AP) — A diamond cross of the Legion of Honor was presented to Marjorie Lawrence, Metropolitan Opera star, in a private ceremony today at the Paris Opera after she sang the role of Amneris in Verdi's opera, "Aida."

Picton Family Not Worrying About Daughter

Tucson, Ariz., Dec. 14—(AP)—Tucson police last night investigated the disappearance of an attractive young Canadian visitor, identified as Dorothy Learie, about 25, of Picton, Ont.

Miss Learie has been missing since Monday when she checked out of a downtown hotel to visit friends. Police said the young woman, who arrived here Dec. 6, was last seen leaving the hotel followed by a man, believed to be a taxi driver, carrying her luggage.

Mrs. Frances Rogers, manager of a Tucson apartment building, said she had met Miss Learie upon her arrival at the request of a Canadian business man, not otherwise identified, who said she was the daughter of a business partner.

Miss Dorothy Learie is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Learie, proprietors of the Picton Manor Cabins on the Glenora Road near Picton and went to Tucson, Arizona, for her health around December 1st. Mr. Learie believes that his daughter has not notified Mrs. Frances Rogers with whom she was staying in an apartment house of her new change in address. Mrs. Rogers gave her lodging only until she could find other accommodation. In conversation with members of the family by the Ontario Intelligencer today they are not worrying unduly because their daughter has, travelled extensively. They expect to receive word from her soon as to where she is located.

Joseph Taylor Ordered to Stand Trial for Murder

Sarnia, Dec. 14 — (CP)—Joseph Taylor, 37-year-old foundry worker of nearby Oakwood Corners, has been ordered to stand trial for murder in the slaying of his wife, Rita, 25, Nov. 30.

Mrs. Taylor died in hospital here Dec. 1, a few hours after being found battered into unconsciousness in the couple's blood-spattered tourist cabin home.

Magistrate C. S. Woodrow yesterday committed Taylor after Constable Harold Graham testified that accused had told him "I don't want to incriminate anyone but Harry Holmes is the one who did it."

Earlier police theory was that the couple had been drinking before an alleged quarrel. The woman's injuries included severe head wounds.

Harry Holmes of Corunna, told the court that he had driven the Taylors home the night of Nov. 29 and that both were "fairly sober" when he left them.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Morgan, neighbors, said that Taylor aroused them about 2 a.m. and they went with him to the couple's cabin, one of 32 in use all year because of the housing shortage. They testified they found Mrs. Taylor on the floor, her head in a pool of blood. Both swore Taylor said: "I fixed the little ——."

The couple were married three years ago and had come to Sarnia from Hamilton.

Verda Vincent of the medico-legal branch of the Attorney-General's Department, testified that spots of human blood were found on garments and a broken chair in the tiny three - room cabin.

Optometrists Hold Picton Meeting

A regular monthly dinner meeting of the district Optometrical Association took place at the Royal Hotel in Picton, Wednesday, December the 11th.

Mr. J. A. McFee of Belleville gave an informal address on the economic aspects of public relations with respect to the practice of optometry. This excellent talk was particularly pointed in context toward the general public conception of optometrical services, with references to the numerous and diverse opinions among laymen regarding how the optometrist must determine appropriate fees. Mr. McFee in his address also commented the intense interest taken by men of the profession in the extremely important neuro - psychological principles of vision and the visual apparatus. The scientific approach being made to these problems through the field of visual training, he felt, was to be highly commended.

Belleville Optometrists present were: Mr. J. A. McFee, Mr. S. C. Rose, Mr. G. S. Wonnacott.

Shortage of Nurses Very Serious Problem

Toronto, Dec. 14 — (CP)—Ontario Health Minister Russell T. Kelley told the Canadian Association of Scientific Workers last night the shortage of nurses was the most serious problem facing his department.

Mental duties, low salaries, long hours and failure of small hospitals to establish nursing schools were listed by Mr. Kelley as the chief causes of the shortage.

Mr. Kelley said the department would institute an inquiry into the absence of records of government-provided pre-natal visits to expectant mothers.

HEAVY SNOWFALL SEEN AT BANCROFT

Old Man Winter has come in earnest to the northern part of the county, according to reports from Bancroft this morning. After snowing all day on Friday there is eight inches of snow at Apsley, while at Bancroft snow is almost as deep. It was still snowing at Bancroft this morning, after an all-day blizzard on Friday.

Threats Reported To Blow Up Scotland Yard

London, Dec. 14 (AP). — A spokesman for Scotland Yard reported two threats to blow up the world famous police centre had been made today.

The threats, the spokesman said, were made by a man with a deep voice who called at midnight and again this morning. The caller he reported, said Scotland Yard and the Marble Arch at the entrance to Hyde Park would be blasted.

The Yard immediately strengthened its own guard and dispatched extra police to the Marble Arch area.

The spokesman would not say whether the caller gave reasons for the threats.

These threats were the latest in a series extending through the last two days.

Last night a caller, police reported, said a west-end subway station would be bombed. An emergency squad searched fruitlessly for explosives.

The night before, an attempt was made to burn schools of a London synagogue and a Coventry newspaper received warnings. Scotland Yard said that an anonymous caller said the synagogue vandalism was carried out out by a "National Guard" opposing Jewish underground violence in Palestine.

Vancouver Youth Faces Six Charges Armed Robbery

Vancouver, Dec. 14 —(CP)— A 20-year-old Vancouver youth was held by police today on six charges of armed robbery and detectives said his confessions, implicating an accomplice, had broken the back of the city's mounting crime wave which saw 15 holdups in 14 days with loot totalling $8,000 still missing.

The chief of the reinforced criminal investigation branch, Supt. Walter Mulligan, said the holdup wave had been smashed with the confession of James Leo Van Dorn to holdups at grocery stores, dress shops, a laundry and a steam bath, despite the fact some of the robberies are yet unsolved.

As police searched for Van Dorn's accomplice, the crime-aroused police commission got a report showing 29 arrests had been made and 32 charges laid as a result of a city-wide police drive up to Dec. 11.

The report showed 30 cases of armed robbery in the city in November, three times the figure for October. But burglaries and auto thefts were down considerably.

Van Dorn was twice arrested by police and the second time, detectives said, he "cracked wide open." First picked up in a roundup of suspects, he was later released. But a short time later police discovered a splintered piece of wood in a downtown hotel room where he and a companion had been staying. It was from an automatic pistol stock.

In the same room, hidden under chair cushions, detectives discovered the gun itself and Van Dorn was quickly picked up again.

C.B.I. spokesmen said undoubtedly some of the bandits implicated in recent robberies were still at large and the police drive was continuing.

Jury Returns Open Verdict In Girl's Death

An open verdict was returned by a coroner's jury Friday evening at the adjourned inquest looking into the death of 16-year-old Marjorie Way, College Street, who died last Saturday night en route to the hospital after being struck by a dry cleaner truck from Tweed.

The inquest was held before Coroner Dr. J. Russell Scott with Assistant Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson acting for the Crown.

M. H. Card, driver of the cleaner truck which struck the young girl as she was riding her bicycle on Cannifton Road outside the city limits, stated that he had been driving south toward the city and had not realized his truck had struck anything.

Police testifying at the inquest stated the accident had occurred off the travelled portion of the highway with the point of impact being three feet west of the pavement. The body of the girl had been thrown 36 feet against a guard rail post, while the bicycle the girl had been riding was dragged for 84 feet. The truck had proceeded for 80 yards before stopping.

Also giving evidence were Dr. J. B. McKay, pathologist at the Belleville General Hospital, and Dr. Miles.

The coroner's jury empannelled by County Constable Thomas Thorne were Clarence Clapp, foreman; George Deline, Jack Johnston, George Ellarby and William McKay.

CLARKE T. ROLLINS COE HILL REEVE

Bancroft —(Special)— Clarke T. Rollins of Coe Hill was elected reeve of Wollaston township at municipal election held in that municipality on Friday winning over R. P. Gunter. Rollins polled 229 votes as against 95 for his opponent. The council was elected by acclamation.

Paris, Dec. 14 — (Reuters) — Jean Cocteau's film "Beauty and the Beast" has been awarded the prize for the best French film of 1946, it was announced today. Marcel Carne's production of "Gates of Night" was runner-up.

MOLOTOV

Nothing to Hide

In the giving the troop count, the State Secretary thus backed up what delegates of his government repeatedly have told the world assembly—"the United States has nothing to hide."

Byrnes announced first that most of the U.S. troops abroad were in former enemy territory—Germany, Japan, the Japanese Islands, Korea, Austria and Trieste.

He then gave these specific figures on others:

The Philippines—96,000 military personnel, including 30,000 combat troops.

China—19,000 troops with 15,000 of them combat men.

Panama—1,500.

Byrnes declared the United States had no combat units in any other country of the world.

Reporting on non-combat military personnel, he said the United States had 600 men in Iceland and 300 in the Azores.

Hailed With Relief

Molotov told the world assembly that disarmament would be hailed with a sigh of relief in all countries, but added that "there still is frenzied propaganda in favor of a new war."

Turning to the atomic bomb, the Russian foreign minister said:

"It is clear that atomic weapons are not for defence and, therefore, when people tell us of their interest in the defence of their countries it goes without saying that such defence is not by atomic bombs. The atomic bomb is not destined for use in one's own country. Its destination is in another territory."

Molotov did not offer to disclose the number of Russian troops abroad or at home.

Term Session Fruitful.

Moscow, Dec. 14 (AP)—Izvestia today termed the United Nations General Assembly session in New York "fruitful".

"One cannot be satisfied with all its results," said Izvestia in a long review of the session. "It can be assumed that the session could have reached better results with less waste of time and energy, but one can not fail to see substantial achievement benefiting the cause of international peace."

Izvestia said the four-power foreign ministers' council, which has just finished drafting five treaties in New York, also "overcame many difficulties for the solution of important international affairs in the interest of peace and democracy."

The paper termed the Russia proposal for universal arms reduction the most important question before the assembly and undoubtedly the biggest constructive step toward peace since the U.N. was formed, but declared efforts had been made to "confuse this question in every way".

Life Underwriters Hear Address On Trust Companies

With an unusually large attendance, the last meeting of the year of the Life Underwriters' Association of Belleville and district was held in the Y.M.C.A. on Friday. In keeping with the approaching Yuletide season the tables were given a festive air with Christmas decorations and the usual period of community singing was devoted to carols. Mr. Bill Oliver acted as song leader and Mr. Leo B. Riggs, as pianist, also added to the pleasure of the guests by a brilliant solo.

The meeting was presided over by the president, Mr. Don Williams and was in charge of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. Two guests were introduced Mr. Ross Hubble, London Life, Trenton, and Mr. Bill Brennan, Empire Life, Belleville, while two new members were welcomed to th association, Don Carruthers, London Life and Mr. Bill Phillips, Prudential of England.

Auxiliary Given Donation

With Mr. P. C. McGuire acting as sergeant at arms for part of the meeting assisted later by Mr. F. Douglas the fines mounted at an astounding rate. An interesting part of the meeting was the presentation to the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Y.M.C.A. of a donation on behalf of the Life Underwriters. Appreciation of the members was extended to the ladies for the excellent meals served throughout the season.

Mr. T. Wilkinson of CJBQ was present at the meeting and introduced the guest speaker, Mr. R. W. Roberts of the Crown Trust and Guaranty Company. Mr. Roberts, who has been for twenty-eight years associated with his Company, gave a very interesting address explaining how trust companies are allied in purpose with the work of life underwriters. Life underwriters, he pointed out, assist in building up and help create a man's estate. The work of the trust company, that of administering and conserving that estate, begins when the man has passed away.

Advised to Make Will

Since the aim of a good life underwriter is to study the needs of his client and advise him, Mr. Roberts showed several ways in which the underwriters could be of service One was in advising a man to make a will. It was most unfortunate that many men neglected this important act and many, even wealthy men, die intestate. Their estate is distributed, it is true, the government having made provision for such an exigency, but the distribution is often made in a manner far from the mind of the deceased person.

Mr. Roberts also discussed a proposal by which the Belleville Life Underwriters would sponsor a radio program, and which his company would further. The theme of the program would be of an institutional nature. In connection with this plan a committee including A. L. Burke, A. G. Stackhouse, P. C. McGuire, with the president, was named to confer with Mr. Roberts and Mr. Wilkinson and to report to a later meeting.

At the conclusion of Mr. Roberts' splendid address the appreciation of the Association and of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company which sponsored the meeting was expressed by Mr. Leo Quinn.

Two Sisters Run Surgical Centre

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 14 (CP).—Two sisters, both of them fully qualified nurses, have set up a suburban surgical dressing station in Elsternwick, Melbourne. They believe they have hit upon a new idea which will serve a twofold purpose, proving helpful to the community and relieving the strain upon the out-patients' department of public hospitals.

During the first three weeks of its operation the station has been doing pretty brisk business. When the venture becomes better known the nurses — Margaret and Florence Symons — do not expect to have an idle moment. This will be all to their liking, since they have volunteered to maintain a 24-hour service.

The two girls feel the existence of a local dressing station can spare elderly patients and mothers the trouble of frequent journeys to the city as out-patients of public hospitals, and will also relieve busy doctors of routine, time-wasting tasks.

Dark-eyed Margaret Symons, the elder sister, recently returned from six years' war service in England, Egypt, Palestine, Italy and Greece. Nursing runs in her family for, besides Florence, she has another sister nursing in a Melburne public hospital, and the girls' mother was also a nurse.

Says 80 Per Cent of Portuguese Against Present Regime

New York, Dec. 14 — (AP) — Joseph Arthur Porto, 29, former assistant financial attache in the United States Embassy in Lisbon who last month was ordered by police to leave Portugal, said on his arrival here yesterday that "80 per cent of the population is opposed to the present regime" in Portugal.

CRITICS OF RADIO OVERLOOK VARIED AUDIENCE TASTES

By JOHN SMALLER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Criticism — the refusal to accept anything as the ultimate in perfection — may be considered the impulse to progress. Radio, as one of the youngest of the arts has, naturally, been the object of more than its share of criticism and, we may reasonably conclude that if radio today is good it is because of that criticism.

Criticism of radio has been varied and recurrent, but one of the more amusing instances was that recently the subject of a full column by the Toronto Globe and Mail's J. V. McAree. "In the interest of science," Mr. McAree wrote, "a young Toronto man exposed himself to the Canadian radio for a period of 14 hours and 45 minutes . . . He believed . . . that socialized radio cannot compare with the entertainment that is provided in the United States. He found that in England the absence of advertising on broadcasts was refreshing, but on the other hand that their entertainment quality was far inferior to what people are accustomed to hear over the American network."

Hot in reply, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's press and information service, in a letter to the editor of the same paper, argued that even if the young man had selected his own programs to his own taste, 14 hours and 45 minutes would leave him likewise unnerved.

Of the Canadians who spent some years in the United Kingdom during the recent war and were subjected to the British Broadcasting Corporation's programs, the majority agreed that the over-all entertainment value of the B.B.C. is somewhat lower than that on this side of the Atlantic. Whether or not the advertising on the air has anything to do with the quality of the programs is a matter of personal opinion. Some radio programs are good, some are not so good — and the same is true of advertising.

Even the big radio bosses themselves are aware of this. As witness William S. Paley, chairman of the Columbia Broadcasting System of the United States, at a recent convention in Chicago of the National Association of Broadcasters. He condemned what he called "excesses" in advertising and said it was no one's fault "but the broadcaster's." Niles Trammell, National Broadcasting Corporation, said that 'constant vigilance must be exercised to control abuses.'

A painting, a book, a piece of sculpture are pleasing to one person and may be displeasing to another. The same is true of the features that come over the air.

Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Charlie McCarthy are screamingly funny to the average North American ear. Tommy Handly, England's top radio comic — the ITMA man — is a pain in the neck to the average Canadian. During the war the American forces in the U. K. (as did the Canadians later) had their own radio network. Benny, Allen, McCarthy were weekly features. When an Englishman was induced to listen in he sat glumly. He laughed uproariously at Tommy Handly. He couldn't see anything funny in Benny, Allen or McCarthy.

PRODUCE MANY BENEFITS

Hamilton, Dec. 14 — (CP) — Mild weather of this fall and winter has produced many benefits to Hamilton residents. Householders have saved fuel costs, the city has saved snow-removal expenses — and turkeys are plumper. A Caledonia woman displayed two gobblers at Central Market Thursday which weighed 25 and 28½ pounds. She said that due to the open winter, even hen turkeys are large this Christmas.

Two Sentenced In Arson Attempt, One for Arson

Hamilton, Dec. 14 — (CP)—In an aftermath of last summer's 81-day wages-hours strike in Canada's three big basic steel plants, Judge W. F. Schwenger Friday sentenced Edward Glover to one year definite and one year indeterminate in reformatory on charges of arson and attempted arson and Cecil Brown to nine months definite and nine months indeterminate for attempted arson.

Police charged that Gover and Brown tried to set fire to the homes of two non-striking employees of the Steel Company of Canada.

Judge Schwenger said he could conceive of no dispute between master and servant "which called for settlement by the torch." He said the accused apparently failed to take into account the fact that a woman and two children were sleeping in one of the homes.

"You have been referred to in evidence as joy-riders," the judge told Brown. "Others, however, might very well have termed you riders in the night."

Defence counsel G. A. Martin of Toronto said the jury which convicted the two men had recommended mercy.

"I am not condoning the violence but we must have regard for all the circumstances," he said.

Police said the accused tried to fire non-strikers' homes with "Molotov cocktails" — glass bottles filled with gasoline to which a fuse was attached.

WHAT IS DEMOCRATIC
(Felix Frankfurter in Saturday Review of Literature)

Democratic government may indeed be defined as the government which accepts in the fullest sense the responsibility to explain itself. It can operate successfully only when statesmen know not merely that they will be held to account for what they do, but those who hold them to account can weigh facts and reflect upon their meaning. To equip citizens for this understanding and for the exercise of this responsibility, is I venture to believe the function of education in a democratic society.

DREW WANTS END TO APPEASING RUSSIA

Hamilton Dec. 14 — (CP)—A demand for an end to "the present appeasement" of Soviet Russia and an attack on Canadian Communists was made last night by Premier Drew of Ontario. "Rats gnawing at our vitals," was the description applied to Canadian Communists by Premier Drew in an address at the annual meeting of the Hamilton Traffic Club.

Early Mailing

Buying postage stamps for Christmas parcels, letters and cards has been proceeding at an increasing pace, and is now climbing to great heights, an indication of the volume of mail which has already been sent and a herald of very heavy mailing for the next ten days or more. Post office staffs naturally expect the usual Christmas rush and are hopeful that the people will send early so as to avoid an avalanche of mail such as would happen if everyone delayed posting. Fortunately most people realize the need of early action and will contribute their share of thoughtfulness to relieve or remove any possibility of delayed delivery.

Mailers to out-of-town areas either near or far should see that their parcels and letters are in the mails in plenty of time. This will be appreciated by all those who are associated with the handling, sending and delivery of Christmas parcels and letters.

The indoor staffs and the postmen are performing an important duty to the country and to every individual. Delays in mailing would greatly blockade the handling of the mail, overwork the staffs who should be considered by the people.

The postman has no say as to how much mail comes in and he cheerfully bears the load and therefore he deserves the most thoughtful consideration of the public for Christmas trade and mail create a problem which the post offices across the country from coast to coast solve by their preparations and by their hard work.

Winter Gales

Weather's infinite variety in this climate is one of the marks in this country. Forecasters with the aid of modern instruments which are being multiplied at the rate that fairly baffles the imagination told for instance of this change in the weather, its rain, cessation of rainfall, the rising of the winds which blew to gale velocity, the sudden filling of the air for a moment or two with snowflakes blown and swirled by the headstrong reckless wind blowing about a street corner and meeting another portion of the gale coming up the street, and the arrival of colder weather on the wings of the wind king. Such weather is usually expected because a storm in winter usually means snow, drifts and colder weather. The weather of Thursday and Friday was tempered with considerable moderation at least in temperature that has been characteristic of the season. This district was fortunate in the fact that it escaped losses such as were inflicted in Western Ontario parts.

World Famous Figure

John R. Mott, who was recently announced as co-winner of the Nobel Peace Prize, has had a street named after him in Salonika, Greece, has written fifteen books, has been decorated by fourteen governments and has travelled more than two million miles.

As head of the Y.M.C.A., Student Volunteer Movement, World Student Christian Federation and International Missionary Council, he has presided at regional and world meetings in more than eighty countries. He is a familiar of kings, presidents, diplomats, churchmen and educators.

As a result of his work he is credited with having influenced more young men than any other living man. Presidents Wilson, Taft and Franklin D. Roosevelt of United States hailed him as one of the most useful men in the world.

Mr. Mott is known as the "elder statesman of the Y.M.C.A.", and has carried one message to the corners of the earth — fellowship in Christ.

At the age of eighty-one Mr. Mott this year has made three transatlantic flights and envisions vast journeys in the future to carry on his evangelism.

Air Express

Passengers between Britain and America can now fly the Atlantic at an average speed of 300 m.p.h., but next year even faster aircraft will be put into service. The air passenger of 1947 will have the option of crossing the ocean asleep in a comfortable bed in a luxuriously equipped aircraft at a speed of 430 miles per hour. As recently explained by J. J. Trippe, president of the Airways Association, in an address to the International Chamber of Commerce in Paris, this speed will later be increased still further.

Will We See Time Begin?

That cozy little universe of the earliest astronomers — the universe in which the earth lay under an inverted bowl from which hung the sun and the stars — exploded hundreds of years ago, of course, and has been expanding ever since. But even the 20th century mind is staggered by the announcement that the Lick Observatory of the University of California has ordered a 120-inch reflector, which will be the world's second largest telescope, and will enable man to look out into space for a distance of 900,000,000 light years.

That means we shall be able to see stars, or rather galaxies of billions of stars, the light from which has been travelling nearly a billion years to reach the earth — at the rate of 186,300 miles per second. We leave it to you to multiply out to the number of miles away this new telescope will be able to see, while we go on with another thought.

According to the latest estimates of the atomic astronomers, the universe was created about two billion years ago, and one theory is that it was created by the rather sudden condensation of a thin cloud of gas into suns, much as a water cloud under the right conditions suddenly condenses into raindrops.

Our thought is this, and we put it into the form of a question. Is it possible that in time a telescope will be developed strong enough to peer a little more than twice as far into space as will be possible with the 120-inch reflector, and thus allow man to look back to the beginning of time, so far as the present universe is concerned?

—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

BACK ON THE FARM

In the old days watches were rare among the farmers and wrist watches had not been built. The family time was kept by the tall old clock on the kitchen wall. The clock might be incorrect anywhere from minutes to half an hour but it served the purpose. Where there was a farm bell the housewife pulled the rope and made the bell clang lustily prior to taking up the meal.

All farm homes did not have a bell. Some used a big horn which could be heard in remote fields and which served the purpose as well as a bell. Others again ran up a white flag on a tall pole which could be seen from all parts of a level farm.

In any case, whether it was by bell, by horn or by flag it did not take the men in the fields long to respond. There is nothing like farm work to sharpen the appetite. One may suspect that ears were tuned for the bell or horn before the awaited signal was heard and eyes were trained on the top of the flag-pole for the first sight of the fluttering white cloth.

—Fort William Times-Journal.

It is amazing what can be done by just relaxing. It may not be necessary to take a long sea voyage; all a man may need is to slacken his pace at periods during the day, loosen his necktie and shoestrings, put his feet up on his desk or another chair, and let the world roll by for two or three minutes without worrying about it. It has been found that a good proportion of persons who suffered heart attacks of the most severe nature, and adopted right measures of living, are still alive and enjoying life ten or more years later, says the Royal Bank Bulletin.

The ovibos (musk ox) provides good wool. Alfred Farrer Barker, professor of textile industries at Leeds University, concluded that cloth made from it has roughly the wearing qualities of merino, is softer than cashmere, has an agreeable soft brown color, bleaches readily, and can then be dyed any shade. But the trait which thrilled Professor Barker was that garments made from it will not shrink, even if washed in hot water. He considered that ovibos wool, if available in quantity, could be sold at a higher price than any ordinary domestic wool, says Vilhjalmur Stefansson in Harper's.

Seventy-six per cent of North American housewives refer to newspaper advertising for grocery news according to a recent survey by the Home Makers Guild of America.

"GRANDPA'S HERE"

"Grandpa's here!" the children shout
Every time he comes.
Then, they slyly talk about
Dolls and horns and drums.
Into conversation gay
Falls some wanted thing,
Which they hope, for Christmas Day,
Santa Claus will bring.
Since on dropping hints depends
So much Christmas cheer,
Grandpa, just as sly, pretends
That he doesn't hear.
Willing Grandpa is to be
Serving such a cause.
None is happier than he,
Helping Santa Claus.

The members of the Sergeants Mess of the 15th. Regiment gave a progressive pedro and euchre party last evening in their well-appointed quarters at the drill hall. It was a most enjoyable affair.

English as World Language

(By "J.S.C.", In The Vancouver Daily Province)

Goodwill, whether between individuals or nations, must be based on sympathetic understanding. Hence the demand for a common language. One recalls how the word "stranger," as applied by one so bland as the late Sir Wilfrid Laurier to Lord Dundonald, led to misunderstanding and offence, and to the latter's resignation from the task of reorganizing Canada's Army.

On the other hand the spectacle of nations as widely different in origins and ideals as Great Britain and United States—and in lesser degree Canada and Australia—beating out their differences without ill-will is clearly due to the aid conferred by a common language.

Amid all the present turmoil and misunderstanding of the post-war period, one of the hopeful elements is the demand by the delegates of thirty nations at an international convention of teachers that the English language be made a second tongue in all non-English countries, with a choice of French or Spanish as second tongue in the schools of the English-speaking countries.

The war, with its millions of English-speaking soldiers in the victorious invading armies, has displaced French, Spanish and German in many of the countries represented at the convention.

"English should become the second language of all nations. In fact, English today is the Esperanto of 1946—the universal language of the world" declared Dr. Thyra Andren of Norway.

Said Jose Luis Figuero of the Mexican Teachers Association, "We should consider English as the international language of the world. It is already spoken by so many millions of people, and its use is increasing so rapidly, that it could easily become the common language of all. In Mexico all our secondary school students are required to take English."

In similar vein testified delegates from countries as widely separated as Brazil, China, Ecuador, Iceland and Haiti. As a result, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization is to be asked to take immediate steps to consider the advisability of making English the universal language of the world.

Admitting that English is not the easiest of languages to learn a suggestion was made that the leading linguists of the world be invited to form a commission to map out the most effective method of learning English. Neither "basic English" nor Esperanto as a substitute was given consideration. The convention wants the nations to learn the language that Shakespeare wrote in all its rich shades of meaning and power of expression. The aid of the commission would be invited merely to point the simplest method of attacking the task.

The atom bomb that laid waste Hiroshima blasted away many a natural barrier. If mutual goodwill and understanding between nations is to be arrived at, the cultural medium must be a common language. And the opinions of delegates of thirty nations to the international teachers convention is that English is destined to become that common language.

USING FEW OUNCES OF BRAIN
(St. Louis Post-Dispatch)

The dinosaur, with a brain weighing only a few ounces, poses, it is said, the question how long man, with his three pound brain can survive. Well, that's not quite the question. The question is, how long can man survive, using only a few ounces of his three pound brain?

DEPORTED

Maganlal Hirachand Shah, Indian automotive engineer works manager and a member of the Bombay legislative assembly as well as a member of the Congress led by Gandhi and Nehru, has been served with order deporting him from Canada before he could set foot on the Dominion's soil. Mr. Shah, now visiting Detroit, blames British influence in Canada for the deportation.

FIRST FOR BRITAIN

Smiling as she arrives at New York's LaGuardia Field, Janet Huntley, of Sheffield, England, is first flight stewardess in the 37-year history of British Overseas Airways. Formerly line carried men stewards.

Longer Schooling Emphasized For Healthier Citizens

Montreal—Education's task is to see that children continue in school until 18 or 20 years of age, and that the best citizens in country be recruited to train them.

This was emphasized by Dr. W. P. Percival, director of Protestant education in the province who in an address before the Waterloo, Que., Kiwanis Club raised the question:"Is it right to allow children to leave school at 12, 14 or 16 years of age? Should many of them be encouraged to stay until they are 18 or 20 years old?

Predicts Future Awakening

"Some day," he said, "Canadians will see that the answer to my last question is in the affirmative. But it may not be given in time to apply to our children. And this is just the point. Shall we expend the money necessary and give the advantages we know would accrue, or shall we let our knowledge go by the board and let the next generation tackle the problem."

Dr. Percival pointed out that the amount spent for education each year had increased greatly in the past few decades. "That further expenditures are necessary is undoubted," he stated.

"Thousands of young men were rejected by the Navy, Army and Air Force during the recent war because their health was not satisfactory. Why? Probably through neglect in youth in many cases. Their parents probably did not recognize that any thing was wrong and grew accustomed to their children's ailments.

Not On Business Basis

"If we conducted the schools as men operate their business we would not tolerate such losses. A machine out of order is repaired immediately. Similarly we should have the malconditioned human machine adjusted. Defective eyesight should be corrected, crooked spines should be straightened, flat feet should be treated, disease should be curbed. Many more facilities should be provided for play in order that children may gain health thereby.

"Opportunities for vocational and technical education are far too much restricted in this country. Many a boy and girl would be quite willing to continue their cultural education if, side by side, they could follow some occupational course or courses. The fine arts need to be given a much broader recognition than they have had hitherto. The mental health of many adolescents is quite unsound and needs scientific care. The characteristics that make for success need to be explained and nurtured. Deportment should be improved in many cases.

"Psychological tests should be administered to put the multi-sided pegs into the right places. Vocational guidance should be given. Guidance in conduct should be scientific not haphazard. A start has been made in Montreal by the engagement of guidance counselors. But the needs are as great outside of Montreal as in that city. Problems of transporting children long distances to school need to be solved. Scholarships a plenty should be provided to enable the children of the poor and of those in moderate circumstances to attend school and college to the limit of the tastes and abilities. Feeding the underprivileged needs deep consideration. Better provision should be made for the safety of children on the streets.

"The country should be scoured for the 80,000 most potentially competent teachers that are needed to fill the schools of the Dominion. They should be given thorough training and be paid according to their talents. If this number were found and employed they would revolutionize the children, even as the best do now."

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

IT IS UP TO THE DOCTOR

Please tell me which hospitals in our vicinity permit the husband to remain at his wife's side during delivery, asks a reader. The reader goes on to say that owing to a certain complication, "it may mean my life if my husband can remain with me" etc., etc.

That is hardly a matter for a hospital to decide. It is to your physician, Madam, to decide whether it would be wise under the special circumstances, to accede to your natural wish.

I any case, whether everything is normal or some complication occurs, the husband's place is at his wife's side during delivery, in my opinion.

Further, I believe the main reason why certain hospitals have "rules" excluding the husband from the delivery room, is that the doctors, nurses and other attendants need not be so careful to avoid mistakes or improper care or treatment of mother and child if nobody is present to see what goes on. You will note I do not say or mean that all hospitals, doctors, nurses or other attendants are untrustworthy.

Now I hope no one bursts into print to proclaim that the presence of the husband in the delivery room would endanger the patient, with his germs and all that malarkey. The truth is that the husband is rather less likely to bring dangerous germs into the delivery room than is the average doctor, nurse or other hospital attendant.

I'm sorry I don't know which hospitals in the correspondent's vicinity may permit the husband to remain at his wife's side where a real man belongs.

But no matter. The time to arrange about that is when you engage your physician. Engage the physician with the distinct understanding that the husband is to be with his wife during delivery. If the physician is not a mere hanger-on he will tell you whether your wishes will be respected. If the physician is worth his salt he, and nobody else, decides the question. If he is not worth his salt he will probably try to tell you the hospital "rules" or maybe even the "health department regulations" do not permit the husband to remain in the delivery room—and I assure you all this is sheer bunk.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Fissure

Can rectal fissure be healed without operation? Have you a pamphlet on constipation?

(F.D.K.)

Answer—Sometimes fissure can be healed without operation. If any surgery is necessary it is less painful than the fissure. Under local anesthesia most such minor operations give no pain whatever. Send ten cents and stamped envelope for booklet "Constipation Habit and Colon Hygiene." Do not use a clipping, please.

Saccharin

Would the daily use of two half-grain tablets of saccharin in coffee cause a person to become dizzy? (R. McW.)

Answer—No. Any one may use up to five grains of saccharin every day with impunity. From one-fourth to one-half grain gives a sweetening taste equivalent to teaspoonful of sugar.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What is a cymbling squash?

"Cymbling," also variously spelled "symbling," "simling" and "simlin," is the name commonly given to a scalloped or pattypan summer squash. "Simlin" is an obsolete or dialectic word meaning "cake."

How did "hammock" originate?

"Hammock" in the sense of a hanging or swinging bed of canvas or netting is derived from "hamaca," a Spanish rendering of the Carib Indian name of a tropical tree. The natives of the West Indies and Central and South America used the bark of this tree in making their suspended cots. In the narrative of his first voyage Columbus wrote: "A great many Indians in canoes came to the ship today for the purpose of bartering their cotton, and hamacas, or nets, in which they sleep." Washington Irving, in his life of Columbus, referring to the Island of Exuma in the West Indies, wrote: 'For beds they had nets of cotton extended from two posts, which they called hamacs, a name since in universal use among seamen."

Similar hanging beds had been used on shipboard by European sailors and the English had previously called them "Brasill beds." In the course of time "hammick" came ashore and established itself in English in the sense of any swinging bed or couch. In the Southern States, especially Florida, "hammock" is applied to slightly raised areas where hardwood vegetation grows and where the soil is deeper and richer in humus than the flatlands or pinelands. The term in that sense is a variation of old English "hummock."

Who were the earliest known Siamese twins?

Although the term "Siamese twins" originated in the 19th century, the earliest joined twins of which there is authentic record were the Biddendon Maids, born in England about 1100 A.D. So far as known ancient writers did not mention joined twins.

Siamese twins seldom survive. They may be of the fraternal but generally are of the identical type. The degree of physical connection may range from a simple union of the umbilical vessels to a considerable fusion of the two bodies. Whether they can be successfully separated by a surgical operation depends upon the circumstances in each case.

In 1939 Mary and Margaret Gibbs, 27-year-old Siamese twins of Holyoke, Massachusetts, were paid a single salary of $150 a week for show purposes and their manager is reported to have insisted that because of the joint salary they should be permitted to join a union as one person. The advisory board of the American Guild of Variety Artists (A.F.L.) ruled that since the girls had two different names they would have to join as two members and pay separate initiations and yearly dues.

Christmas Pageant Presented By O.S.D. Pupils at School

Of the two hundred and ninety children registered at the Ontario School for the Deaf, only about fifty were in the cast of the annual Christmas pageant, and these won their places through the merit of good behavior and high academic standing in their respective grades.

On Friday afternoon the pageant was presented to a capacity audience in the assembly hall of the school, which had been made festive for the occasion with two finely decorated Christmas trees on the floor at either corner of the stage, the decorations being candy canes and ornaments made by the children.

W. J. Morrison, principal, welcomed the guests the teacher and pupils of the Avondale School, as well as parents and others interested in the children attending the O.S.D. He expressed appreciation to Mr. Alec Gordon and to Miss Keeler, directors of the pageant, and to all others who had helped in preparing the pupils for the presentation of same. He said the object in presenting this each year is to help the participants to better understand the wonderful story of the first Christmas, besides giving them the necessary training in stage presence and poise.

Ceral Singing

Choral singing as an accompaniment to the colored pictures of the well-known scenes "Nativity", "The Wise Men Following the Star" and "Shepherds on the Judean Hills" which were shown on the screen, created a receptive atmosphere for the portrayal of the events leading up to the birth of the Christ Child. Immediately preceding each of the five scenes Flora Clark, a pupil who has learned to speak quite well, read a portion of Scripture describing the scene which would follow.

During the first scene, "The Annunciation", Mrs. Morley Davidson, a former member of the teaching staff, sang "Ave Maria", while soft lighting made more effective the presence of the angel, (Marjorie Swayne) appearing to Mary (Jennie Meta).

"The Arrival at the Inn", the payment of taxes and the disappointment for Joseph (Emerson Leslie) when told "there was no room" were made very realistic by the use of costumes of authentic appearance.

For scene three, "On the Hills of Judea", the sudden arrival of an excited young shepherd lad, pointing to a wonderful light in the midnight sky, thrilled the audience with some of the wonder which the shepherds felt as they bowed in worshipping awe.

Greatly Perplexed

"King Herod's Court" included the high priest, (Charles McKenzie), as an advisor to Herod (James Barron), when the Wise Men, (Howard Lines, Peter Solski and Donald Corlett) came to inquire "Where is He Who is born King of the Jews?" Herod was greatly perplexed and worried over the idea of a possible rival for his throne, which became a most uncomfortable seat, which he vacated continuously to pace the floor as his scribes sought information from the "books of the law" and of the astrologers.

With the accompanying music of "Silent Night" the "Nativity" was a fitting finale to the preceding scenes. Mary and Joseph watching the manger bed while two angels guarded the sleeping Babe and cherubs hovered near; the Wise Men returning to offer their gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh and the Shepherds kneeling in wonder and worship as a host of angels in procession appeared to fill the whole central floor space below the stage to the majestic strains of "Adeste Fidelis".

Speaking with Miss Keeler after the presentation the Ontario Intelligencer learned that these children had only seven practices in the scene of this pageant, and that no school hours had been used for teaching them. Great credit is due to the directices in the scenes of this pageant, in any way in perfecting the presentation of so fine an entertainment.

German Occupation Saw Many Problems With Some Success

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Berlin, Dec. 14 (CP).—Germany under occupation creates many problems for Big Four control authorities but 1946, although a difficult year all around, was not without achievement in the individual zones.

Recurrent food crises in the British occupation are among the greatest difficulties bringing a threat of the first large-scale disorders. This food trouble came largely because of breakdown of the Potsdam agreement that Germany be treated as an economic whole.

Trial of the Nazi leaders at Nuernberg before an international military tribunal was completed after a hearing lasting nearly a year and 10 of the 11 sentenced to death were hanged in the gymnasium of Nuernberg prison. Crafty Hermann Goering, showman to the end, committed suicide in his cell a few hours before he would have died on the scaffold.

In all zones, denazification was pressed ahead and thousands of former Nazis were removed from responsible positions.

During 1946 the Canadian Army withdrew from Europe. By the end of last spring, the Canadian Army Occupation Force, consisting of an enlarged 3rd Division of more than 20,000 men, had left northwest Germany for Canada; and by November, the last remaining scattered units had gone home. The only Canadian organization left in Germany is the military mission in Berlin, with pseudo-diplomatic status and responsibility.

As the initial phase of occupation drew toward a close, British and American authorities also thinned out their occupation forces, and now they are believed to be far less numerous than the Russian.

Lack of co-operation among the zones, particularly the failure of agricultural products to move from the Russian zone, left the highly-industrialized British area out on a limb, at heavy cost to the British taxpayer.

No Serious Trouble.

Big surprise of the year was the absence of serious trouble from the Germans. There were some incidents in the United States zone and a few in the British, but they were scattered and comparatively minor.

A plot to re-establish the Hitler Youth Movement as a Nazi underground was smashed overnight by British and United States troops.

Demobilization of the German army was practically completed, except for many members of the S.S. and affiliated Nazi organizations still held in prison camps, mostly awaiting trial. Germany was largely demilitarized, with defences destroyed and munition stocks blown up.

Most displaced persons in the Reich were repatriated and, under Control Council supervision, German transport, industry and business began slowly to reorganize and operate on a limited scale. German administrations were set up in the zones and given increasing responsibility.

Germany began to pay reparations in industrial plant, shipping, patents and assets held abroad but delays in decisions taken by the Control Council here particularly in the selection of German plants surplus to peacetime economy, greatly slowed down the process.

Mexico Girls Find Canada Cold

Winnipeg, Dec. 14 (CP).—Usually at this time of year Canadians take one look at their parkas and heavy boots and start dreaming about the sunny south, but snow drifts and a north wind didn't deter two winsome young senoritas who arrived here from Mexico recently.

They admitted they had been shivering as the train had carried them through "colder and colder" places and 19-year-old Enriqueta Morales said, "Oh, it's so very cold. I've seen snow before, but oh, it's terribly cold."

The girls — Esther and Enriqueta Morales of Mexico City — were sent here by their father to study English. Last year he sent the sisters to a business college in Quincy, Illinois. They roomed together and did all their chatting in their native Spanish . . . which didn't help their English a great deal.

However, this year things have been arranged differently. The sisters will stay in separate homes so that they may learn to speak the English language more quickly and adapt themselves to the Canadian way of life.

Mr. Morales, a manufacturers' agent in Mexico, last year sent his 15-year-old daughter, Carmen, to a convent in Ottawa to learn English. But the cold weather defeated her and she scurried home early.

The first thing the sisters did when they arrived here was to buy warm coats. Now they are settling down to routine — sightseeing, classes and extra-curricular activities. They have enrolled at the Y.W.C.A. for swimming and basketball and joined a business sorority.

And a year from now, when they return to their native land, it is planned that the girls will be thoroughly conversant in both English grammar and idiomatic English and also have pleasant memories of their visit "up north".

Many U. S. Potatoes Spoiled

Mason City, Ia., Dec. 14—(AP)—From 5,000,000 to 7,000,000 bushels of the United States bumper 1946 potato crop already had spoiled and the loss may mount to 38,000,000 bushels, A. E. Mercker, federal official in charge of the government's potato price support program, said yesterday.

In the account of a miscellaneous shower for Mrs. Tommy Belnap, which appeared in Friday's paper, the name "Miss Phyllis Galbraith" should have read "Mrs. Willis Galbraith".

Friends of Mrs. Percy C. McGuire, Bridge Street East, will regret to learn of her bereavement occasioned by the death of her father, John Duncan Narris, which occurred in Toronto, on Friday.

Women's Activities

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S. MEET

Stirling, (Special.)—The annual meeting of the St. Andrew's Women's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. Harper Rollins on Thursday afternoon. The President, Mrs. Anderson was in the chair and the meeting opened with the singing of a hymn, and prayer by Mrs. Walker. This was followed by the reading of Psalm 34 by Mrs. Albert Hammond. The completed slate of newly elected officers for 1947 was read by Mrs. Louis Rodgers:

Honorary President, Mrs. Walker, Mrs. M. Tompkins, Mrs. W. L. Anderson; President, Mrs. R. A. Hermiston; 1st Vice President, Mrs. Clayton Tummon; 2nd Vice President, Miss Gena Spry; Secretary, Mrs. W. L. Munroe; Treasurer, Mrs. A. Hammond; Supply Secretary, Mrs. E. Foster; Members in charge of Welcome and Welfare, Mrs. R. Eggleton, Mrs. Walker; Glad Tidings, Mrs. R. H. Williams; Home Helpers, Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. McIntosh; Press Secretary, Mrs. Rodgers; Pianist, Mrs. Clayton Tummon; Assistant Pianists, Mrs. Clarke Rodgers, Mrs. Chas. Fargey.

Mrs. Anderson expressed her thanks to the society for their support during her six years of presidency and Mrs. Walker tendered a vote of thanks to the retiring officers. It was decided to send Christmas cards to shut-ins and also to present a vice-membership to the oldest member of the W.M.S., Mrs. Tom Montgomery, to be presented at the January meeting.

Mrs. Clarke Rodgers was convener of the Program, and the entertainment opened with a piano solo "Silent Night" played by Mrs. Clayton Tummon. After a hymn Mrs. Tompkins led in a prayer taken from the Missionary Monthly. Mrs. Carman Fitchett read the 'Christmas Story' taken from the Gospel of St. Luke. Mrs. Norman Ray gave the "meditation" on "Why Do We Celebrate Christmas". Mrs. Ernie Cain contributed an interesting reading entitled "Innkeeper's Guest", followed by a Christmas story read by Mrs. Hermiston, Mrs. Roy Eggleton contributed a solo 'Holy Night' with Mrs. Tummon at the piano and the final reading 'Safe in Prayer' was given by Mrs. Hoard. The meeting closed with the recitation of prayers led by Mrs. Clarke Rodgers. The ladies served delicious refreshments and a vote of thanks was tendered to the hostess, Mrs. Rollins, for the use of her home and to the convener of the program, Mrs. Clarke Rodgers.

Tea Drinking in Britain

(From The Winnipeg Free Press)

Britain is now back to 89 per cent of its prewar consumption of tea. Considering the comfort which the Briton derives from his teapot, and the general discomfort of his like now-a-days, this is good news. The gentle stimulation and warmth of tea will not make up this winter for cold houses, ragged clothes and a monotonous diet but it will certainly help.

The British were the first western people to discover the mild and harmless vice of tea drinking. The Manchester Guardian, researching into its fascinating subject finds tea first appearing as a matter of public discussion on Sept. 30, 1658, when a London dealer advertised an "excellent and by all physicians approved, China drink." Two years later the ineffable Pepys drank his first cup of tea and recorded it, with many other experiences less agreeable in his diary. But tea was an aristocratic and expensive drink then, beyond the reach of most Englishmen. As late as 1728 it sold for anything between 12 to 30 shillings, a pound. The wife of a country rector records in 1783 that pound of the precious stuff lasted her a year. The modern rector's wife, one suspects, would perish on such a niggardly diet.

Tea in those days had to compete against cheaper drink like beer and also against strong prejudice. Many doctors unable to explain it otherwise ascribed the disease of their patients to daily tea drinking. Jonas Hanway, inventor of the umbrella, so the Guardian tells us, hinted that tea drinking had robbed Englishmen of their vigor and Englishwomen of their beauty—an alarm which the events of recent times has not confirmed.

Dr. Johnson, who probably poured more tea down his throat than any living creature before or since thought it neither stimulated the palate nor exhilarated the heart and was not fitted for the lower classes. He was dreadfully alarmed to find four million pounds of tea imported in 1757. If he were alive today to witness the importation of four hundred million pounds a year, undoubtedly he would have made some comment worthy of Boswell's sedulous notebook.

And he would have found also that tea which he considered fit only for the intellectual has become a major servant age. The teapot is a humble but by no means unimportant influence in binding all classes together. Besides its glow, and under its warm internal impact, all men tend to become brothers.

Christmas Program Well Received

The annual Christmas concert presented by Victoria Ave., Baptist Sunday School was thoroughly enjoyed by the capacity audience that thronged the school rooms on Friday night. The manner in which the various recitations, drills and plays were performed spoke of painstaking practice and careful coaching on the part of teachers. The little tots, especially, endeared themselves in the hearts of the audience and many humorous, unrehearsed byplays drew spontaneous ripples of delight from all sides.

The program was as follows:

National Anthem; Prayer by Rev. H. O. Eastman; Chairman's remarks by Mr. R. L. Orr, Superintendent; Recitation, "Greetings" by Ernest Burn and Brenda Harvey; Chorus, "Welcome" by the Nursery, Beginner and Primary Departments; Drill and Chorus by Junior Girls, Mrs. J. Lloyd's class; Recitation "Dolly's Piece," by Marilyn Cook; Recitation, "The Other Santa" by Ann Clapper; Dialogue "A Christmas Cake" by Dawn Ing and Diane Hales; Play "The Runaway Carols," Intermediate Girls, Mrs. W. Hales' class; Recitation "Baby's Stocking" by Ann Farmer; Chorus "Down in Toyland Village" by Nursery, Beginner and Primary Dept.; Recitation "All Our Mothers" by Jimmy Hannis; Recitation "Merry Christmas" by Judy Robson; Action song "The Handkerchief Brigade" by primary Boys; Recitation "Greedy Jim" by Diane Hales; Exercise, "Christmas Wishes" by Nursery, Primary and Beginner Dept. with recitations by Elaine Coles, Bobby Waite, Harold Lee, Diane Hales, Joyce Blackburn and Carol Fisher; Carol singing by entire audience, led by Mr. Eric C. Naylor; Pageant "Through the Christ of Bethlehem" by Seniors and Young Adults; Benediction by Rev. H. O. Eastman. Pianists for the evening were Mrs. B. Doolittle and Mrs. Blake Kerr.

Carol Singing At H. & S. Club

The Home and School Association of Queen Mary School held a short session Friday evening with Mrs. H. Croll in charge.

Carol singing led by Mr. R. Franklin was followed by games of bridge and euchre. Prizes for bridge were as follows: Ladies', Mrs. F. Symons; men's, Mr. Pollard. Euchre prizes were: Ladies', Mrs. W. Latchford; men's, Mr. Wagar.

The festive atmosphere of Christmas time was created by the presence of a nicely decorated and lighted Christmas tree. On behalf of the Home and School Association, Mrs. Croll presented Mr. Frederick, principal of the school, with an Electronic Phonograph, Record Player and several records, to be used in the different grade for Music Appreciation periods.

Refreshments were served by Messrs. C. Frederick, F. R. Wotten and A. Nathan, all in Santa Claus garb.

Bancroft

Bancroft, Dec. 14 (Special). — Mr. and Mrs. John Wiggins, Joyce Wiggins, Mr. W. E. Wiggins and Mrs. R. W. Blatherwick were in Belleville Thursday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hahn spent Thursday shopping in Peterboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Wiggins, Mrs. Frank Wiggins and Carol Wiggins spent Thursday shopping in Belleville.

The strong wind which swept over Bancroft Wednesday night accompanied by heavy rains caused the Bancroft electric power to go off shortly after ten o'clock and it remained off for some time before the trouble was finally cleared up.

The high wind was also responsible for tieing up traffic on Highway No. 62 about four miles south of Bancroft Wednesday evening when a large tree was blown down across the highway bringing with it all the Dungannon Telephone System's telephone lines which took the better part of Friday before communication was resumed.

As the result of the election held at Bancroft Wednesday for school board in which the following men ran, Mr. Harold L. Skuce, Mr. R. C. Wiggins, Mr. Harold Thompson, Mr. Hermon Maxwell and Mr. C. A. Eddy, the vote was as follows: Skuce 131, Wiggins 129, Thompson 114, Maxwell 106 and Eddy 98. The first three will comprise the newly elected personnel of the school board for 1947.

Mrs. Elizabeth LaBarge, former proprietress of the Queen's Hotel at Bancroft opened a novelty gift shop at her newly acquired premises in the Vacoff block Thursday.

Even if winter hasn't put in its usual appearance at this time the stores and other places of business have taken on a Christmas tinge by decorating their windows with trees, lights and gifts.

With such an abundance of rainfall in North Hastings County during the past few weeks farmers throughout the district will not have to worry over water supply like they have since spring. The roads in the country are next to impassable and even the main highways, 62 and 28 are in very poor shape and compare to the spring of the year.

Mrs. Charles Jeffs Again Re-elected As President

At a meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary to Branch 99 Canadian Legion B.E.S.L. held Thursday evening, the annual election of officers was held. Mrs. Jeffs was elected to a third term as president, Mrs. Bradford was given a second year as treasurer, Mrs. Young her second year as secretary and Mrs. Dolder the second year as standard bearer.

Other officers elected were Mrs. Styles, first vice-president; Mrs. Clarke, second vice-president; Mrs. Kent, chaplain; and Mrs. Asistine and Mrs. Loveless as auditors.

Executive committee are Mrs. Meeks, Mrs. Livingstone, Mrs. Bouchard, Mrs. Newton, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Helm and Mrs. Ritch.

Arrangements were completed for attending the men's social evening to be held Dec. 19 and at the close of the meeting, Mrs. Jeffs was presented with a handsome handbag in appreciation of her services as president for the two past years. Although taken by surprise, the president voiced her thanks and thanked those who had worked so hard with her without whom her success could not have been possible.

Episcopal Church Ladies' Aid Holds Bazaar and Tea

The Sunday School room of Emmanuel Reformed Episcopal church was the scene, on Wednesday afternoon of a bazaar and afternoon tea sponsored by the Ladies' Aid of the church and convened by Mrs. Violet Camken, president of the Guild. The guests were received by Mrs. T. Russell.

A table of fancy and useful articles was in charge of Mrs. Gulliver and her assistants, where aprons, tea towels and pillow slips were on display.

The home-cooking table, convened by Mrs. Rigby offered pies, cakes and pickles, all of which found ready purchasers.

The tea table was covered with a handsome lace cloth, and centred with a bowl of golden colored 'mums, flanked on either side by silver candelabra holding red and green candles.

Tea was poured by Mrs. Gymer, while Mrs. Fred Clark, Mrs. Mason Rigby and Miss Irene Camken served the guests, and Mrs. J. Fuller took charge of the replenishing of the plates

A basket of groceries donated by Mrs. Alex Carmichael was won by Miss Audrey Lafferty.

Mrs. E. Bell was the treasurer for the afternoon.

Ladies of Emmanuel Church are well pleased with the results of this another social event of the Christmas season.

Picton

Picton —(Special)— A serious fire was averted yesterday when firemen responded promptly to an alarm during the high wind storm. Residing in the third storey of the Allison Block, in the central business section, Mrs. E. Wheeler had left an electric iron on the ironing board. While she was absent it burned into the board and set the cover on fire. This was blazing merrily when found and, with a clothes basket which had also ignited, was carried to the street. There was some damage done by smoke.

Open Carnival.

Due to the cold, windy night, attendance at the Rotary Jamboree in the armouries last night was not as large as usual. It vill continue tonight. Many games were in charge of the club members with A. F. Brown as general supervisor, Russ. Perkin as treasurer assisted by B. Phipps, H. G.

Blakely and Wilfred Lane. Arthur Lloyd and Gordon Nourse were responsible for erection of booths.

A.Y.P.A. Officers.

LeBurn Leverton was elected president of the A.Y.P.A. of St. Mary Magdalene Church Thursday night. Other officers are Dona Cooper, vice-president; Mary Coward, secretary; Marion Sprung, treasurer; Kay Brown, press reporter; Ivan Coward, Betty Keep, Barbara Hatter, Ruby MacDonald, Betty Anne Juniper, group leaders.

Bonarlaw

Bonarlaw — (Special) — On Wednesday evening of this week about one hundred citizens of Bonarlaw and Springbrook and vicinity gathered in the Sunday School rooms of St. Mark's Church and presented Mr. and Mrs. Kennard Baker with a purse of money; and in an address read by W. J. Barlow, wished the newly married couple health and happiness for the future. Both Mr. and Mrs. Baker replied, thanking the guests for their kind expressions and for the purse and invited all to visit them when they are settled in roomier quarters.

Rev. J. M. Brownlie acted as master of ceremonies. Prior to the presentation the following program was given: Comunity singing, reading by Mrs. Allan McComb, piano solo by Rosemary Webb, violin solo, Delbert McComb accompanist Glen Wellman, vocal solo by Rev. J. M. Brownlie.

Bounteous refreshments were served by the committee in charge.

Winners at the euchre party sponsored by the Y.P.S. on Monday evening were John Cox and Jesse Barlow, Jr.

Mr. Thos. Caldwell is visiting relatives in Toronto for a few days.

Mrs. Tommy Mason returned home to Peterborough on Saturday after paying a visit to her father, Wallace McInroy.

Ladies of Parish Guild Hostesses At Chicken Supper

On the evening of Dec. 11, the ladies of Christ Church Parish Guild were hostesses for a chicken supper in the parish hall to the church members who are donors to the penny boxes.

Following the supper, the rector, Rev. J. G. Sparling, introduced the guest speaker, S/L M. J. Swan, who highlighted his address with amusing incidents from his personal experiences.

A program of entertainment followed, featuring dances by Aileen Gill, Ann Putman, Barbara Thurgood and Sandra Randle with Miss Barbara Diment at the piano. Misses Lois Theobald and Barbara Vaughan rendered two Christmas carols and Miss Dorothy West contributed two delightful solos accompanied by Miss Diment. Three readings given by Miss Eliza Bell in her usual pleasing manner were much enjoyed.

Rev. J. G. Sparling played the role of Santa Claus and distributed gifts from a beautifully decorated Christmas tree to the collectors and officers of the Guild, and to baby Dariel Sparling. Auld Lang Syne brought a happy evening to a close.

V.O.N. News

Immunization clinics, a service held regularly at the Kiwanis Centre by the Victorian Order Nurses, under the direction of Dr. G. S. Cronk, Medical Officer of Health, have been well patronized with many mothers bringing their pre-school age children to receive toxoid. The next clinic will be held on Thursday afternoon at the usual hour of four o'clock. Through immunization it has been possible to check and overcome diseases which were looked upon decades ago as necessary evils. So widespread has become the understanding of parents regarding their responsibility in thus preventing their child being a prey to such illnesses that rarely indeed does a community have to report the prevalence of such cases.

On the same days as the toxoid clinic, there will be a dental clinic in charge of Dr. Jack Marshall for pre-school age children. These clinics to which Dr. Marshall devotes much time is another essential part of the all round health program which the Victorian Order of Nurses is furthering in the community. This clinic will be held at three o'clock.

Fashion Flashes

THIS SEASON has been the emergence of the English-type, finely-handled tweed town suit. Tweeds in muted or colorful mixtures as well as fanciful, striped affairs—many of them with long, softly fitted jackets to be worn with small furs—are being readied for Sprng.

It takes the young, lithe, slender figure to really carry off the form-fitting, princess line. An ideal junior date dress is cut on this silhouette. Of black crepe, it has soft gathers below the bustline a molded waist, and is flared below the hips. The deep U neckline is edged with cut-out lace flowers. Similiar trim for the short sleeves.

Prettiest hat seen this week was of soft pink felt, a small shape with a high-shooting cluster of mink-petaled flowers with tiny pearly centres.

Back interest continues to be an important detail on ready-to-wear frocks in the medium bracket. Black crepe makes a frock having soft drapery that criss-crosses low on the waist and swings back to form a flat bustle. High, round, close-fitting neckline with white sequins and pearl bead trim.

The perfect topping for a sleek dinner suit is the small black hat with feather trimming. Set back on the head, is a spiralled black felt model, the open section bound with black satin. An aigrette fancy is posed low at one side, and the front has a bit of gilt binding.

Ideal as the extra or blustery weather fur coat is a greatcoat of mouton, so well styled that it can serve as an extra coat for the proud mink-possessor. Low-placed double-breasted closing, half-belt in back, high collar and peaked lapels are the chief features of this grand greatcoat.

CHRISTMAS

The stores are trimmed and lighted .. For a tinseled holiday ..And we're all a bit excited .. Viewing Santa's new display. When Christmas spirit warms the heart .. We can't resist the throng .. Although we play a minor part .. It's fun to go along. We see the gifts we'd like to buy .. In colors bright and gay .. And leave them with a wistful sigh .. To purchase what we may. We've learned that joy is often found .. In boxes worth a dime .. When those we love, are gathered 'round .. A tree—at Christmas time. For this day glorifies the Birth .. Of Christ—the King of Kings .. And He spent fruitful years on earth .. Content with simple things.

Britain Cannot Go Out of India And Leave Vacuum

—Sir John Anderson

London, Dec. 14. (CP)—Handing the government of India to nominees of that country's parties was a "blunder of the first order," Sir John Anderson, leading opposition spokesman, said Friday in the House of Commons when debate on India resumed.

"Can it be denied that this development has prejudiced and not advanced the prospects of a constitutional settlement?" asked Sir John, who, although labelled a "national", is intimately linked with the Conservative party. "Can it be denied that the efficiency—the administrative efficiency—of the Indian government has been gravely imperilled?"

Installation of the Indian interim government—in which Moslem leaders and Congress supporters are co-operating despite their wide differences over India's future—had "swept aside" safeguards for the discharge of British "responsibilities" towards India's minorities, he said.

Sir John declared himself dissatisfied with an explanation, interjected by the Defence Minister-Designate, A. V. Alexander, who said that no such "fundamental" change had been made. Vice-regal powers—now vested in Field Marshal Viscount Wavell—had been left untouched, Alexander stated.

U.K. Responsible For Orderly Government

Sir John said Britain at present remained "clearly responsible" for maintaining orderly government in India.

"We cannot go out of India and leave a vacuum and abandon the Indian people to disorder."

William G. Cove, former miner who later became president of the British School Teachers' Union and a Labor M.P., accused the Conservative Party of "continuing" its traditional India policy of "divide and rule".

And cries of "nonsense" from Conservatives and some objections from the Labor ranks, he said Britain had encouraged communal differences in her Indian Empire.

"The fact of the matter is that we in Britain cannot hold India by power," Cove declared. "We have lost command of the sea and America now has the biggest fleet the world has ever seen. The greatest factor in holding the British Empire together was seapower, but this has slipped from us and we have not the power to hold the Empire together on the basis of power politics."

This drew a rebuke from Alexander who asked Cove to "be careful in his choice of words." To another interjection, this time from a Conservative, Cove said he had not suggested that the United States Navy constituted a danger to Britain's power in India.

Hoard Family Bidden Farewell

Rawdon, Dec. 14 (Special). — Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bailey and Mr. and Mrs. Archie Bailey opened their home on Tuesday evening when about thirty neighbors and friends gathered to give the Hoard family a pleasant surprise before they move to their new home at Hoard's Station.

Games and conversation filled the evening after which Mrs. F. Bailey read an appropriate address.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hoard were the recipients of a coffee table; Mrs. Wallace Hoard, a potted plant; Misses Joan and Doris Hoard each received plastic picture frames, after which appetizing refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Archie Bailey entertained the honored guests during the supper hour while Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bailey entertained Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Thompson and children.

Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay McKeown and Shirley spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Runnalls at Harold.

Obituary

LATE LORNE WHITNEY
(Wooler)

Wooler, Dec. 14 (Special).—Relatives and friends from far and near filled the Wooler United Church on Wednesday afternoon for the funeral of Mr. Lorne Whitney, whose sudden death on Sunday afternoon shocked the people of this community where the deceased had lived all his life and was highly respected.

The late Mr. Whitney was born here 35 years ago and was the son of the late Mr. Norton Whitney and Mrs. J. P. McAuley. He received his education at the public and continuation schools here. He was a regular attendant at the United Church and attended the morning service on Sunday. He was always interested in sports and in his younger years was a valued member of the softball and hockey teams. While playing against a visiting team on the school grounds a number of years ago he had the misfortune to break his leg and broke the same leg last winter while loading poles for the Bell Telephone Company at Belleville. He was a truck driver and at the time of his death was employed in that capacity by the road superintendent of Murray Township. He was also caretaker of the United Church.

Besides his wife, the former Helen Tackaberry and a nine-year-old son Wayne, he leaves his mother, Mrs. J. P. McAuley and three sisters, Mrs. Muriel Chapman and Mrs. Ada McAuley of Trenton and Mrs. S. Fennell of Norwood, to mourn.

He was industrious and of a jovial nature and will be greatly missed by the people of this community.

The body rested at the home of Mr. N. N. Haggerty, a neighbor and former employer.

Rev. W. Delve assisted by Rev. F. A. Lawson conducted the service at the church and at the McPhail Cemetery where burial took place. During the funeral service Mr. Clifford Rogers sang "God's Tomorrow."

The bearers were Mr. Francis Stacey, Bloomfield, Mr. Neil Nelson, Mr. Herman Anderson, Mr. Reg. Brown, Mr. Henry McColl and Mr. Wilbur McColl.

The many floral tributes showed the esteem in which the deceased was held.

Horse Breeding Should Attract More Attention

—Hon. T. L. Kennedy

Toronto, Dec. 14 (CP)—Unless breeders do something about it soon, the chances are Ontario will be populated with old broken down horses—that's the warning of Agriculture Minister Kennedy in his annual report.

Horse breeding reached an all-time low for the past decade in 1945, the report shows. Inasmuch that the trend had been downward for a number of years, the percentage of colts and horses is gradually diminishing.

The report showed that prices last year were at depression levels and it was not until agents of the French government began buying in Ontario during last winter that quotation indicate signs of strengthening.

Ontario farmers should give greater consideration to increased horse breeding or be prepared to face a short supply and probably higher prices a few years hence, the report adds.

Charge Communists Seek to Dominate Student Veterans

Toronto, Dec. 14 — (CP)—Two University of Toronto students charged Thursday that Communists were attempting to dominate organizations of Canadian student veterans and to "exploit the good name of campus veterans." John Wallace, a second-year student who served six years in the army, said that at one university "Communists recently attempted to sneak their way into an organization and cleam they were the voice of the student body."

Black Market Value of U.S. Dollar in Shanghai Jumps to 6,700 Chinese Dollars

Shanghai, Dec. 14—(AP)—The black market value of the United States dollar made another sensational jump today, spurting 1,000 points to an all-time high of $1 for 6,700 Chinese dollars. The U. S. dollar rose 500 points yesterday. The official exchange rate is 3,350 Chinese dollars to $1. Many shops quickly marked up prices to keep pace.

PICTON

County Council Passes By-Law To License Cafes

Picton, Dec. 14 (Special) — At its final session, County Council passed a by-law to provide for the licensing, regulation, inspection and operation of restaurants, refreshment rooms, public dining halls, etc. This is subject to approval of the Ontario Municipal Board, and refers especially to sanitary conditions. Each restaurant is required to secure a licence from the county, subject to inspection and approval of the County Health Unit. Penalties for breaches of the regulations are included in the by-law.

Reporting as physician of Prince Edward County Home, Dr. D. S. Lighthall had praise for the superintendent, Mr. W. Cockburn and Mrs. Cockburn. He referred to the well kept condition of buildings and the general welfare of the aged people resident there.

Weed Inspector Harry E. Redner appealed for greater effort to control weeds and pointed out the spread of wild carrot is proving disastrous in some sections.

Elected President.

Mrs. James Hedges was elected president of the Legion Ladies' Auxiliary for the eighth year at the annual meeting this week. Vice-presidents are Mrs. Robert Lawson and Mrs. Keith Rose; secretary, Mrs. R. A. Jones; treasurer, Mrs. Dorothy Sayers; standard bearer, Mrs. Arthur Miller; flag bearer, Mrs. Albert Norman; social committee head, Mrs. T. Wilkinson; executive, Mrs. B. Cruickshank and Mrs. Harold Vincent.

Reports revealed a very busy year. This included sending many parcels of clothing for distribution to needy in British cities.

Freighters Steam For Winter Ports

(By The Canadian Press)

TORONTO, December 13 — A few lonely freighters steamed across the Great Lakes today for their winter ports as navigation for the season neared its end. Insurance rates expired at midnight last night and a Canadian Press survey today showed a skeleton fleet still plowing the great inland seas.

Three vessels, the Secord, Count Bennett and Superior, cleared from Port Arthur and Fort William last night with cargoes of grain for Sault Ste. Marie, closing the navigation season for those ports. They were obliged to sail before the midnight deadline in order to qualify for insurance protection.

The Capt. C. D. Secord, which has opened many navigation seasons on the upper lakes, was also the last to leave in 1945, closing the season that year.

Although the shipping season just concluded was marked by the biggest seamens' strike in the history of inland shipping, 250,000,000 bushels of grain were moved from lakehead ports by water since its opening.

Shipments did not nearly approximate wartime seasons, but 1946 was described as a good postwar year by shippers.

With the termination of vessel movement on Lake Superior, the need for lighthouses also ends. A Department of Transport tug will leave Dec. 18 on a three-day trip, picking up light-keepers and bringing them in for the winter.

Navigation on the lower lakes is gradually coming to a standstill. Many vessels are tied up in Windsor berths. A few more are making final runs on extended insurance. These are soon due for a winter tie-up, however.

Reports from the American side of Lake Huron say navigation has ended there, a number of ships have tied up until the general lake shipping re-opening April 15th.

POWER SHORTAGE CRITICAL!
SAVE ELECTRICITY!

SOUTHERN ONTARIO faces a severe power shortage right now. Every home, farm, store and industry in the southern part of the province must save electricity in every practical way if essential services are to be maintained during the present winter period, and rationing restrictions avoided. Hydro, therefore, asks your sincere co-operation to relieve an urgent situation.

THE DAILY PERIOD DURING WHICH SAVINGS SHOULD BE EFFECTED IS BETWEEN 8 A.M. AND 8 P.M., AND CONDITIONS ARE PARTICULARLY ACUTE BETWEEN 4 P.M. AND 7 P.M.

HERE IS HOW YOU CAN HELP

IN THE HOME

Eliminate all Christmas decorative lighting until Saturday, December 21st, and again after January 1st, 1947.

Turn off lights when not required.

Use a minimum number of lights in the living-room, consistent with good vision.

Use electrically heated water sparingly and check leaking hot water taps.

Do not use range elements on "high" when a lower heat will serve, and turn off all elements as soon as possible.

Cook oven meals as often as possible and avoid the unnecessary use of surface elements.

Turn off verandah and other outside lights.

Turn off all small appliances as soon as possible.

Do not use electric air heaters and grates.

IN STORES AND OFFICES

Eliminate all Christmas decorative lighting before December 21st, 1946, and again after January 1st, 1947.

Eliminate the use of electricity for signs and store windows from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Turn off all lights when not required.

Use electrically heated water sparingly and check leaking hot water taps.

Do not use electric air heaters.

IN INDUSTRIES

Switch from day to night operations wherever practicable.

Turn off factory and office lights when not needed.

Turn off motor-driven machines when not required and effect other savings wherever possible.

Avoid the use of all non-essential outdoor lighting.

Do not use electric space heaters.

MYSTERY PLAY NETTED 2 GOALS IN 39 SECONDS

Can Only be Worked When Opposition is Shorthanded and Sucked in

By JOHN D. HAMILTON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 14 —(CP)— The Rangers' Rover line never completed its mystery play in the National Hockey League game here against Detroit Red Wings Wednesday night but a number of hardened observers believe the trio tried to start it twice — and that it wasn't so secret after all.

The play, worked out by forwards Cal Gardner, Church Russell, and Rene Trudell, and defenceman Hal Laycoe while they were with the New York Rovers last year, was unveiled in Boston last Sunday and was alleged to have counted two goals in 39 seconds as the Rangers won 6-4.

Wednesday night, the only chance the Rovers had to try their dream scheme was in the third period when Doug McCraig of the Wings was serving a penalty.

From where we sat, it looked as if the play consisted of a trick backward pass designed to fool the opposition. There's nothing official in this and we may be dead wrong, but here's what apparently happened:

Flips Blind Pass.

With Detroit shorthanded, Gardner picked up the puck in the centre zone and skated back into his own territory. Apparently the Wings were scheduled to follow him back en masse.

Then, with the Detroit men all bunched in the Ranger zone, Gardner was to flip a blind pass behind him to Russell, lurking in the centre zone.

With the Detroiters trapped in the Ranger zone, Russell was supposed to have a free rink for a breakaway.

Gardner got his pass away but our idea was that things didn't work out as were planned.

The Wings refused to be drawn up to the New York end. And Russell didn't get a chance for a clean breakaway.

One thing was evident however:

The play is a 1-in-100-chance. It doesn't work unless the opposition is shorthanded, and the only time it works is when its inventors are on the ice. The Rover boys may never see action during a penalty to the enemy.

If the kids come up with the secret weapon successfully Sunday night against Montreal Canadiens, it may be possible to solve the mystery. Or perhaps they do it with mirrors and our analysis is all wrong.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

If Dr. James Naismith, an instructor at the International Y.M.C.A. Training School, now Springfield College, in 1891, had not accepted a challenge thrown him by the institution's dean of physical education, sports followers in this city and elsewhere around the world would not be hailing the 55th anniversary of basketball this month.

For it was as a direct result of meeting this dare that the 'Y' educator came up with the recreational formula that was to revolutionize indoor sports more than any other single body-building pastime.

At the time he turned his remarkable inventive gifts toward devising a new sports principle, Dr. Naismith and other members of the faculty were wrestling with one of the most vexing program problems in the school's history — the pressing need for a new indoor sports pattern.

Alarmed by the spreading discontent caused by the deadening monotony of mass calisthenics of the day, Dr. Luther Gulick, physical education dean of the 'Y' school, had long sought a gymnasium technique that might rekindle the enthusiasm of 'Y' members and their gym leaders.

Desperately working toward this goal, he sought the answer in detailed reports on German, French, and Swedish physical training methods. Last of these surveys was furnished by Dr. Naismith, who had examined the Swedish technique at Martha's Vineyard, Mass., where it was being taught by Baron Mils Posse. Analysis of his report opened up no new avenues.

While the school heads conducted their frenzied hunt for new recreational blueprints, gym classes around the country continued their half-hearted routines of three deep, prisoners' base, long ball, and other equally primitive diversions.

Refusing to admit, Dr. Gulick, with the resumption of regular school sessions in the fall of 1891, dropped his dilemma in the laps of a newly organized psychology class, members of which included Dr. Naismith and Amos Alonzo Stagg, later to wear the mantle of dean of American gridiron mentors.

Discussing the subject of inventions one day, Dr. Gulick declared:

"There is nothing new under the sun. All so-called new things are simply recombinations of the factors of things that are now in existence."

Dr. Naismith pointed out that if the remark was sound then all that was needed to invent a new game was to recombine the factors of known games and "we will have the new game we are looking for."

Stirred to new hope by Dr. Naismith's application of his remarks, the dean urged the class to attempt to work out a new sport along the lines suggested in the discussion. When the class re-grouped a week later, Dr. Gulick looked anxiously from one face to another. Again the answer was failure.

It was not until weeks later that Dr. Naismith was flatly challenged to solve single handedly what had proved to be a Gordian knot to the entire faculty discussion centering on a particular physical education class that had resisted all efforts to arouse its interests in gymnastics. The recalcitrants, who had exhausted the repertoires of two instructors, were a group of prospective 'Y' secretaries.

Defending the bored gymnasts, Dr. Naismith said the trouble was not with the men but with the system of exercise, adding that "the kind of work for this particular class should be a recreational nature, a something that would appeal to their play instincts."

"Naismith, I want you to take that class and see what you can do with it."

Despite Dr. Naismith's protests that he already was instructing in boxing, wrestling, swimming and canoeing, Dr. Gulick smilingly refused to cancel the assignment. Later, as the two walked down the hall together, the dean said:

"Naismith, now would be a good time for you to work on that new game you said could be invented."

Abandoning most of the heavier gym work, Dr. Naismith from the start attempted to divert the class members through recreational devices. Sailors' tag, battle-ball, three-over, and modifications of cricket, football, soccer and lacrosse were tried. The results were the same as those achieved by his two predecessors, the unanimous boredom of the class.

It was less than 48 hours before he was scheduled to report to the faculty that he also had failed that Dr. Naismith, sitting at his office desk, groped toward a solution.

• • •

Letting his mind range over the entire panorama of sports, the educator lifted with a feature here and there and experimentally fitted them together. It was while analyzing American football that, like Archimedes and his discoverer's cry of "Eureka," he jerked erect in his chair, snapped his fingers and shouted, "I've got it!"

With two peach baskets obtained from the school janitor, a hastily written list of 13 rules, and a soccer ball, Dr. Naismith faced his class the following morning. Vowing that if the game failed to click it would be his last experiment he divided the group of 18 into two opposing teams and posted them in the improvised court.

Success was instantaneous. Word spread through the school that the impossible had happened, "Naismith's class was having fun." Basketball was born! By Christmas-time, 1891, the hoop sport had invaded the far corners of the country, carried afield by vacationing "Y" students.

Three years later, so rapid was its adoption by the public, that games were being played in China and India following its introduction by "Y" secretaries. France first played it in 1895; Japan, in 1900; Persia, in 1901. Its devotees today, counted in the millions, can be found in the remotest playfields of the world.

HAMILTON TIGERS GIVE ART CHILDS A 3-0 SHUTOUT

Team Defeats Owen Sound 3-0 to Run Win Streak to Eleven Straight

(By The Canadian Press)

Rationed to a goal a period by the scrappy Owen Sound Mohawks, Hamilton Tigers matched the visitors with a shutout performance by Art Childs, his fourth of the season, to run their winning streak to 11 straight games and move six full games ahead of their nearest O.H.A. Senior A opposition.

The Georgian Bay sextette looked like anything but the last placers they are in their determined attacks on Childs' citadel, but the Tiger veteran turned back their best passing attacks while his teammates were content to let the Mohawks carry the play.

The first Tiger goal was a heart-breaker for Keith Woodall in the Mohawk nets. An Owen Sound player batted the puck into the cage and Johnny Conick, last Tiger to touch the rubber, gained credit for his 11th goal of the season.

Ab Conick made it 2-0 at the 13-minute mark of the second frame and Swat Mason finished off a passing play early in the final period for third counter.

Indians Beat Pats.

Stratford Indians pulled a mild upset when they edged Hamilton Pats 4-3 in overtime to climb out of a tie for cellar occupancy into fourth place. Bryan Robinson broke up the encounter by batting home a rebound after five minutes of extra play.

The Pats looked to be home free after two periods of play with a 3-1 lead on two goals by Barlow and one by O'Hearn. Bill Walsh and Fred Long took care of that in the third period before Robinson finished things off in overtime. Wally Zuke was the other Stratford scorer.

Galt at Oshawa.

Oshawa fans have the junior hockey tid-bit of the weekend as the Generals entertain Galt Red Wings in a Saturday night tussle. It's their first clash of the season and gives the homesters a chance to tie the high-flying wings for second place.

Galt has dropped only two games as against four for the Generals, but the Oshawans boast a win over the leading St. Michael's Majors — a feat their rivals have failed to accomplish in two tries.

In Toronto the Majors face the improved St. Catharines Falcons while Young Rangers meet Marlboros in the other half of the twin bill. The fourth-place Stratford Kroehlers tackle the winless Spitfires in Windsor in the remaining encounter.

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 14 — (CP)—Anent suggestions from Montreal Canadiens' Frank Selke to promote development of home-grown junior hockey talent and prevent raiding by wealthy pro and amateur outfits, the Ontario Hockey Association received a plan with similar aims long ago.

It came from George Panter, O.H.A. president who lives at Gravenhurst and just as with the Selke scheme the Panter plan envisaged junior ranks as a wide-spread college of hockey.

Mr. Panter's suggestion is recalled by Jack (London Free Press) Park who heard it outlined last summer. Here's how Jack tells of it:

"A logical sort of an individual he (Panter) felt, that 'A' teams were operated quite differently from the run-of-mill clubs, and as they aimed for bigger and better things financially and competitively, should be made to pay for their projects. He also felt that the pro clubs were having players developed for them too cheaply.

"His plan in a nutshell called for substantial sums to be paid to small towns for talent developed."

In short, you can't stop a fellow trying to better himself but if the home-town organization that developed him got some share of the spoils of the people who exploit the hockey prowess that he learned back home it would help some newcomer pick up hockey craft because the hometowners would have greater means for tuition.

Another indication the O.H.A. isn't so slow: Out on the west coast Bus Matthews of Nanaimo shouts to Ken (Vancouver Province) McConnell that hockey coaches schools should be organized. The O. H. A. starts that very system on Monday.

Nothing sissy about Jimmy Wilson's basketballing Hamilton Tigers: he has five chaps who go the full game without any substitutes and they won five games in a row . . . Toronto boasts some 300 basketball teams . . . Out Calgary way Norman Schriner did O.K. this season in school football . . . that's how his famous hockey-playing dad "Sweeney" Schriner started his athletic trail.

Leafs Can Oust Canadiens From NHL Lead This Weekend By Beating Rangers, Hawks

Habitants Have Only One Game and That With Rangers in New York Sunday

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

To top off the usual confusion attendant on 10 stalwarts chasing a small slice of rubber, there was a little extra in the way of "black magic" awaiting Toronto customers tonight when their Maple Leafs clash with New York Rangers in the only National Hockey League contest.

The Rangers, of course, have their "secret scoring weapon" that their Rover boys line left up somebody's sleeve against Detroit Red Wings Wednesday night after producing with such success against Boston Bruins the previous Sunday.

To match this, the Maple Leafs have their sweaters with the "vanishing numbers." The numbers, on the sweater fronts, don't really vanish, as any good magician will tell you. They never were there. And, as a Toronto fan (Egad) asked yesterday, "doesn't this violate rule 13 that says all sweaters must carry numbers at least 10 inches in size on front and back?"

"Therein," you can just hear Detroit's Jack Adams saying when he hears of it, "lies the secret of the Leaf's success. Even with a program we can't tell them apart when they're coming, only when they're going."

It may be that the riddle of the Leafs' rise from a fifth-place club last year to top rating this season lies in their ability to confuse. The number of new faces they introduced this year alone could do it. But it's more likely the confusion lies in the way they fly after the puck without regard to (opponent's) life or limb.

It's a safe bet the Leafs will be doing all out tonight for, with two weekend games, the ycould regain first place no matter what Montreal Canadiens accomplish in their single match. One point behind the Canucks, Toronto goes on to meet the last-place Chicago Black Hawks Sunday night.

The Canadiens meanwhile play their lone-week-end match as part of a three-contest Sunday night card. The Rangers, currently tied for fourth with Detroit, will leave Toronto hurriedly to play host to Montreal in New York Sunday night.

In the third match, Detroit is at home to Boston, five points behind Toronto in third position.

Sports Roundup

By JOHN D. HAMILTON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 14. (CP)—Grampaw's hockey teams will be honored this weekend when New York fans celebrate the 50th anniversary of the ice sport locally. . . . Actually there are two anniversaries for it was just 21 years ago that big Bill Dwyer's Americans brought the National League to the local scene. . .

The debut of organized hockey here occurred Dec. 15, 1896, when the St. Nicholas' Skating Club whitewashed the Brooklyn Skating Club 15-0 . . . The New York Times commented next morning: "Erskine Hewitt, who kept goal for the St. Nicholas team, almost froze because he had so little to do." . . . .

There were four clubs in that first amateur league—St. Nick s, Brooklyn, the New York Atheletic Club and the Crescent Skating Club . . . A 12-game schedule was played at a Brooklyn rink.

Gentlemen And Playres

From all reports, there was a good deal of snobbery in the early days. . . The St. Nick's Club was made up of college men—graduates of Princeton and Yale and Harvard—while the other teams consisted of boys from across the tracks . . . Henry W. Slocum, now 84, played "point" on the St. Nick's squad and was a noted tennis player. . . . In 1888 and 1889 he held the National Lawn Tennis championship. . . .

A graduate of Yale in 1883, Slocum believes he is the only St. Nicholas player now living. . . Seventy-year-old Arthur L. Randall played "point" for Brooklyn. . . . These two are scheduled to attend the ceremonies at which hockey's 50th birthday in New York is celebrated. . .

Another Old Brigade

Basketball, the Johnny-Come-Lately, of big-time sports, celebrated its 55th anniversary on Thursday, and it also has its old brigade . . . Basketball was invented in 1891 in Springfield, Mass., by Dr. James A. Naismith, a Canadian from Smiths Falls. . . The first game was played just 55 years ago on Thursday and four players on the original team still are alive. . . One is Rev. K. G. MacDonald, of Merigomish, N.S., 70-year-old graduate of the Y.M.C.A. college in Springfield. . . MacDonald believes "We were better players then than they are today. . . " . . . Another, William R. Chase of New Bedford, Mass., at 79 still tosses a swift ball. . . He says that the big thing that impresses him about the cage sport is the way the game has speeded up. . . Other survivors of that first team were E. S. Libbey of Redlands, Calif., and L. W. Archibald, of Warren, Pa. . . . "Bet they haven't kept their boyish figures like I have," Chase says proudly when he speaks of his still living teammates. "I'm 160—seven pounds lighter than I was 55 years ago." . . . He concedes, however, that he can't quite keep up with today's players. . . .

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

In one breath I call myself the best doggone bridge teacher in this whole cockeyed world. Before this thought has a chance to congeal up jumps a letter to expose my negligence.

They sent me this hand:

♠A 5
♥A Q 9
♦K 9 7 6 2
♣J 8 6

Among other things they said: "This hand started with an opening bid of one diamond and partner jumped to two hearts. What is the next bid by the opener?" My reply was two no-trump.

It seems I was a little crowded for time and did not explain why. Comes back a letter to ask me if I have changed the rules for choice of bids; T-A-N, takeout, assist, no-trump.

No. No. A thousand times no. Horse Sense rules never change. Each rule is fundamentally, mathematically, logically, naturally correct to start with. No reason ever to change.

However, it takes more than one rule to handle the billions of deals in a bridge pack. It stands to reason that T-A-N is not the only rule in a system; even a system as easy as Horse Sense.

Another rule says: Any raise in the number of the last bid by either partner shows another trick. To increase the last partnership number, a bidder needs a trick more than he promised before.

An opening one bid shows at least five tricks. This opener has exactly five tricks and no more. He promised that many by his opening. He has no sixth trick for a raise.

True, he has adequate heart support for an assist. Also it is true that an assist comes before a no-trump bid. But lacking enough tricks for a raise, he must not assist.

Consequently, if he must not assist, his only remaining bid is no-trump. He cannot bid a lower number. So, his bid is two no-trump.

If this is not clear, ask me questions, my dear.

JIMMY McFADDEN HEADING SCORERS

Montreal, Dec. 14 (CP)—Jimmy McFadden of Ottawa Senators, Quebec Senior Hockey League's leading goal-getter, still holds first place in the league scoring race, official statistics revealed tonight.

McFadden has scored 16 goals and assisted on the same number for 32 points, giving him a four-point margin over little Pete Morin of Montreal Royals who couples his hockey activities with the job of alderman in nearby Verdun. Morin has 10 goals and 18 assists and tops the league in the latter department.

Tod Campeau of Royals and Eddie Emberg of Valleyfield Braves share the next position with 25 points, followed by Jack Carthy of Shawinigan Falls who boosted his total to 23 in two recent high-scoring Shawinigan victories.

CHICAGO BEARS FAVORED

New York, Dec. 14 —(AP)— Chicago Bears were here today to tangle with New York Giants Sunday for the national football league championship.

The bears were 10-point favorites over the Giants to win their fifth title since the play-for-pay pigskinners first decided back in 1933 to bring East and West together in a post-season championship scramble.

It still looked like a 50,000 crowd and a record $185,000 gate for tomorrow.

It will be the fourth time the Bears and the Giants have met for the championship. The Bears won in 1933 and 1941, and the New Yorkers won in 1934.

AT THE CAPITOL — Gene Tierney and Cornel Wilde are starred in the psychological screen drama, "Leave Her to Heaven," 20th. Century-Fox's Technicolor filmization of the Ben Ames Williams best-seller. The picture, presented by Darryl F. Zanuck, which opens Monday at the Capitol Theatre, presents Gene as the madly jealous young wife who will stop at nothing — even murder—to keep her husband completely to herself. "Leave Her to Heaven" marks Miss Tierney's most important role to date, and also brings Wilde to the screen in his first modern romantic part. On the same program the sensational picture, "The House on 92nd. Street," starring Wm. Eythe, Lloyd Nolan and, Signe Hasso.

44 ARE ELIGIBLE FOR KING'S PLATE AT WOODBINE

Parkwood Stable at Oshawa Will Have Several Strong Contenders

By HARRY ECCLES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 14 (CP). — Of course, they won't all run. But there's an official list today of 44 horses eligible for the King's Plate next May.

And the list is enough to cause days of hot-stove debate over the merits of last year's Canadian-bred juveniles, the two-year-old racers, who step onto the race track as three-year-olds next May to contest the 88th running of the King's Plate, oldest continuously run race in North America—or South America, for that matter.

The race will be worth about $10,000 altogether, including the 50 guineas donated by His Majesty which give the Plate its name and perpetuates the gift of Queen Victoria when the race first was run back in 1860.

It's the feature of the Ontario Jockey Club's spring meeting at old Woodbine Park, run over one mile and an eighth. Colts carry 119 pounds, fillies are allowed five pounds. There is no gelding allowance.

The list of eligibles includes 17 colts, 11 geldings and 16 fillies, the cream of the Canadian crop. In the early spring they'll go in for rigorous conditioning. Half of them will be eliminated months before the race.

Plate Trial Again.

The remainder will be reduced during the last two or three weeks of intensive conditioning before the starter's bugle shrills out the call for the Plate trial, a fixture of recent seasons held a week before the Plate itself.

At the moment, all you can do is scan the list and figure which horses are real candidates, which are entered for stable prestige, which are entered to perpetuate an historic record of eligibility.

The Oshawa Parkwood Stable owned by Sam McLaughlin, won the Plate last year with Kingvarie. This year they've entered two colts and a filly, Moldy, Pelario and Lochiel Lass, and the latter, the filly, looked the best of the trio.

The Toronto Don Earl stable's Watch Wrack was the biggest money winner last season. His total was $5,960, $120 more than was earned in last summer's campaigns by Kanlee, the brown gelding entered by Harry Lahman of Toronto after it was purchased from the Giddings' stable.

Other standouts in the list, on basis of last season's racing, appear to be R. W. R. Cowie's filly Yellowknife, C. W. Lawson's Victory Chimes, J. V. Drumheller's Achtoi.

But they're all eligible.

BURNED FINGERS

CHAPTER 22

There was a tremendous piano, but nobody was playing it; nobody was there. A stout maid in striped blue and white was flourishing sheets about in the adjoining room. Stan went in there and Jennifer heard him ask her civilly if this was the customary hour to make up the rooms; he was giving up these rooms in a few hours. The girl responded that she would not be long.

Oh, it was damnable, thought Jennifer, to be a woman, to be subject to all these miseries of emotion! Stan's interest in her was merely an evidence of admiration and affection. She stood at the window and looked down at the square blown by a bleak afternoon wind. The sunshine was gone, a fog was creeping in. Nobody was going to lock doors on anybody, right here in a downtown hotel....Nothing to be afraid of....

"Here it is," Stan said, returning. Jennifer started, turned to smile at him. But her second look at the box he held in his hand blotted out the smile. It was a great oblong, heavy box of shiny black moire paper, with the name of the city's smartest furrier lettered on it in gold.

Stan, carrying it with both hands, took it to the table and lifted off the top. Jennifer saw layers and layers of silky tissue paper. Instead of approaching, she retreated with a suddenly crimsoning face.

"No—I don't want you to.... you mustn't...." she stammered.

"Mustn't what?" he said. "You've not even seen it yet. Why, what a face—you look scared!"

She probably did look scared, Jennifer thought, in angry self-contempt. Scared and young and silly and self-conscious and all the other horrible things she thought she had been outgrowing.

"You think it's a mink coat, and you can't accept it?" Stan said in his kindest, half-amused and half-affectionate voice. "No, dear. I knew you were too small a girl for that. It's only—well, I suppose I could have made it flowers or candy or some other truck," he interrupted himself to say regretfully, "but I saw it in a window and it looked like you, and it didn't cost anything like what you think it did!"

Put this way, it sounded simple. It sounded so natural that any girl who suspected it of sinister undertones would have only her own evil thoughts to blame. Jennifer came to the table and Stan lifted and spread on his two hands the llama wool coat. Dark brown and darker brown in a fine check, with two slim sables for the collar. Jennifer knew llama wool when she saw it, and sables too. She had not been more than a year at Vogelsang's without learning to recognize class; this was the very aristocrat of sport coats. Plain, with straight lines, belted in back, buttoned across with big buttons in front, wide-lipped pockets, luxuriant cuffs—a coat to wear for years, for always, doubling its silky fineness under one on the front seat of any car, snatching it from the closet for any house party or for a brisk walk in the country, for winter shopping for summer fogs, for movies and motor trips; one would be known by this coat. "Jennifer's here—that's

"It seems," Stan was murmering in an absorbed tone, his eyes only on the soft bulk of it as he turned it in his hands, "it seems that this fur doodad comes off: it unhooks here somewhere and you can wear it—what did she say? Would she have said 'with a plain tailleur? And brown accessories'? Does that sound right?"

"Quite right," Jennifer answered in a somewhat thickened voice. "It's too beautiful! I know where you got it; you got it from Rousseau's. But...." And she smiled at him with a little rueful shake of the head, feeling herself shaken and ashamed, but very sure. "But it wasn't in the window—that coat never got as far as any window," she told him simply. "And thank you, Stan," she went on a little breathlessly. "It was very kind of you. But I can't take it, and you know I can't. I feel that way about it. I'm sorry. I've known all along—or I know now, anyway...."

Awkward, childish, despicably stupid! To leave him standing there, to back toward the door through it with that surprised innocent, disappointed look of his haunting her.

Jennifer went swiftly along the endless hotel hall, saw an open door marked "Employees Only," went through it and ran down a flight of iron steps, another flight, and so on down and down to the alley, to reach the familiar garbage barrels and boxes of rubbish, trucks and freight scales and barrels of excelsior and tar paper.

Vogelsang's packing-room doors, great wings of corrugated metal, were still open. The shipping department worked on Saturday afternoons. Some of the girls in the fitting rooms would be working too; Jennifer fled upstairs.

The half-dozen busy women looked up as she came in; one or two nodded and smiled. Mrs. Lacey said, "Light that lamp will you, Jennifer? It's getting on to five."

Getting on to five! Jennifer made some pretense of brushing up in the dressing room; her heart was lead. She wanted to be alone and there was nothing to do except go home and face Betty and the girls....

Her breath stopped again. Betty and the girls are expecting her—had been expecting her for an hour at least. She had promised to get home in time to do their hair for the great excitement of dining downtown with Stanislaus Lichtenstein. Now there wouldn't be any hair-dos nor any dinner either.

She went slowly down to the street, walked with dragging feet. Her first terrors that Stan would follow her were forgotten. He had never had the slightest intention of following her! He had only wanted to make her a present in his simple European way—for after living abroad so long he really did think like a European. It had been Jennifer, not Stan, who had had the evil thoughts. It had been Jennifer who had gone old-maidish and fussy, immaginative and prudish.

Her face burned. She stopped short and said, "Oh-oh-oh," on a groaning note aloud in the street; walked on only to stop again with a sudden, Oh-oh-oh."

"Now you've ended one of the most interesting friendships of your whole life!" she said to herself scornfully. "I hope you're proud of yourself!"

Sick with self-contempt, humiliation, doubt, mistrust, she went into the house. Instantly she was swept into the whirl of a crisis. Faddy had fallen in the street and broken her wrist; Edna was tearfully telephoning for a doctor; Betty was distractedly attempting to quiet the screaming child while obviously in need of some quieting influence herself. Jennifer was ashamed of the relief that swept her whole being. When the doctor had telephoned and Faddy, rather pleased with herself, had been swept off with her mother to the hospital for X-rays and bonesetting, Jennifer, for Elna's benefit went through the farce of telephoning Stan, all the time holding down the telephone receiver, and took Elna to the movies. She wondered, sitting in the dark, her eyes fixed dreamily on the picture without really seeing it, her ears soothed by music she was not conscious of hearing how many troubled hearts had escaped into the sanctuary of the picture houses to regain through the pictured troubles of imaginary characters some perspective of their own.

The next day she told Betty about the coat. Betty listened attentively, shook her head wisely when Jennifer finished with a wistful. "Of course he only meant it in friendship, and I was an awful fool not to take it."

"You can't tell" Betty said. "I would be pretty sure he didn't mean that in friendship," she added dryly.

"You don't think so!"

"No, I don't think so. I tell you, Jen, you're too darned innocent," Betty said firmly. "you've got to just take it for granted that when a rich man—with a wife too!—asks any girl to come up to his room to see a coat and sables that he's going to give her just friendship, he wants one thing. And if she goes he expects to get it, and you might as well make up your mind to it. Girls going off with men on yachting trips, going up to their hotel rooms and never suspecting anything wrong—well, they're just not bright or they're lying," Betty summarized it firmly.

RON

Jennifer's face was aflame. For a while she played solitaire in silence. Then, jumbling her cards together suddenly, she said resentfully:::

"But it's not fair! Some girls can go into the smartest shops and order things, little French blouses and hats made all of little soft pink feathers, and they never have to stop and think what they cost! And they can go to the St. Francis Hotel to lunch and meet all their friends.... and wear orchids.... and be admired....and nobody thinks that's wrong...."

And with her words suddenly as confused as the cards themselves put her head down on her arms and began to cry.

Betty lowered the radio tone and watched her in helpless sympathy.

"If you'd once lay all your troubles on the Lord ..." she suggested mildly. Betty and Seely were church members now.

"Oh, bah-h-h!" was what Jennifer wanted to say. Instead she said nothing and began furiously to play her cards again. Presently she said sulkily, "You have troubles even if you do lay them on the Lord."

"No I don't have troubles," Betty answered. "None I can't bear—yes, and can't understand too. You see, I never should have Clint," she went on sententiously.

"Oh, Betty," Jennifer broke in impatiently, "how can you say that! He hit you."

"I know he did," said Betty. "But he'd been drinking and I'd been drinking. If I'd done what I should have done...."

She went into a long review of the past. Jennifer interrupted occasionally with an unconvinced sniff.

"I remember that Sunday morning," she said finally, "with crying in her nightgown and you two going it in the kitchen."

"That Sunday morning never should have occurred," Betty said solemnly.

Jennifer regarded her shrewdly. "Betty you've seen Clint lately?" she asked suddenly.

"Well, yes, I have," Betty admitted unwillingly.

"Where?"

"Well, he's been to the office—twice."

"Betty," Jennifer pleaded after a moment of silence, "you know that when a man once drinks—"

"Clint Slade hasn't touched a drop of anything for two years," Betty said briefly. She turned up the radio. Jennifer saw with surprise that she was offended. She cast about in her mind for a new topic.

"Nancy Newell was in today," she said. Betty brightened into immediate interest.

One of Vogelsang's most profitable customers was Nancy Newell, the pampered grandniece of rich, autocratic old Mrs. Giddings, of Giddings, Alameda County California. Nancy was a fat, affectionate girl who could be inveigled into almost any extravagance; a very little flattery a considerable amount of fitting, and Nancy would be delighted to buy the most expensive confections that ever came to the house. Two of the top saleswomen always handled sales to Nancy, or rather to the old autocrat she called "Granny," who sat watching the matter of Jennifer frequently was asked to do the modeling. Betty never tired of tales of the heiress.

On a certain hot morning a week after Stanislaus Lichtenstein had disappeared from Jennifer's scheme of things Nancy glanced at one of her superiors for permission; it was instantly granted. She had only to go and slip out of the luxurious evening gown she was displaying and into her own clothing.

When they reached the street Nancy announced somewhat haughtily that she was going first to Rousseau's. The name instantly brought Stan, the new coat, and the sables to Jennifer's mind, for the big box had borne the name Rousseau.

"I was with Edith Nieland " said Nancy, "and she saw this thing here and couldn't afford it, and I can afford it and I'm going to get! Granny can go as crazy as she likes afterward." And she gave an exultant laugh.

Jennifer followed her into the shop, went with her to the fourth floor, watched the obsequious saleswoman who brought out for her inspection the extravagant article. It was the soft checked coat of llama wool, the coat that could be doubled up and not crushed, the coat with the straight lines, the belt, the wide-lipped pockets, the luxuriant cuffs Jennifer had seen that coat before. She leaned far back in her luxurious velvet chair, tried to look at it as if appraising it.

TOMMY JAILS 8TH WIFE

Mamaroneck, N. Y., Dec. 13 — (AP) — Tommy Manville had his eighth wife jailed yesterday—their first wedding anniversary—on a disorderly conduct charge when she called at his luxurious estate which she had left last week after a series of spats. Police Chief Paul A. Yerick said Manville charged his wife "tried to break up the place" when he let her in.

Monotony of British Diet

Canadian Newspaperman Tells of His Experiences on Visit to England — John Bull is Still Pulling His Belt, Helping to Feed Hungry People of Europe

John Bull is still pulling in his belt. His noble paunch, beloved of cartoonists, took a beating when wartime shipping shortages drastically cut British food supplies. End of the war eased the shipping problems but brought a new train of even more frightful difficulties in its place.

Liberation of Europe made the Allies responsible for feeding its millions of near starving inhabitants. John Bull recognized his obligation. All through the war he had dreamed of the roast beef and Yorkshire pudding which would return with peace. They will return someday, but in the meantime, starving children in Cologne and in Vienna must be fed. Wistfully, Mr. Bull set aside his dreams and took in a few more notches in his belt.

When we arrived in England, my wife and I naturally interested in British food rationing. We were normal well-fed Canadians, who had done our share of grousing about food rations at home. We hadn't thought much about England, hadn't even bothered to send food parcels to our friends over here. Now we are plagued with guilty consciences. We wish we still had the chance now to give up Canadian meat and butter coupons so that more food could be shipped to England. We particularly wish we could walk into Loblaws tomorrow and buy a food parcel to send to England.

Here is the weekly food ration for a household of two people in England.

Bacon and ham: six ounces. That amounts to six small slices, we can each have one piece of bacon.

All other meats: 50 cents worth a week. That will buy a roast that will last for two meals with a little bit left over for hash.

Butter: Four ounces. (Butter costs ony 30 cents a pound.)

Lard: Two ounces.

Margarine: Eight ounces. And incidentally, English margarine is a very good substitute for butter, except on vegetables. When at supper last night I remarked "This margarine isn't as good as we have been getting—too strong." I was curtly informed that we were having butter as a special treat.

Sugar: One pound.

Tea: A quarter of a pound.

Shell eggs: Two a week (Sunday morning special.)

Jam: Half a pound.

Milk: Four pints. Children get a bit more.

Bread: Four two-pound loaves. Cakes must come out of this ration.

Canned and package goods: This is a complicated ration. All canned vegetables, fish and meat biscuits, soda crackers, dried eggs flour, cereals and soups come under it. Each person gets eight points a week. Various items under the ration have different point values. Fancy biscuits are 20 points a pound, salmon 10 points for a small tin, dried eggs, 8 points a packet (equivalent to 12 eggs).

A household of two people have to be very careful with the points ration. Two people between them get 64 points a month. This is how we spend ours last month:

One pound of fancy biscuits; two cans of beans; one packet of dried eggs; 5 small tins of sardines; one pound of oatmeal; 4 small tins of evaporated milk. All of which proves that a person can't live out of tins in England.

There's another little trick to points rationing. Bread ration is more than ample, and most people have some bread coupons left over at the end of the month. These can be converted into points for canned goods. When it was recently hinted that bread rationing would be discontinued, there were vigorous letters of protest to the newspapers. It there were no bread rationing, there would be no points to convert for purchase of canned goods, and no one liked this project at all.

Fish, fresh vegetables and fresh fruits are rationed. After you have eaten all your meat for the week, you eat fish. It is plentiful, fresh, but inexpensive. Fish baked, grilled, boiled, fried, roasted, stewed, kippered —I have reached the stage where I can't look a codfish in the eye without wincing.

Vegetables are plentiful and inexpensive. Potatoes cost less than two cents a pound. Only practicable fruit to buy are apples at fifteen cents a pound. Any oranges and bananas that come to England are saved for children. All other fruits are prohibitively expensive. A good-sized pineapple costs anywhere from four to six dollars, a single peach costs twenty cents, and grapes about two dollars a pound.

Coffee is unrationed, but good brands are hard to get. Ordinary brands contain a high percentage of chicory.

Except for such items as fats, meats and fresh fruit, English people are getting what they need to eat, although far from what they want. Great cause for complaints is the monotony of the diet. Necessities take up much of the ration that there is little left for frills, even if they were obtainble.

If you are sending food packages to England, don't concentrate too much on staples. Something a bit off the beaten track that will relieve the monotony is what is most needed. A package or two of figs or sultana raisens, a pound of really fancy biscuits a few tins of fruit juices preferably not the concentrated variety. Rice is unobtainable in England and would make a good meat substitute. And then exotic things like marashino cherries, olives, a tin of maple syrup. Jello and pudding powders, muffin mixes, Teablak —all extremely welcome. Canned meat is always well received, and if you can get some lobster—umm! And put in soap to fill up the corners. It is desperately short here. Good cheese is needed, and of course canned fruits are worth their weight in gold. You might try ending shortening in tins—it should keep Writing about food in England is a neat form of self-torture That's enough of it for now.

60,250 Dependents Canadian Soldiers Arrive in Dominion Since End of the Hostilities

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 14 — (CP)—The honeymoon is not over for the majority of European war brides who have come to Canada.

A Liverpool dispatch has announced the return to England of 50 disgruntled British brides who found themselves unable to cope with Canada's "high prices" and her housing and clothing shortages.

But immigration figures show these brides and the small groups of others who have returned to their home country represent only a minute portion of the number of those who have settled here and are liking it.

To Nov. 9, 60,250 dependents—40,889 wives and 19,361 children — had arrived in Canada. This number will be further increased with the arrival shortly at Halifax of the Samaria, carrying 800 more dependents.

Protest by Letter

Senator W. Rupert Davies, publisher of the Kingston Whig-Standard, who has been visiting in Britain, has protested by letter the Liverpool Post's reporting of the return of 'disillusioned' brides of Canadian servicemen.

He suggested: ". . . You try to find out something about the thousands of English girls who have come out to Canada during the past two years and who have found these happiness found there happiness and contentment."

Canadian immigration officials have blamed newspaper reports for spreading the idea that Canada has failed in her duty to brides from overseas. They suggest the spotlight should shine more on the satisfied newcomers.

Content with Homes

A recent survey in Vancouver disclosed that British war brides there, many of whom have been in Canada for more than four years, are content with their new homes, and are good-naturedly learning the Canadian way of life.

As for the brides who have "given up" — Canadian Welfare Council officials admit the housing shortage has played a "tremendous part" in sending them home.

"However we feel many of the disagreements which have resulted in some broken marriages are the result of normal differences found in the early years of any marriage and perhaps aggravated by the wife finding herself in the midst of living conditions new to her . . ." concluded Council officials.

From all Countries

Canada now has received 29,412 wives from the United Kingdom, and 15,592 children. From Holland have come 1,477 wives and 226 children; from Belgium, 529 wives, 79 children; from France 67 wives and five children; from other parts of the world, including Australia and the British West Indies, 60 wives, 16 children.

At the moment 6,117 wives and 1,882 children throughout northwest Europe — including those now on board the Samaria — are awaiting passage to Canada. Also looking forward to the trip are 26 wives and four children in other parts of Europe or the United Kingdom.

The Canadian Wives' Bureau overseas is sponsoring one more sailing to be made by the Aquitania Jan. 12. After that date servicemen's dependents must come to Canada "under their own steam" but may do so at the Canadian government's expense until the end of next June. Then they will have to pay their fare.

CUSTOM AND LAW DIFFER ON DRINK

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 14 (CP).—A woman's right to drink at the bar of a hotel with her menfolk is recognized by law in Australia but not by custom.

A custom of many years' standing decrees that hotel bars remain sacrosanct to men, and that women who want a drink at a hotel confine themselves to lounges and ladies' parlors.

Hotel managements maintain the custom by keeping women out of bars under the law permitting them to reserve the right of admission, and the custom has become so firmly entrenched in Australia that few women ever attempt to obtain, or think of obtaining, a drink at a hotel bar.

One Englishwoman, new to Australia, and ignorant of this custom, recently tried to get a drink in the saloon bar of Sydney's most fashionable hotel, as she would have done without trouble in England.

The barmaid refused to serve her, and called a uniformed attendant who escorted her to a nearby lounge.

The incident received great prominence in the Australian press because she was the first woman for many years who had tried to flout this custom, and it brought to the fore the strange anomaly between law and custom, also backed by law.

Much public and editorial discussion followed the incident, and this has since brought to light the fact that the custom may gradually be breaking down.

Newspaper surveys disclose that two of Sydney's 640 hotels have taken the revolutionary step of allowing women into bars. Both hotels are in the suburbs, and both are well-patronized by women.

One hotel permits women to use the public bar but only in off-peak hours, and the other allows them to use the saloon bar without condition.

Both hotel managers say the women are their best-behaved customers. One manager says: "They are so quiet you wouldn't know they were there. I'm going to give them adequate and suitable bar accommodation as a reward for their propriety when the building situation permits."

Evidence Completed In German Trial

Cobourg, Ont., Dec. 14—(CP)—Counsel will address the jury today in the trial of Judge J.C.M. German of Cobourg on charges of drunken and dangerous driving. Testimony was completed yesterday in the case which hinges on an accident Sept. 3 when an automobile driven by the judge allegedly struck and injured Mrs. Jeanne Taylor of Cobourg.

Police Chief W. J. Carey testified that Austin Maher told him the day following the accident that Judge German was drunk when he came to Maher's house the night of the accident.

Dr. Earl Watson, Professor of Pathological Chemistry at University of Western Ontario, said he did not agree with testimony by Dr. F. Hipwell that the judge was short the equivalent of 12 teaspoonsful of sugar in his diet for the diabetes the date of the accident.

"I calculated it was only five teaspoonsful short," said Dr. Watson. "I don't wish to discredit Dr. Hipwell's opinion but viewing the entire picture, I think that the data as to intoxication overshadows evidence as to insulin reaction. Summing everything up the balance favors the theory of intoxication. There has been no evidence submitted that Judge German's blood sugar was low."

Winnipeg Newspaper Executive Honored

New York, Dec. 14. (CP)—Grant Dexter, executive director of the Winnipeg Free Press, yesterday received the Maria Moors Cabot gold medal for outstanding contributions to friendship among peoples of the western hemisphere.

The award, one of three presented annually, was made at a special convocation at Columbia University. Mr. Dexter is the first Canadian to be so honored. Presentation also will include a silver plaque to The Free Press.

Speaking at a dinner given in honor of the 1946 winners, Dr. J. Bartlet Brebner, professor of History at Columbia, said the press in the United States suffered a dearth of Canadian news and opinion.

The American public suffers from "ignorant benevolence" toward Canada, Dr. Brebner said. Americans need "better knowledge" of Canada, more so than the "already well-informed Canadians".

Other winners being honored today are Miguel Lanz Duret, president and general manager of El Universal and El Universal Grafico of Mexico City, and Lee Hills, managing editor of the Miami (Florida) Herald.

Chiefs of Subdued Azerbaijan Prov. Taken to Tehran

Dissident Kurds Along With Country Back Under Control

By EDWARD CURTIS

Tehran, Dec. 16 —(AP)—The central government announced today it had ordered the transfer here of Dr. Salamollah Javid, governor-general of subdued Azerbaijan Province, and M. Sabostari, head of the Azerbaijan provincial council.

Premier Ahmed Qavam's regime said the brief military operations against the province bordering Soviet Russia had brought not only Azerbaijan but the dissident Kurds back under the control.

The War Ministry said it could neither confirm nor deny reports that more than 100 Russian immigrants into Azerbaijan had been killed by civil police and soldiers during the last three days at Tabriz, capital of Azerbaijan.

The newspaper Etash reported from Tabriz that Teheran security forces had reached Ardebil and found that tribesmen there had hanged or otherwise executed 40 adherents of the Azerbaijan semi-autonomous government, established during the last days of the Russian occupation of north Iran.

An Iranian army communique Sunday reported the surrender of Ghazi Mohammed, identified as head of the so-called "Kurdish Republic," and said this seemingly meant the end of the "republic," established in parts of western Azerbaijan by a truce with Azerbaijani Separatists centred in Tabriz, provincial capital.

Entered on Friday.

Government troops, which Iran's Premier Ahmed Qavam sent into the semi-autonomous province with the announced purpose of supervising a parliamentary election, entered Tabriz Friday and found that the regime of provincial "premier" Jafar Pishevari had collapsed and that Pishevari and other leaders had fled. The Tabriz government, hearing that its militia was losing, announced capitulation Wednesday.

Ghazi Mohammed pledged support to Qavam's government, the Iranian army announcement said.

13 Fatalities In East Canada During Weekend

(By The Canadian Press)

Two men killed by police bullets—one at Montreal and one at Toronto—were in today's roll of 13 weekend fatalities in eastern Canada. Traffic accidents accounted for eight other deaths and two were drowned. The 13th fatality was that of a man thrown from a load of pulpwood.

In Toronto 23-year-old Kenneth Peterson was fatally wounded by a shot from a policeman's gun as officers closed in on three men attempting to escape with loot in a safe-cracking at a downtown garage, where police recovered more than $70,000 in bonds and cash.

In Montreal a policeman fired three warning shots at James D. Lunan as he ran away from possible questioning. A fourth shot struck Lunan in the head, killing him instantly.

Five of the traffic fatalities were in Ontario. They included Pauline Leveque, 20, at Peterborough; Mrs. Gabriel Terries of Birmingham, Mich., who died at Windsor from injuries suffered in a previous accident; Miss Marjorie Bramner of Toronto, killed when a car overturned near Kitchener; Patrick Wilson, 87, killed by a motorcar in Toronto and Peter Grandmaitre, 18, dead of injuries suffered Thursday in a truck collision at Morrisburg.

Two other traffic fatalities were in Quebec. John Knox, 64, was struck by a car at Shawville and Aime Rivest, 24, was killed when a truck ran into the ditch just north of Montreal.

At Halifax an unidentified woman, aged about 55, was struck and killed by a car Sunday.

The two drownings were in Ontario and Nova Scotia. At Oakville, nine-year-old Allan Beauchamp broke through thin ice on a creek and was drowned. At Kentville, N.S., Earl Harrison, 36, was drowned Sunday night when his car plunged over a bridge on the Gaspereau River.

Harold Silver died at Digby, N.S., Saturday night from injuries received when thrown from the top of a load of pulpwood.

Commission Studies Atomic Control Plan At Closed Session

By FRANCIS W. CARPENTER

Lake Success, N.Y., Dec. 16 (AP).—The United Nations Atomic Energy Commission was said authoritatively today to be considering a report which thus far lacks the essential control features demanded by the United States as the price for yielding its atomic secrets to the world.

The Commission's delegates were to meet in closed session today at 11 a.m. E.S.T. as a committee to study the report which must be made to the United Nations Security Council by Dec. 31.

Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton is the Canadian member on the Commission.

An informed source who would not be identified said that the working paper now before the delegates included a statement on procedures, a section on findings and a third section on recommendations.

Instead of including a concrete plan for control, this source added, the section on recommendations deals so far only with relatively unimportant features, such as what types of inspectors are necessary in controls.

The delegates, who have been working steadily to frame their report, have avoided a vote on a control plan, it was said. There was no indication at present when or if such a vote would be taken, but the Dec. 31 deadline is pressing.

The United States has urged the delegates to agree unanimously on the control plan offered last June 14 by Bernard M. Baruch, American member of the Commission.

The general assembly in its closing days served emphatic notice that it considers the atom the most pressing problem. It adopted unanimously a world arms limitation resolution which charts the way to eventual outlawing of atomic weapons and other means of mass destruction.

With this mandate to hurry, the Atomic Energy Commission also was given a free hand in a specific paragraph, insisted upon by the United States, providing that the commission would not be hindered or tampered with by anything contained in the sweeping terms of the resolution.

Friday the 13th Proves Unlucky To Two Prospectors

Sioux Lookout, Dec. 16 (CP)—Friday the 13th proved unlucky for Robert McCombe, 45, and R. A. McDowell, 68, both of Sioux Lookout—but it might have been worse.

McCombe, an engineer and McDowell, a prospector, were driving a truck over the ice of Lake Sturgeon, 60 miles from there, when they broke through the ice. When they extricated themselves, the icy waters had swallowed their equipment, food and bed rolls. A plane picked them up the same day.

"I don't know how they managed to get out of the car before it sank or how they managed to get word to Sioux Lookout," said William Whitney, Toronto prospector whose property they were investigating. "I was told about it over the phone and no one knew how they managed to inform a private air transport company. Maybe they sent out smoke signals."

POLICE BULLET SLAYS ROBBER: $72,200 SAVED

Two Captured as Men Trapped in Darkened Garage After Burglar Alarm Tripped

Toronto, Dec. 16 — (CP) — Trapped by 30 policemen in a darkened garage, one man was shot to death and two others were captured Saturday night before they could emerge with $72,200 in cash and bonds they had just taken from a blasted safe.

Police said two constables opened fire when they were told — "Don't come closer or we'll kill you."

When the lights went on they found Kenneth Peterson, 23-year-old criminal awaiting trial on a charge of shopbreaking, dying from a bullet in the heart. He died before he reached hospital, his pockets stuffed with a miniature fortune in bonds.

His two confederates, Hubert Chappell, 26, and Jerry Gouldby, 21, were captured, the former as he fled to the roof of Harpham Brothers' Jarvis Street garage where the trio was surrounded after a ringing burglar alarm had brought a fleet of police cars to the scene.

Chappell and Gouldby appeared today in City Magistrate's Court and were remanded to Dec. 23. Bail was set at $10,000 for Gouldby. A request for bail for Chappell was refused on grounds he was released recently from penitentiary. Peterson's name also appeared on the court blotter in connection with the case but officials told the court he had been shot to death.

As police were forcing their way into the locked building the trio began hiding what loot they had not stuffed into their pockets, $10,000 in a lavatory, another $10,000 behind the battered safe.

One Tried to Escape

Officers said Chappell surrendered near the spot where Peterson was shot but Gouldby made his way to one section of the roof where he was overtaken by two constables who forced him under drawn guns to slide down a steel pipe into the arms of waiting detectives.

On examination at the morgue Peterson was found to be still carrying a number of shotgun pellets in his legs, suffered in a 1944 chase by police at Barrie where he was arrested on a charge of car theft, for which he was sentenced to two years.

When police fired, they said later, they were not aware whether the trio were threatening them with guns. But the men at bay were seen with "bars or guns" and the officers took no chances.

Entry to the garage was made through a skylight, the robbers avoiding setting off the burglar alarm system by keeping away from windows and doors. But they apparently tripped the buzzer while moving from the room where they had broken open the big safe with sledge hammers and chisels.

As far as could be determined immediately, all the safe contents were accounted for.

GETTING RID OF RED TAPE

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 16—(AP)—The United States government is getting rid of its red tape—at 28 cents a roll.

The War Assets Administration today advertised among the surplus items for sale:

"76 rolls tape, red, cullulose, unused . . . 28."

OLD RESIDENT DIES

Napanee, Dec. 16 (CP)—Napanee's oldest resident, Mrs Erastus Sills, 96, died Saturday, at the home of her daughter, Mrs William Ballance, at nearby Strathcona. Born in Richmond township, Mrs Sills has lived all her life in Lennox and Addington County. Her husband died 16 years ago.

There survive two sons, Wellington, Napanee, and Ellsworth of Toronto, and a brother, J. W. Hawley, also of Toronto.

Defies Superstition to Aid Science, Will Allow Killing of Albatross

Aboard the U.S.S. Mount Olympus, Dec. 16 (AP).—Defying superstition, the commander of the United States Navy's Antarctic expedition has given his consent to the killing of an albatross—even more than one, perhaps.

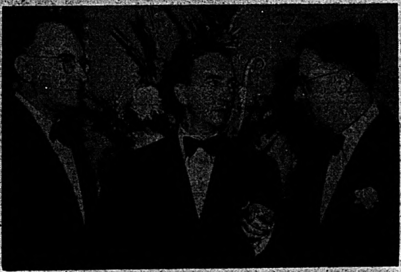
Legend has it that the killing of an albatross by a sailor brings immediate and lasting bad luck for the slayer, his shipmates and the vessel itself. It's in black and white in Coleridge's Rime of The Ancient Mariner.

But unworried by the mariner's hard luck tale, Admiral Richard H. Cruzen has ruled that albotross may be killed by expedition biologist Jack Perkins. Strictly in the interest of science, Perkins is laying his plans already.

Superstition won out over Perkins once before. That was on a similar trip in 1939.

What Perkins wants to find out first is whether an albotross will actually follow the ship for 1,500 miles, as some people claim.

WINNIPEG NEWSMAN HONORED



Among the winners of the Maria Moors Cabot gold medal for journalistic efforts to better relations among the people of the Western Hemisphere is Grant Dexter, executive editor of the Winnipeg Free Press. Feted at a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York, the winners are shown ABOVE, LEFT to RIGHT, Miguel Lanz Duret, publisher of the Mexico City El Universal; Lee Hills, managing editor of the Miami Herald, and Grant Dexter. The awards were presented at a ceremony at Columbia University.

Three-Storey Business Block Destroyed in Smiths Falls

Smiths Falls, Dec. 16 (CP). — Fire destroyed a three-storey business block in the heart of this railway centre of 7,200 population today with damage estimated at roughly $200,000.

Flinging clouds of dense black smoke and steam into a cold, blue December sky, the fire forced inhabitants of apartments in the two upper storeys to flee, some of them in night attire covered with overcoats, and in some instances firemen mounted ladders to bring children to safety. The smoke made their exits difficult.

Comparatively little was saved in two stores, a restaurant and a bookstore on the ground floor and in a dentist's office and the residences of eight families above as the block, long a landmark in this town, 43 miles west of Ottawa, was gutted. Its owner is W. H. Kerfoot of Smiths Falls.

Hundreds of persons from the surrounding areas hastened into the town as the flames and smoke advertised the worst fire Smiths Falls has known in years. The frigid winter air quickly turned the watered streets into ice.

Apparently starting at 10 a.m. in a wing of a candy kitchen, the flames spread swiftly through the Dominion Store and the A. and P. Store adjoining it and to a number of residences in the flats above. Firemen reached the scene within a few minutes and were able to hold the fire to the one brick and wooden block, bringing it under control at 11 o'clock.

Fire brigades from Carleton Place and Perth joined local firemen in their fight.

Police said all residents of the flats and staffs of the stores were evacuated without injury. But little was saved in the way of furniture or stocks.

The block was at the corner of Beckwith and Kersott streets in the heart of this town of 7,200 people. Had the flames succeeded in spreading they could have done considerably more damage to the business district.

Police said the blaze, although still rampant in one block, seemed to be confined there. They said it was impossible to make an assessment of the damage yet.

VAGRANCY CHARGE AGAINST LONDON MAN DISMISSED

Results Inconclusive When Greenfield Seen by Witnesses in Lineup

London, Ont., Dec. 16 (CP).—Allan W. Greenfield, 41-year-old suspect in the recent Toronto murder of taxi driver Alfred Reddish, was placed in his second police lineup today, it was learned, shortly before he appeared in court and was dismissed on a vagrancy charge on which he had been held since last Thursday.

Another Toronto cab driver, whose name was withheld, was brought to London this morning in a new attempt at identification but police declined to discuss the outcome.

Greenfield was arrested in the downtown apartment of a London woman by a squad of six London and two Toronto detectives. The woman was also charged with vagrancy but was released later.

Crown Attorney Claude Savage said he was not proceeding with the charge and then informed he had been instructed that the Department of Health had ordered further sanitarium treatment for Greenfield.

Greenfield left for Toronto before noon in the company of Deputy Chief M. N. Mulholland and Detective William Mace of that city, who had come to London again overnight in connection with the case.

On Friday Greenfield was viewed in a local police lineup by three Toronto witnesses in the Reddish slaying but results were reported at the time to be inconclusive.

The suspect had lived periodically in London in recent months and shortly before his arrest was a patient in Queen Alexandria Sanitarium here.

COHEN TO APPEAL

Toronto, Dec. 16 — (CP)—Notice of appeal was filed at Osgoode Hall on behalf of J. L. Cohen, prominent Toronto labor lawyer, who was convicted at Haileybury Thursday on a charge of assault and occasioning bodily harm to his secretary, Elizabeth Guernard. He was sentenced to 6 months. Bail was set at $1,000 on his own recognizance, and additional bail of $1,000 to be supplied by one or two securities.

JUDGE GERMAN GIVEN 30 DAYS AND FINED $250

Found Guilty on Charges of Drunken and Dangerous Driving at Cobourg

Toronto, Dec. 16 — (CP)—Arthur W. S. Greer, defence counsel for Judge J. C. M. German of Cobourg, today filed notice of appeal from Judge German's conviction Saturday on charges of drunken and dangerous driving.

The Judge was admitted to bail of $1,000 on his own recognizance and $1,000 in the form of two sureties. No indication was given as to who posted the sureties.

Judge German, 57, was sentenced Saturday to 30 days in jail and fined $250 on the charges which arose from an accident on the outskirts of Cobourg last Sept. 3 in which an automobile allegedly driven by Judge German struck and injured Mrs. Jeanne Taylor of Cobourg.

Cobourg, Dec. 16 — (CP)—Defence counsel was expected to apply in Toronto today for release on bond of Judge J.C.M. German, pending appeal of the 57-year-old county judge from his conviction and sentence Saturday night to 30 days in jail and a fine of $250 on charges of drunken and dangerous driving.

The 30-day jail term was mandatory on conviction of driving while drunk. The $250 fine was imposed after conviction on a second charge, that of dangerous driving. Both charges arose from an accident here Sept. 3 when the car allegedly driven by the judge struck and seriously injured Mrs. Jeanne Taylor of Cobourg.

In his closing address to the jury Arthur Greer, defence counsel, emphasized that Judge German should have been examined on arrest to determine whether he was suffering insulin reaction and not intoxication.

Crown Prosecutor Frank Wallace of Brantford said, "You should not feel sorry for anyone in this trial, but if you do feel sorry for any one I suggest that you feel sorry for the little Scotch woman in hospital, who has been there for 14 long weeks, leaving her family of six children at home."

The trial was held in Judge German's own court, but sitting on the bench was Judge Ainslie of Muskoka.

All-Socialist Cabinet Formed; Blum President

Paris, Dec. 16 — (AP)—Leon Blum has formed an all-Socialist cabinet with himself as president-premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs, it was announced today.

Andre Le Troquer, outstanding anti-Communist in the party ranks, was given the Communist-coveted post of Minister of National Defence, with control of the armed forces, at home, in the colonies and in the occupation zones.

The remaining key post of the "Big Three" ministries, that of the interior which controls police and home security forces, went to Edouard Depreux, another another moderate Socialist.

Pierre Olivier Lapie, a deputy from the Lorraine Department of Meurthe-et-Moselle, was named Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, directly under Blum.

The new cabinet-designate, which must await a vote of confidence by the National Assembly, was summoned to hold its first meeting tonight.

STOLE CAR FROM POLICE

Glace Bay, N.S., Dec. 16 —(CP)—Automobile thieves, who are becoming bolder and bolder in Cape Breton, reached a new high in effrontery last night when they stole a car belonging to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. But that wasn't all, as two mortified Mounties still sheepishly admit, for the theft left the two stranded.

PICK PANSIES IN GARDEN

Kingston, Dec. 16 —(CP)—December is half over and Christmas nine days away, but Portsmouth gardens are trying to present a summer-like appearance. Mr. and Mrs. John Marks of the nearby village reported Friday picking pansies in their garden, and said there were several buds ready to bloom.

Deep Snow, Ice Succeed Floods, Roaring Gales, Thick Fog in Britain

London, Dec. 16 (CP).—Britain this month had everything in the way of weather — devastating floods, roaring gales, spasmodic sunshine, paralyzing fog — now snow and ice.

Snow today lay deep in Suffolk and Southeast Kent. There have been heavy snowfalls in the Midland and Scotland. In London the temperature dropped to 26 degrees last night.

Yesterday was the coldest day of the winter — due to an icy air current from Siberia.

The Central Electricity Board announces that if the cold spell continues there will be cuts in the electricity supply.

Snow fell from the northernmost British Isles to Italy. Thousands of Germans had little or no fuel amid the bomb ruins of Frankfurt when the temperature dropped to one.

The cold wave came as Moscow reported that geographers had found the "world pole of cold"—a spot where the temperature had fallen to a record 94 degrees below zero — in a hitherto unexplored mountain section of Siberia.

A broadcast said the place lies approximately 63 degrees north and 143 degrees east.

A fuel shortage cut the power supply by five to 15 per cent throughout England and Wales.

Unusually early cold weather in Holland threatened to paralyze transportation on inland waterways. Snow fell as far south as Milan.

In France the average temperature was around 23 degrees. Paris had snow flurries.

UN Assembly Ends 54-day Session On Optimistic Note

Army Reducing Program Now up to Security Council

By JOHN A. PARRIS

New York, Dec. 16 — (AP) — The United Nations Assembly today turned over to the 11-member Security Council the monumental task of getting into motion a program for reducing the armies of the world and destroying the mass destructive weapons of war.

Ending an historic eight-weeks' session at 12:44 a.m. E.S.T., the top diplomats of 54 nations gave the world its first concrete hope for outlawing war and then headed for home after writing another chapter in man's long search for peace.

The next regular meeting will be held in New York next Sept. 16, but the Assembly may be called into special session in six months to approve world-wide arms reductions which the Security Council is to plan in detail.

The world's diplomats gave a solemn pledge that their countries would support immediate steps to reduce their armed forces and prohibit the use of the atomic bomb.

Select Site

This was regarded as the most significant achievement of the Assembly, which met in the United States for the first time and selected a Manhattan skyscraper site for its permanent home.

But almost equally as significant was the attainment of virtually unanimous agreement among delegates.

The Canadian delegation, headed by Hon. Paul Martin, was pleased with progress made. Mr. Martin said that "more progress was made toward effective international co-operation that could have been expected eight weeks ago."

Many observers felt that one of the main Canadian contributions was its recommendation to speed up procedure of Assembly work.

The Canadian plan was approved late Sunday night by a unanimous vote and a committee was set up to study speed-up methods.

Decisions Made

It was against a backdrop of a borderless map of the world—symbol of the one world that man is seeking that delegates in plenary session made these major decisions.

Double Drowning At Diamond Lake Near Sudbury

Sudbury, Dec. 16 (CP).—The bush country today yielded a story of a double drowning tragedy which occurred on Thursday of last week, when Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pishabo were drowned in Diamond Lake, Canton Township, about 20 miles northwest of Temagami.

Mr. Pishabo's body has been recovered. Details of the tragedy are lacking, though it is known that Pishabo, a trapper and guide, was en route to his trapping territory with his wife when it occurred.

The couple camped for the night at Diamond Lake. The drownings occurred as they were continuing their journey by boat. Search for Mrs. Pishabo's body has been delayed because lakes are partially frozen over and lake travel is practically impossible.

Stayed in Bed 18 Years Because He Was Tired

Paris, Dec. 16—(Reuters)—A modern "Job," reported to have stayed in bed for the last 18 years because he was "tired and wanted time to think," today was carried protestingly to hospital.

The 38-year-old man, whose name was given as Raoul Duvan, was found covered with sores and vermin and with hair and beard growing down to his knees. During the 18 years in bed he did not wash and wore the same clothes. He rarely ate and when found resembled a skeleton.

His parents lived in the same house and said he refused to be touched, moved or cared for.

Doctors reported he was sane and showing powerful intelligence.

FOUR KILLED IN AUTO COLLISION

St. Paul, Dec. 16 — (AP) — Four persons were killed in an automobile collision near St. Paul yesterday. The dead: Benjamin Newton, 40; his wife, Rita, 36; Robert L. Anderson, 30, all of Minneapolis, and Dan M. Peterson, 16, St. Paul. The Newtons and Anderson were in Newton's car while Peterson was alone. Police said the impact of the crash was so great the motor of one car was hurled nearly 800 feet.

Coal Production in British Zone

Hamburg, Dec. 16 — (Reuters)—Coal production in the British zone of Germany during November rose to 182,436 tons daily compared with 153,203 tons a day in October, statistics issued by the North German coal control disclosed today.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Dec. 16—(CP)—Synopsis: The weather is clear and cold this morning in Northern Ontario where temperatures are 10 to 20 below zero. Eastern Ontario is experiencing near-zero temperatures. More moderate temperatures prevail in Southwestern Ontario and snowflurries are still drifting off the lakes but the snowfall is light. A storm centred in South Dakota is moving rapidly eastward. As the storm approaches Southern Ontario there will be increasing cloudiness followed by snow and moderating temperatures.

ALL BELOW 17½ YEARS TO BE DISCHARGED FROM RESERVE ARMY

All boys below the age of seventeen years six months now serving with the Reserve Army are to be discharged immediately, National Defence Headquarters, Ottawa announced today. No figures are at present available but it is estimated that a considerable number of youths now training with the reserve forces are affected by the new ruling. Although there is no provision in the 1946 pay regulations for boy soldiers in the reserve, they have, until now, been paid at the rate of seventy cents per training day. It is understood there are very few boys of this age serving with local reserve force units.

WAR MEDAL RIBBON SOON AVAILABLE FOR ALL RANKS

The new War Medal ribbon will be available for general distribution within a day or so, Ottawa has announced. Although the ribbon has been available for some time in stores and tailor's shops across the country, and many members of the three services are wearing it, it has not been a general issue at unit quartermaster stores. All servicemen eligible for the ribbon will receive a free issue, including reserve force personnel.

RECREATION CLUB OF CORBIN LOCK CO. HOLDS ANNUAL PARTY

Vanity Fair was the scene of an enjoyable party the other night when the Corbin Lock Recreation Club held one of its entertaining functions.

There was sprightly music by "Nobby" Jones and his orchestra with Mr. Ray Reid acting as master-of-ceremonies. A large crowd enjoyed the affair which was featured by a few well-chosen remarks by Mr. L. E. McLean, general manager of the company.

Frank Wims was the lucky winner of the door prize.

PLOWMEN TO HOLD MATCH AT KINGSTON

The executive of the Eastern Ontario Plowmen's Association which met in Ottawa over the weekend, decided that the 1947 championship matches will be held at the Hemlock Park farms during October of next year. Col. A. H. Fair, owner of the farms extended the invitation to the executive to hold the annual competition on his property.

ROY BLAKELY MOVES TO LONDON AS BRIDGE AND BUILDING MASTER

Roy Blakely, East Moira St., general foreman of the Bridge and Building Dept., of the Canadian National Railways has received a well merited promotion being moved the first of the year to London as Bridge and Building Master at that terminal. The general foreman at London is being moved to Stratford, as Master, due to the retirement of William Locke, owing to ill-health. It is not known who will become general foreman at London.

Mr. Blakely joined the department in November of 1918 and has continually served with the Bridge and Building workmen and was appointed general foreman one year ago.

SMALL SUM TAKEN FROM GROCERY STORE

Thieves broke and entered the premises of the John Whalen grocery store at the corner of Victoria Avenue and Chatham St. Saturday night, according to police and got away with between $4 and $5 in cash, a quantity of cigarettes and some other articles.

SHOPLIFTERS ACTIVE IN VARIOUS STORES

Members of the annual light-fingered fraternity, Shoplifters Limited, are once again getting in their nefarious work, according to merchants of the city.

Walker's Hardware proved one of the weekend victims, persons unknown helping themselves to a half dozen white-handled knives.

A large department store reported that the fraternity in some cases has gone into business for itself through the expedient of lifting goods from shop counters and selling them to the public on the street.

Mason-Parker Co. Will Be In Full Production Next Year

Mr. Stewart Reilly, manager of the Mason-Parker Company of Canada, Belleville's newest industry states that his company expects to employ between 150 and 200 male workers when the company goes into full production early next year. The Mason-Parker Company will manufacture woodworking articles such as summer and juvenile furniture.

The company has been adding to its plant and according to Mr. Reilley expects to expand even more. "We are not a flash in the pan," he said, "and we expect to be in Belleville a long time."

It is expected the company will move all its woodworking facilities from its Toronto plant in the spring. Of fifty years experience the Mason-Parker Company has been operating in various parts of Canada and is a well-known established firm in its particular line.

Mr. Reilly said that in all probability, and if present plans materialize the company will be known in the near future as the McFarlane Woodworking Company in honor of the name of its founder. He was the manager of a Quebec plant of the firm prior to coming to Belleville a short time ago.

Seeks Entry Into Canada of Italian Officer Who Served With Hasty Pees

If the efforts of Lt.-Col. Albert Kennedy, D.S.O., former commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, prove successful, an Italian captain who served as a liaison officer with the Canadians in Italy may be able to bring his family to Canada.

Lt.-Col. Kennedy, one of the most popular officers of the regiment and who is well-known in the city and district's military circles, has approached immigration officials in Montreal in an effort to have the captain and his family brought to Canada in return for the Italian's enthusiastic service with the "Hasty P's."

Leo Giovanni Tarraborelli is the Italian's name and he served with the Canadian regiment during the fighting around Ortona and Cassino after being captured by United States forces.

All-Night Parking Must Cease Says Chief of Police

City police will clamp down on motorists who leave their cars parked all night on main city thoroughfares, Chief Walter Probert said today.

"In these days of uncertain weather when snow is liable to come down at any minute these cars are a nuisance to the operation of city snowplows. The practice of all-night parking on these streets has got to stop and in the future there will not be any more warnings."

Chief Probert also requested drivers to use caution when driving on slippery streets and thus cut down the accident toll. "Everybody seems to be in a hurry at this time of year but they should slow down when approaching crossings. Accidents will happen but with a little thought and foresight a great number of them can be eliminated."

Scotland Yard Inclined to Blame Prankster Trick.

London, Dec. 16 — (AP)—Scotland Yard, although seeming to lean toward a theory that a prankster was to blame for a "war of nerves" on police, nevertheless had bobbies deployed at strategic spots today in view of three new telephoned bomb threats — just to be on the safe side.

Successive calls last night said that bombs would be set off at Scotland Yard, at the Royal Artillery Records office in Kent, and at "a building" — not specified. The respective calls were to the BBC, the Artillery Office and the Central Post Office.

Squads sent to the places uncovered no indications of sabotage — and none had turned up in connection with like threats made against public buildings Friday and Saturday nights in the eerie atmosphere of a thick fog.

Mercury Takes Sudden Drop In this District

Ice-locked creeks and streams were a grim reminder this morning of the arrival of King Winter. The mercury plummeted to five degrees below zero during the night and sent partially warned householders scurrying to furnaces and fur coats.

While the stretches of the Moira River near the Canadian Pacific Railway bridge were partially open due to strong currents, coves and some other parts of the bay were covered with ice.

Snow crackled under pedestrians' feet on sidewalks during the early hours of the morning, and there was a decided nip to the air even after the sun had risen above the horizon.

Travellers returning from the Peterborough area on Sunday afternoon report a six-inch fall of snow in that district with miniature blizzards occurring. Near Madoc there was little or no snow with the same conditions prevailing in the Cobourg area.

Open water in the lower Moira sent clouds of vapor into the air with frazile ice rushing downstream in large quantities.

Thurlow Ratepayers Select Trustees

Last Tuesday the ratepayers of the Maple Leaf School (S.S. 16 Thurlow) selected Clifford Ray as school trustee for the Township School Area. Councillor Cecil Ketcheson very capably acted as chairman of the business session while Mrs. Percy Ray recorded the minutes. Moving pictures from the Belleville and District Film Council were shown by School Inspector R. H. Macklem and refreshments served by the ladies of the section.

On Wednesday evening the ratepayers of Bethel School, (U.S.S. 18 Thurlow) selected Eric Sayers as their representative on the Township School Area Board of Trustees. Mr. Macklem acted as chairman and Howard Wannamaker as secretary.

The ratepayers decided to have another meeting in the New Year to hear reports from the trustees, see educational films and to make their school (which was closed in June for lack of pupils) a community centre for the area.

It is expected that the men selected by the ratepayers will be nominated at the municipal elections this month. The new School Area Board of North Thurlow will likely consist of the following men: Mr Clayton Hall, Mr. Arthur Bates, Mr. Richard Cranston, Mr. Clifford Ray and Mr. Erle Sayers. The secretary of the board will be appointed early in January.

Still Rumored Princess to Wed Philip of Greece

London, Dec. 16 — (AP) — Sources close to Buckingham Palace and 10 Downing Street expressed a pleasure, off-the-record interest today in the possibility of Princess Elizabeth's marrying Prince Philip of Greece and Denmark — but emphasized that persistent rumors of an engagement still were only rumors.

Although the political aspects of such a marriage were debated heatedly in left-wing circles, where a strong faction disapproves of the present Greek Royal Family, there was a widespread tendency to "keep politics out of it" so far as possible and at the same time to play down Prince Philip's connection with Greece.

Such is the feeling of most Britons for the Royal Family that there would be strong support for the 20-year-old Princess' marrying whom she chose unless the government, whose approval is necessary, or a substantial section of the public regarded her choice as definitely unsuitable.

Britain's upper crusters appear solidly in favor of 25-year-old Philip, and the current outbreak of stories about him in the newspapers could be interpreted, in part, as a campaign to "sell" him to those elements of the population whose distaste for King George II of Greece might affect their feeling for his second cousin, young Philip.

BANCROFT

Aged Woodman Sustains Broken Leg in Accident

Bancroft.—James H. Seeney, eighty-two year old lumberjack, victim of a timber accident in a lumber camp forty miles north of Madoc on Saturday, can thank his rugged physique for the saving of his life.

The elderly man who resides near Stirling, was severely injured when struck by a falling tree which pinned him to the ground and caused a compound fracture of the left upper leg.

Bleeding profusely, the injured man was brought by sleigh through deep snow to Gilmore station after a two-hour struggle with deep drifts by two unidentified men.

Met there by Martin's ambulance, Mr. Seeney was given first aid by attendants and rushed to the Belleville General Hospital where he is under the care of Dr. G. H. Stobie.

Hospital authorities said today that the fine physical condition of Seeney enabled him to survive the large loss of blood and the harrowing trip through deep snow and by ambulance before he was safe in hospital. His condition today was said to be fair.

W.L. MacTavish Retires as Editor

Vancouver, Dec. 16 — (CP) — P. C. Galbraith, vice-president and publisher of the Calgary Herald has been appointed assistant publisher of the Vancouver Daily Province, O. L. Spencer, publisher, announced Saturday.

H. H. C. Anderson, formerly head of the Ottawa Bureau of Southam newspapers, has been appointed editor of the Province in place of W. L. MacTavish, whose retirement was announced.

John D. Southam, business manager of the Calgary Herald, will succeed Mr. Galbraith as vice-president and publisher of that newspaper.

'GO SLOW' POLICY FATAL

Redcap, Yorkshire, England, Dec. 16 — (Reuters) — Any "go slow" policy adopted, either by workers or managements, would be fatal now to the aims of full employment for the people of Britain, Charles Dukes, vice chairman of the Trades Union Congress, told the Cleveland labor party here last night.

PROBE DEATH OF RUSSIAN

Berlin, Dec. 16 — (AP)—Soviet authorities today were investigating the death of a Russian civilian who was found shot and robbed in a bomb ruin in the United States sector of the city early Sunday. The man's body, shot through the back of the neck and stripped of most personal belongings except clothing, was discovered by a German civilian.

He Didn't Halt! — Body of Kenneth Peterson, 21 (inset), shot through the heart by police when he attempted to escape from Jarvis St. garage safe-cracking Saturday night, is carried into City Morgue.

General alarm to downtown police cruisers was soon followed by arrest of Jerry Gouldby, 21 (left), hiding face, and Hubert Chapelle, shown in Court St. Police Station with Det.-Sgt. Edmund Tong.

Canned Fruits Are Lifted From Ration List

Ottawa, Dec. 16 (CP)—Canned fruit and cranberry sauce are removed from rationing, effective today, the Prices Board announced last night.

Sugar preserves coupons, normally used to purchase these items, now will be available for purchase of the other alternatives —jams, jellies, marmalades, honey, syrups and sugar.

A retail price increase of one or two cents a tin of canned salmon, depending on the size, has also been authorized by the Prices Board.

The board said the action was taken following a review of data submitted packers. "General cost increases" was reason given for the upped price.

Decision to remove the items from rationing, the announcement said, was in line with the board's policy of decontrolling as rapidly as conditions permitted. The action was made possible by "record or near-record" fruit packing this year.

The order freeing canned fruit, included sweetened and unsweetened varieties as well as those specially prepared [illegible]. [illegible] effect of the move will be to give consumers an increased amount of about 3 1-2 per cent of the remaining sugar-preserves alternative coupons.

The board also clarified regulations respecting pie fillers, fruit fillers, baker's fruit fillers and fountain fruits. Any of these items containing more than 66 per cent sugar content are classed as jams and therefore remain on the ration. Those containing less are removed from ration restrictions.

PASSED CHOCOLATE BARS

St. Thomas, Dec. 16 —(CP)— Constable Jack Bingeman of the city police force was in a dilemma Saturday. Proud father of a girl, he was about to pass around the traditional cigars — when he remembered that 42 per cent of his fellow-policemen were non-smokers. He did the honors with chocolate bars instead.

GEORGE RAFT SUED

Los Angeles, Dec. 16 — (AP)— George Raft, movie actor, was sued for $300,000 damages by a lawyer who alleged that the actor assaulted him when he attempted to recover jewelry which he said the actor had given a young movie aspirant.

WANTS CO-OPERATION

Windsor, Dec. 16 —(CP)— The postman's lot is not a happy one, without co-operation from his public, Windsor mailmen said recently. They told Postmaster John C. Kelley that household mail slots are only four inches long — but Christmas parcels are larger. Their suggestion for eliminating crushed parcels — women of the house who can't meet the mailman should leave a cardboard box on the porch. Then there wouldn't be any more crushed packages and folded letters.

MILLION FIRST PAYMENT

Manila, Dec. 16 — (AP) — Dr. Frank A. Waring, war damage commissioner, today handed President Manuel A. Roxas of the Philippines a cheque for $1,000,000 as the first advance payment by the United States for war damage to public property in the islands. A total of $620,000,000 will be paid, if a Filipino plebiscite next March approves a proposed equal-rights-for-Americans amendment to the Philippines constitution.

U.N. ASSEMBLY

1. Disarmament—

Unanimously, the assembly approved a resolution calling for a far-reaching arms limitation program, including the reduction of armed forces and the prohibition of the atomic bomb and other weapons of mass destruction.

2. Veto—

After a year-long fight, the small powers lost their fight to strip the Big Five of their special voting privilege in the Security Council.

The assembly, however, adopted a watered-down resolution urging the Big Five to use their veto power more sparingly so that the 11-nation security body's work would not be obstructed.

3. Spain—

In its first concrete proposal against Generalissimo Francisco Franco, the assembly recommended that all member nations recall their ambassadors and ministers from Spain and that the present Madrid regime be barred from membership in any organizations started by the U.N. or having relationship with it.

4. Trusteeship—

The assembly approved the transfer of eight League of Nations mandates to the U.N. trusteeship system, thus creating a 10-member trusteeship council to safeguard the interests of non-self-governing peoples and to try to see that they eventually achieve full independence.

The eight trusteeship agreements were Australian mandate in New Guinea; the New Zealand mandate in western Samoa; the Belgian mandate over Ruanda-Urundi; the French mandate over the Cameroons and Togoland; the British mandates over the Cameroons, Togoland and Tanganyika.

POOR TIME TO CARVE

London, Dec. 16—(CP)—When 16-year-old Jack Hamblin took out a pocket-knife and whiled away the few minutes of a streetcar ride by carving the seat, he picked a poor time. Sitting near him was Detective Len Hamilton, and the result of Jack's artistry was a $10 fine in court Saturday.

Roslin

Roslin —(Special)— Mr. Harold Hart spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hart. Sunday guests at the same home were Mr. and Mrs. John Hart and family, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Hart and Mrs. Breach.

Weekend guests at the home of Mr. Sam Stirk were Mrs. Sam Stirk, Mrs. Michie, Miss Mary Bland and Mr. Gerald Stirk all of Brampton.

The December meeting of the Eighth Line Guild was held at the home of Rev. F. C. Beazer and Mrs. Beazer on Wednesday evening.

A number of the young people have been busy practising a short play to be put on at the school Christmas tree.

The regular meeting of the St. Andrew's Helpers was held on Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Foote. The president, Mr. Donald Foote, was in the chair. The meeting opened by a hymn followed by a Scripture reading of the Christmas message taken from the Book of Matthew. Rev. MacMillan led in prayer.

The singing of "O Little Town of Bethlehem" followed by the Benediction brought the devotional period to a close. The remainder of the evening was spent playing progressive crokinole with six tables in play. Prize winners for the evening were Doreen Cross and Stuart White. Refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants and a social half hour enjoyed.

Husband, Wife Are Re-united

Val D'Or, Que., Dec. 16—(CP) — Pretty 24-year-old Monique Chailler of Montreal today was happily reunited with the husband who disappeared Oct. 9 and had been given up for dead — Paul Dumont Frenette, 31-year-old French Canadian writer.

Frenette had been believed drowned last October after coming to the Val D'Or district to build up his physique. Instead he had fallen on rocks and suffered amnesia, later taking a job in a mine where he was known as Luc Dutrec. More recently he has been a reporter on the Val D'Or weekly newspaper.

A few days ago he regained his memory and his wife and other relatives in Montreal were advised he was alive. His wife arrived here and last night said "It seems unbelievable, but you don't know how happy I am."

BIG EGG USED

Fort Erie, Dec. 16 —(CP)— Into the Christmas cake of Charles Tait, of this city, went an egg the other day which was a showpiece. Eight and a half inches long, with a diameter of five and three quarter inches, the egg weighed half a pound and consisted of two distinct shells. A complete egg floated in the white of the outside one, which was itself yokeless.

Greater Optimism

The New York meeting of the Big Four foreign ministers has ended on a note of greater optimism than has marked other meetings. Agreements have been reached on the treaties with the five satellite nations, Italy, Romania, Hungary, Finland and Bulgaria. The treaties with these nations will be signed early in the new year in Paris.

The next meeting will be in Moscow in March when they will deal with the settlement with Germany and Austria. The happier mood of late which has been so marked is seen as a favorable augury for the next meeting of the Big Four foreign ministers.

In the words of the British Foreign Secretary a great deal of misunderstanding has been cleared away in this fourth of meetings so far held by the foreign secretaries. The first meeting was held in London in the autumn of 1945.

Britain's Spirit of Enterprise

Britain has a new gearless car which has been shown in London, a luxury car, which is claimed to provide for the first time in the civilian motoring industry a form of transmission which eliminates both gear lever and clutch pedal. To start the vehicle the driver merely releases the brake and presses the accelerator. To stop, he has but to remove the pressure from the accelerator and apply the brake. With the elimination of the clutch pedal and gear lever, the number of main controls is reduced from five to three—steering wheel, accelerator pedal and brake pedal. There is a fourth control — a small switch with "forward" and "reverse" positions but this is operated only when the car is standing still. The six-cylinder car has a coachwork wholly of aluminum, built in a single unit, shielding not only the passenger accommodation but also the engine and radiator block.

Tandem Races in N. S. Wales

Bicycles built for two are remembered by the older generation as is also the occasional original bicycle which placed the rider on the top of a very high wheel while hanging down from the seat and frame was a curved bar of metal which reached down to the centre of a very small wheel. Not in decades has one of the latter been seen except probably in a collection of antiques. The arrival of the bicycle with wheels of equal size carrying hard tires put out of fashion the lofty machine. The low machine led naturally to the "safety" with pumped up or pneumatic tubes and tires. It was in the early days of these latter machines that the tandem bicycle came on the horizon.

The modern bicycle has never lost favor and today it attracts a large attention even in the age of swiftly moving cars and airplanes. It is used in delivery, for entertainment and exercise and very much for getting from place to place. The tandem or bicycle for two was in considerable vogue. Now in Australia they are staging a comeback, but it is in professional racing contests this year that they will appear.

For the first time in many years the professional tandem championship of New South Wales is to be held over a twenty-mile course in Sydney in the near future. Racing bicyclists are now busy assembling tandems and getting into training. About 20 teams are expected to compete.

Mention of tandem races in the Antipodes brings to memory of many the bicycle races which were held in the days long before the motorcar became anything like a common vehicle.

Entertainments of Yuletide

Already Christmas entertainments have begun and will continue for a couple of weeks. This is one of the events which does not wear out its welcome and lose interest through a multitude of such gatherings. Rather it gains in interest.

All children have the opportunity of enjoying these, so many are the gatherings of this nature where the child is the object of chief attention. The program is built for the boys and girls, but parents, and older brothers and sisters, and uncles and aunts and grandparents universally delight in them.

Churches, Sunday schools and day schools and many other organizations have made of this Yuletide and Christmas gathering something that gives joy, not only to the little and older boys and girls but has served to draw out the gifts of the child in entertainment. Countless numbers have taken part in readings, Christmastide measures and pageantry that please the eye and the heart, and in drills and readings and dialogues. Undoubtedly many have received their first inspiration for dramatic appearance at these events that cluster around about Yuletide.

There is a long and appealing history among English-speaking peoples leading up to this time. In the early and middle ages and in the spacious times of the Elizabethans and Tudors this period was held the highest of the whole year for young and old. For centuries it has maintained its position and it seems likely to be the plincipal season of the year in the hearts of boys and girls and men and women down the ages.

The Turkey

The turkey, which at Thanksgiving time and as Christmas and New Years draw near, comes to the attention of everyone, and which is considered the measure of delicacy, started its career as a domesticated bird on this continent, according to the Royal Ontario Museum News. The wild turkey was native to America and it was domesticated by the Indians in Southwest America. It was taken by the Spanish explorers to Spain and from there to England early in the sixteenth century and then made its way back to America, being brought by the early settlers from the British Isles.

Cold in The Wind

There are amateur scientists who argue that it is not any colder in the wind, but it is just that the wind makes it seem colder. That's one that has made many an evening's discussion grow warmer. Even in the balmy air of Windsor and Western Ontario, there are the amateur physicists who like to argue there is no real difference in the temperature in the wind.

Along comes Dr. George E. Hall, President-elect of the University of Western Ontario, to blow a blast of chill wind down the necks of those who argue the wind makes no real difference. An expert in research on varying temperatures, Dr. Hall cites the case of heavy bombers flying at high altitudes.

At between 33,000 and 35,000 feet, the temperature remains at about 55 below zero. But, in the windstream the temperature of the guns will get down to as low as 90 degrees below zero, or almost twice as cold. Many men were losing their fingers by taking off their gloves to try and correct gun stoppages with their bare hands.

That 90 below temperature is just about as cold as it feels on a windy January day at the corner of Portage and Main in Winnipeg.

First of Firsts

Great moments of time sometimes accost us on the sidewalk or in the street car, comments The Christian Science Monitor. For instance, a happy young face looked up at a passing stranger the other day and jubilantly announced: "I dressed myself for the first time today." Then the honest little heart remembered and added, "But my father helped me on with my shoes."

So opens a new career of independence, perhaps of a distinguished judge, a leader of industry, or a celebrated statesman. Sometimes it seems too bad we can't know all the big things that are happening around us. If history only gave previews of itself, then the press of today could carry such news as this "Johnnie Smith, who will be President of the United States 50 years hence, for the first time put on his own clothes complete today."

POWER

Power to rule is deadly stuff.
Few are granted sense enough
To possess it and to stay
Wise and humble, day by day.
Given the might, and given the chance,
Men are prey to arrogance.

Ever since the race began—
'Tis the history of man—
Power is evil's greatest source.
Kings have fallen in its course.
Good at first, when rightly used,
It is vicious when abused.

Something seems to blind the eyes
When to awful power men rise;
Deafens them to mercy pleas;
Maddens them to snatch and seize;
For some selfish end they seek
Makes them brutal to the weak.

Power to rule upsets the mind,
Checks all thought of being kind;
Leads to judgments harsh, unfair.
Power is mankind's deadliest snare.
Few for long, the truth to tell,
Have the sense to use it well.
Power to rule is deadly stuff.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why is rice thrown at newly married couples?

The almost world-wide custom of throwing rice at newly married couples is believed to be a survival of the ancient religious practices of the Hindus and Chinese.

Nowadays rice throwing is little more than a joke played by friends and neighbors of a new bride and bridegroom, but long ago the practice was a serious gesture.

In the Orient rice is the emblem of fecundity and fertility and throwing it at a newly wedded pair symbolized the wish that they might be blessed with offspring.

The custom still retains some of its original significance in India, where the bridegroom throws three handfuls of rice over the bride and the bride then returns the compliment.

Southern Europeans often throw fruits, especially figs, at newlyweds, while the Romans used wheat and nuts for the same purpose.

In more recent years it has become common on such occasion to use bonbons or confetti instead of rice or other grain.

In 1939 church authorities in Sweden pointed out that rice is a valuable article of food and suggested that rose petals be thrown at newlyweds instead.

"Eliminate the custom of throwing rice at weddings," recently advised more than a thousand Protestant ministers in New York in the interest of food conservation.

When a newspaper photographer was married at Chattanooga, Tennessee, in 1940, his colleagues threw some 500 old flashlight bulbs at the pair in place of the conventional rice or confetti.

Communists Take Chungyang After 15-Month Siege

Peiping, Dec. 16 — (AP)—Chinese Communists today captured Chungyang in Central Shansi province after a 15-month siege capped by an offensive so fierce the defending garrison, in an obviously erroneous message sent in all seriousness, radioed that it thought the Reds were using atomic bombs.

Chungyang's defenders were out of food and ammunition as a result of one of the longest Communist sieges of the civil war.

Government forces in Manchuria at the same time claimed a victory over the Communists at Pulantien, Kwantung peninsula border town, after several days of fighting. Some 6,000 Communists were reported routed.

The Nanking newspaper Hsin Min Pao published an unconfirmed account of fighting of "unprecedented seriousness" between government and Chinese Communist troops at the very outskirts of Russian-occupied Dairen, major Manchurian port, and added that for the second consecutive day "unmarked planes" participated.

There were no reports that any Russian troops were involved in the reported clash; nor have there been any reports that government forces, near Dairen, have tried to enter the city.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

PELLAGRA

Pellagra, pronounced pel-lay-gra, just as digitalis is pronounced digi-tay-lis (sometimes I suspect Webster does it just to sell more of his books), is not a clear-cut disease but just a name applied for convenience to certain manifestations of nutritional deficiency, the most familiar of which is a characteristic roughness of the skin (Italian pelle, skin, and agro, rough), particularly over the backs of the hands and wrists, on the face and neck. These skin manifestations resemble and are often mistaken for skinburn or long-lasting effects of skinburn.

Other common "symptoms" of pellagra are diarrhea and dementia—in fact some physicians think of the three D's as the classic picture of pellagra—Dermititis (the skin lesions), Diarrhea and Dementia. In many instances only one or perhaps two of these manifestations may be evident, all three perhaps in extreme or long neglected cases.

Dementia means any deterioration in mental health or soundness, from the mildest degree of odd or peculiar behavior or attitude to utter delirium or madness. I don't know about you, but abstractly I have no doubt, I'm a little nutty along this and that line at this moment, although like most demented individuals, I think my ideas are reasonable and everybody else is crazy. For you see there is no clear-cut dividing line between sanity and insanity—a lot of us are wandering around in the no-man's land just waiting to be tagged and hustled away to the appropriate institution or shown the way back home.

In a large hospital in Birmingham, Alabama, according to McLester (Nutrition and Diet in Health and Disease) "an appreciable number of pellagrins gave a history of having been admitted to the hospital in previous years with the diagnosis of neurasthenia." That may give you some idea of the degree of "dementia" in the ordinary case of pellagra. Just what "neurasthenia" is, I have never been able to learn—if it is anything more than a convenient way for the doctor to duck the diagnosis.

"Indigestion," poor appetite, loss of weight, general weakness, lassitude, irritability, depression, forgetfulness, palpitation, vertigo or dizziness, insomnia, flightiness, etc., are frequent manifestations in pellagra. Infants and children are subject to this nutritional deficiency as are adults and old folks.

Lack of, or inadequate amount of niacin (formerly called nicotinic acid) in the diet is the chief cause of pellagra. Foods that supply the most of this vitamin are liver, fresh meat, plain wheat (not refined wheat products), peanuts. Dried brewer's yeast (non-fermenting, does not produce gas) contains more niacin than any food, and quantities of it (from a heaping tablespoonful to three to four tablespoonfuls daily, in iced milk or eggnog) are valuable in the treatment of pellagra.

For a long while physicians suspected something in corn caused pellagra. Only in the last few years have nutrition chemists found that corn contains an anti-vitamin, a substance that antagonizes or neutralize or inhibits the physiological action of niacin and hence renders the individual who eats much corn or corn meal products more likely to suffer from manifestations of pellagra (niacin deficiency) that he or she would be if rice or wheat were used in place of corn or corn meal in the diet.

There, children—almost anybody should be able to develop a touch of pellagra by adopting the symptoms or complaints I have mentioned—that thought haunts me always when I try to tell what everybody should know about this borderland between health and disease.

Police Guard Negro After KKK Note Received

Redwood City, Calif., Dec. 16—(AP)— A midnight deadline to leave town or be hanged—threatened in a red-stained note signed "KKK" — passed without incident today for a 22-year-old Negro war veteran whose home was burned last week.

Police guarded the Negro, John T. Walker here, while his wife and two children remained out of town as a precautionary measure.

Police said they believed a "crank" wrote the note to Walker and another to Mrs. R. A. Isenberg of Palo Alto, Calif., chairman of a Fair Play committee handling the race problem and aiding Walker in obtaining donations to rebuild his house.

The notes, the anonymous author said, were "signed in human blood from a 'nigger' who has just been hung."

Mrs. Isenberg was warned she would be tarred and feathered if if he did not leave town, said: —she did not stop helping Walker.

The note, threatening Walker with hanging "on a fiery cross" "The klan is on the march. We burned your house to let you know that your presence is not wanted among white people. You should know we mean business."

BOY SLAYS POLICEMAN

Washington, Dec. 14 —(AP)— A 14-year-old boy, police said last night shot and killed one policeman, fired upon two others and then shot himself in the head as the climax to a running gun battle in mid-town. The officer slain was Richard Taylor, 47, detailed to check the molesting of parked automobiles. They boy, identified as Townsend Annes, was in hospital in afair condition.

Marmora

Marmora (Special) — Circle 1 of St. Andrew's Women's Association held a successful bake sale in the Legion Room of the Memorial Hall on Tuesday afternoon.

W. I. MEETING

The December meeting of Marmora Women's Institute was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. A. H. Connor, with the president, Mrs. W. D. Lavender occupying the chair. The attendance of members and visitors numbered 26. The meeting opened in the customary manner. Response to the roll call was "Ways of Giving Christmas Cheer." Under general business a donation was made to the Hospital for Sick Children, and Mrs. Gordon Jarvis was appointed Home Economics convener, replacing Mrs. F. R. Wells. A dramatic reading "The Pageant of the Kings" was given by Rev. E. M. Cadigan. This was followed by community singing with Mrs. L. R. Rundle at the piano, a choice of numbers being familiar Christmas hymns and carols. Next followed the special feature of the meeting. Three British war brides, who were present, each received the gift of an end table from the Branch. They were Mrs. Phillip Bell of Marmora Township (formerly Mary Barnard of Highbury, London); Mrs. William Knox (formerly Leah Simpson of Sheffield), and Mrs. James Watson (formerly Elizabeth Young of Glasgow, Scotland). Three other brides absent for the presentation were Mrs. D. McQuigge, Mrs. Dan Vesterfelt and Mrs. William Revoy. In making the presentations the president read an address of welcome, a copy of which was presented to each guest. The recipients thanked the Institute for their gifts.

A Christmas duet, "Softly The Night is Sleeping," was contributed by Mrs. P. Gray and Mrs. L. R. Rundle, by special request. The sale of Christmas gifts brought in by members was directed by the president.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem. Refreshments were served. The January meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Thomas Hannah.

Burrs

W. A. ELECTS OFFICERS

Burr's — Mrs. Allan Carter opened her home for the December meeting of the W.A. on Thursday afternoon. Despite the almost continuous downpour of rain there was a large attendance. Visitors included Mrs. (Rev.) Lane, Mrs. Vincent Hicks, Mrs. Earl Caughey, Mrs. Clayton Carter and Mrs. Clarence Vincent. Following the devotional period business included the gift of five dollars to the Hospital for Sick Children and five dollars to the M. and M. Fund. The treasurer's annual report was read and showed the year's receipts to have been most gratifying. Rev. Mr. Lane took charge of the election of officers, and the following were elected. Mrs. Frank Osterhout as president; Mrs. Floyd Huffman, first vice-president; Mrs. Douglas Harnes, second vice-president; secretary, Mrs. Donald Osterhout; treasurer, Mrs. Gerald Brooks; Mrs. Keith Blakely, Mrs. Cyrus Fulford on buying committee; Mrs. Merritt Adams, new member on visiting of the sick committee; Mrs. Leon Caughey, new member on program committee. Mr. Lane suggested an expression of thanks to the officers of 1946. The program consisted of two Christmas readings given by Mrs. Allan Carter and Mrs. Ross Burr. The January meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Leon Caughey. A Christmas greeting was received and read from Mrs. Rosa Anderson.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Brooks attended the Farm Forum meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Green, Victoria, on Monday evening.

Mrs. Giles and pupils are practising a Christmas pageant and other numbers for the S.S. concert which will be presented at Burr's church on Friday evening, December 20.

Mr. Lane asked that a special offering be made at the next two Sunday evening services for the restoration of churches destroyed during the war.

Mr. and Mrs. Basil Ainsworth and Mrs. Will Ainsworth, Toronto, were Thursday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Burr.

Interment of the remains of the late Mrs. David Duetta, of Picton, took place at Burr's Cemetery on Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Cyrus Fulford spent a recent afternoon with Mrs. Herb Taylor, Bowerman's.

Have you heard what they say . . . about CHEVROLET?

"The writer is pleased to advise that we are well satisfied with the performance of the 1946 Chevrolet, now in our taxi operation. The question of economy has been discussed and on straight country travel, our car proves very efficient with an average of 24 miles per gallon."
F. M. Schmidt, Regina, Sask.

"It is by long odds the easiest car to handle I have ever had. We had no trouble getting through the heavy traffic in Toronto, New York, Boston, Chicago and Cleveland. It gave solid riding comfort and after travelling 600 miles one day, my wife and I did not feel the effects of the journey in the least."
W. J. Haley, Vancouver, B.C.

"I have been driving a 1946 Chevrolet Coach bought in August of this year. During this time I have travelled through the United States and Canada and am impressed with the speedy and reliable action of the brakes on my car."
Harold Lovers, Examiner for Driver's License, Winchester, Ontario.

FROM DOCTORS . . . from farmers . . . from businessmen . . . from salesmen . . . from fleet operators and men who drive a car for pleasure . . . from purchasers in every trade and occupation across the Dominion, comes praise of the new 1946 Chevrolet. To them, Chevrolet's Big Car Quality at Lowest Cost . . . its flawless, trouble-free operation . . . is an actual, proven fact. Throughout their letters, expressing their pleasure and complete satisfaction in the new Chevrolet, certain phrases occur again and again—"Unbelievable that such performance can come from a car as low priced as Chevrolet" . . . "The best Chevrolet yet" . . . "Definitely worth waiting for".

A PRODUCT OF GENERAL MOTORS

* Excerpts from actual letters on file at General Motors dealers across Canada.

"I could name many features but will mention just one—quality of workmanship. When particular people drive with me, they invariably remark: 'You have a beautifully finished car.' I think so too and advise my friends to drive a Chevrolet and combine beauty with freedom from trouble."
J. H. Irving, Lethbridge, Alta.

"I am happy to tell you that my 1946 Chevrolet has given me outstanding performance as regards riding qualities and engine durability. In my opinion the 1946 Chevrolet is far superior to anything else in its price class."
E. K. MacDougall, Winnipeg, Man.

"I am very much pleased with the 1946 Chevrolet Sedan purchased from you several months ago and have driven it over 28,000 miles. The performance of the motor, ease in driving, and quality of material and workmanship makes my Chevrolet a splendid car for taxi business."
Jack Carter, Dartmouth, N.S.

"During our fifteen years in the taxi business, we have never had any car or cars that operated so economically and trouble-free as these 1946 Chevrolets are doing."
Emile Lauthier, Ltd., Montreal, P.Q.

"The men using these cars cover every part of the Dominion, taking in many of the back roads which are gravel or dirt. In sending out a questionnaire, as to the performance and comfort in driving their new Chevrolet cars, the replies all have been 'SWELL'."
I. R. Ross, The Hobbs Rubber Company of Canada Ltd., Drummondville, P.Q.

"The two-tone job that I have, dove grey body with royal blue top is smart. I have operated the car for six months and I still get a big thrill when people stop and stare. It is amusing to hear the remarks people make about the car, and they are all in its favour."
R. Knight, Winnipeg, Man.

"The mileage at the present time on our Master Chevrolets varies from 9,800 to 27,000 miles. I thought you would be interested to know that despite the heavy loads carried and many changes in operators, we have yet to have any mechanical breakdowns."
E. E. Carter, Carter Transportation Limited, Toronto, Ont.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. W. T. Nugent, 211 George Street, who went by plane to Saskatoon, Sask., recently to attend the funeral of her granddaughter, will be returning by plane on Thursday, accompanied by her daughter, Jean, and husband, Mr. Borden Joynt, of Saskatoon.

Mrs. Annie Rose, of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, has returned to the city to spend some time at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. P. Cornell and Mr. Cornell.

WEDDINGS

GOOD—CAVANAGH

At three-thirty o'clock on the afternoon of Dec. 7, Bridge Street United Church was the scene of a very pretty, but quiet marriage ceremony, when Miss Patricia Alice Cavanagh, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Cavanagh, of Belleville, became the bride of Mr. Robert James Good, of Kingston, Ont., with Rev. D. C. Amos officiating.

The bride was charming in a street length dress of turquoise blue wool, matching headdress and elbow length gloves. Her corsage was of American Beauty roses.

Miss Enid Mills was the bride's only attendant, wearing a dress of sequin trimmed grey wool, and a corsage of yellow roses.

The groom was assisted by his brother, Mr. Horace Good, of Kingston.

Following the ceremony a buffet tea was served at the home of the bride's parents.

For a journey to Montreal and other Eastern points the bride chose a green ensemble with brown accessories, and a brown fur coat. After their return Mr. and Mrs. Good will reside at 36 Ellice Street, Kingston, Ont.

Women's Activities

AIKENS' W.A.

3rd Sidney—The singing of Christmas carols opened the December meeting of the Aikens' Woman's Association which was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Stanley Spafford.

The Scripture lesson Luke 12 8-20, was read by Mrs. Fred Moon. A reading, "A Declaration of Faith at Christmas", was given by Mrs. Wm. Bush and prayer was offered by Rev. H. H. Hillis.

During the business session, the Secretary, Mrs. Pearson, reported an average attendance of sixteen members at the six dinner and five afternoon meetings that had been held. The total receipts had been $174.98 with a balance of $145.60 on hand, was reported by Mrs. Marshall, the treasurer.

Mrs. Saylor reported the Red Cross funds as being $28.40 and it was decided to send $25.00 to the Belleville Red Cross, Mrs. C. McMullen reported for the Flower Fund.

A Christmas message from the Rev. T. W. Jones, the Moderator of the United Church, was read by Mrs. E. Hubble and other Christmas readings were given by Mrs. S. Marshall, Mrs. W. Bailey and Mrs. S. Spafford.

A piano solo "Christmas Chimes" was rendered by Mrs. Lee Grills and was enjoyed by all present.

Before the benediction was pronounced, Mrs. Wilmot Bailey expressed appreciation to the retiring President, Mrs. K. Jones, for her valued services throughout the year.

As President, of the W.M.S., Mrs. E. K. Hubble spoke of the fine spirit of co-operation shown by Mrs. Jones at all times, and especially on occasions when it had been necessary to hold both meetings on the same day.

The following officers elected for 1947, at the November meeting were duly installed by the pastor, Rev. H. H. Hillis:

Past President, Mrs. Kenneth Jones; President, Mrs. Murney Jeffrey; 1st Vice President, Mrs. S. Spafford; 2nd Vice President, Mrs. Gordon Willman, Treasurer, Mrs. Sam Marshall, Secretary, Mrs. Orliff Pearson; Pianist, Mrs. H. Hamilton; Flower Convener, Mrs. C. McMullen; Press Secretary, Mrs. E. Hubble; Buying Committee, Mrs. Ken Jones, Mrs. Bailey, Mrs. Marshall; Red Cross Conveners, 2nd Line, Mrs. Fred Moon and Mrs. C. McMullen; 3rd Line, Mrs. S. Westover and Mrs. Hubble; Red Cross Treasurer, Mrs. Saylor; Committee for Homes Mrs. Perry Hamilton, Mrs. Chas. Smith; Auditors, Mrs. McMullen, Mrs. Spafford; Nominating Committee, Mrs. Ken Jones, Mrs. Bailey and Mrs. Pearson.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Spafford and Miss Ruth Spafford and a social half hour enjoyed.

WEST HUNTINGDON W.M.S.

The W.M.S. of the United Church at West Huntingdon, was held on Thursday afternoon at Mrs. Geo. Cook's home. The president opened the meeting with a hymn and pryer.

Mrs. A. Wright red the Scripture and Mrs. Sandy McCurdy gave a reading.

During the business period it was decided to hold the annual congregational meeting on Jan. second, at the Orange Hall, with the ladies serving supper.

Mr. Stewart gave the Christmas mesage urging all to keep Christ in Christmas and in their hearts.

Mrs. J. S. Wilson gave a reading "A White Christmas".

Mrs. John Moorcroft took charge of the Candelight Service with the following members taking part, Mrs. E. Post, Mrs. C. Wright, Mrs. Howard Cooke, Mrs. F. Hammond, Mrs. F. Wilson, Mrs. Mac Sarles, Mrs. F. Ashley and Mrs. C Green who sang "Silent Night, Holy Night".

"Joy to the World" and prayer closed this interesting meeting.

After the meeting Mrs. John Moorcroft was presented with a bedspread and blanket for her daughter, Kathleen, who was recently married and has moved away from this neighborhood. Mrs. Moorcroft thanked the ladies for the gifts.

The hostess served refreshments.

HAZZARD'S W.M.S.

The Christmas meeting of the Hazzard's Woman's Missionary Society was held in the church which was nicely decorated for the occasion.

Mrs. M. Howard, the president, led in the singing of carols.

Mrs. S. Moorcroft read Philip Brooks' "Everywhere, Every-

The prophecy from Isaiah, concerning the birth of Christ was read by Mrs. R. M. Broad.

A candlelighting ceremony followed in which candles were lit by ladies dresses as women of India and by those representing Canada. The leading thought of the program was that "the Light of Christ in the hearts of Canadian women might not be hidden and that, through them others might come to know Him, both at home and abroad.

COLLEGE HILL GROUP

The December meeting of the College Hill Woman's Group met at the home of Mrs. Storms, Grier Street, with twenty present.

The meeting opened with the National Anthem, followed by the theme song and Christmas carols. Miss Wilder gave an interesting reading entitled, "Bethlehem".

Two of the new Lieutenant-Governor's eleven grandchildren pose with Mr. and Mrs. Lawson. Constance, seven (left), and Joan, five, are daughters of Lt.-Col. and Mrs. Thomas Lawson of London.

During the business period it was decided to discontinue war work.

Christmas gifts were exchanged, and some were presented to members who are leaving the community, also a gift to Mrs. Tebworth and to Mrs. Rose.

The meeting was adjourned and refreshments served by the hostess and her assistants.

CONSECON W.A.

Consecon Women's Association held its last meeting for the year 1946 in the vestry of United Church on December 10, with the President, Mrs. Eldon Walt, and eleven members present.

Treasurers' reports were given for Group 1 by Mrs. Lela Weeks; for Group 2 by Mrs. V. Elmy; for Group 3 by Mrs. E. Rathbun.

This was followed with the Treasurer's report by Miss A. Johnson, who stated that the total cash handed to her for the year 1946 was $859.49.

Correspondence, Mrs. M. D. Arthur.

BETHANY W.M.S.-W.A.

The December meeting of the Bethany W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. G. Kerr, with a large attendance. The program was in charge of the President, Mrs. F. Easton. The opening carol, "Gentle Mary Laid Her Child", was followed by a devotional service conducted by Mrs. C. Embury, taking the form of a candlelighting ceremony.

A reading was given by Mrs. Embury and the Scripture lesson read by Mrs. H. Pound. Readings were given by Mesdames W. Mifflin, F. Walker, P. Osland and R. Ritz, after which each lady lit a candle.

The offering was dedicated and the meeting closed with singing, "Joy to the World".

The December meeting of the W.A. followed, with the President Mrs. J. Ritz, in charge. The Christmas story was read by Mrs. W. Clarke and Mrs. J. Ritz led in prayer. A solo contributed by Mrs. V. Hamilton was greatly appreciated. Christmas readings by Mesdames P. Osland, S. Cooley, G. Sills, D. Tummon, G. McPherson, D. Martin and W. Mifflin, and a final reading "Uncle Kees' Christmas Rebellion" given by Mrs. G. Hamilton were all much enjoyed. The closing hymn was "While Shepherds Watched their Flocks by Night" followed by The Lord's Prayer.

CANNIFTON W.A.

The December dinner meeting of Cannifton W.A., was in charge of Mrs. H. Whitfield and Mrs. Arthur Holgate, with a good attendance to enjoy the delicious menu served.

Mrs. Harry Farnham, president, conducted the meeting following, opening with "Holy Night" played as quiet music by Mrs. Herbert Empson, and the carol "O Little Town of Bethlehem". The Biblical Christmas story was read by Mrs. Williams, and a timely poem contributed by Rev. J. R. Trumpour.

During the business period it was reported that 27 quilts had been completed during the year. It was decided that the W.A. pay for the tuning of the church piano.

TRENTON

Miss Winemaster Seriously Hurt In Car Accident

Trenton — Miss M. G. Winemaster, 26, of 128 Dunnington Drive, Toronto, suffered deep face lacerations and abdominal injuries when she was thrown against the windshield of the taxi in which she was a passenger when it figured in a collision with another car on Saturday night between Trenton and Brighton.

Miss Winemaster who was attached to the Women's Division of the R.C.A.F. at Trenton, and had just received her discharge, was on her way to visit friends at Campbellford before returning to her home in Toronto.

A second car suddenly came out of a side road on to the highway and collided with the taxicab which was driven by Ivan Lidster, John Street, Trenton, and owned by Graham's Taxi. The impact landed the second car upside down in the ditch on the opposite side of the highway. The driver escaped injury but a dog in the car was badly injured and had to be destroyed. Lidster suffered three broken ribs and Miss Winemaster was taken by Weaver's Ambulance to the R.C.A.F. Hospital, Trenton. Both cars were damaged badly to the extent of about $1,000. Provincial Constable Doug. Wilson of Colborne investigated the accident.

Escapes Injury.

On Friday last Michael Perrow of 98 Division Street, Trenton, escaped injury when he backed up his car at a fast rate of speed and skidded across Front Street near Division, mounted the curb, crossed the sidewalk and overturned in a vacant lot. Perrow's car was damaged on the right front and rear fenders, running board, and the right rear wheel was bent.

A car owned and operated by Carman Ruttan, R. R. No. 1 Codrington, was stopped waiting for the traffic light at the intersection of Dundas and Front streets. A truck, also waiting for the light, directly behind the Ruttan car, was driven by Clifford Westlake of Front Street, Trenton.

When the light changed Ruttan started to cross the intersection when he observed a boy on a bicycle crossing the street against the red light. He applied his brakes to avoid striking him and the truck struck the rear of his car damaging the trunk. The grill guard of the truck was also damaged.

Hot iron tape is a help when rips are to be mended. First measure the rip and cut a piece of tape a little longer and wider than the size, rounding the corners. With a good hot iron apply the tape, shiny side down, on the rip. Hold the iron down for seven minutes, rotating it slowly, then lift it off and let the patch cool for one minute.

C.G.I.T. Groups In City Hold Vesper Service

At five o'clock on Sunday afternoon Canadian Girls In Training groups from all over the city met in Victoria Ave., Baptist Church for a mass meeting, and the annual candle-lighting ceremony in connection with the "National Christmas Vesper Service"; with four girls from Senior and Intermediate groups conducting according to the printed "Order of Service" prescribed by the National Girls' Work Board. They were assisted by a three-part chorus of more than twenty-five voices under the able leadership of Miss Phyllis May, with Mr. Dorland Houston at the organ console.

During the service this chorus sang very effectively the well-known carol "Holy Night", unaccompanied.

An appreciative audience from the several churches represented in the C.G.I.T. groups filled to capacity the seats on both sides of the centre pews, which were reserved for the accommodation of the girls and their leaders; and all enjoyed the presentation of the sacred Christmas story as told in Scripture and in song; as well as in the beautiful legend of St. Francis of Assissi as he visited the shepherds on an Italian hillside one Christmas night.

The lighting of the tapers before the recessional hymn "Hark the Herald Angels Sing", and the singing of "Taps" in the soft glow of the candlelight made a fitting finle to a vesper hour thrilling with the reverent spirit of true worship.

Rev. H. O. Eastman dismissed the congregation with the benediction.

New Soapless VEL Speeds Baby's Laundry
by Frances Thompson
noted homemaking authority
Here's good news for mothers! The new soapless VEL helps speed the daily job of washing baby clothes. Why?—because it quickly lifts out dirt and if you don't use too much (rather less than you would of soap) it makes rinsing easier, leaves no soapy residue to irritate tender skin.
VEL IS MILD AND GENTLE
VEL is so mild and gentle it is safe to use for all babies' garments—napkins included. Unlike soap, VEL contains no alkali so it is kind to your hands. Its very slight perfume keeps baby clothes fresh and sweet.
VEL FOR BABY'S WOOLENS
Right from the start use VEL for baby's woolens. You'll be delighted how soft and fluffy they keep. Always wash and rinse woolens in mildly warm water. Don't rub or twist, just squeeze. A nurse who specializes in the care of infants writes, "I find VEL is the grandest thing ever for washing baby clothes. It saves so much washing and rinsing time. It leaves napkins so white and soft, woolens so fresh and fluffy I'll never go back to using soaps again."
DIFFERENT FROM SOAP
Don't expect VEL to act like soap—it is not soap but does an equally good or better job of cleansing. Always put VEL into basin, tub or sink first—then run water over it. You'll probably find that the light, foamy suds will not remain but every drop of your clear VEL solution has amazing cleaning power. VEL dissolves instantly and completely even in lukewarm water—and it's less likely to make you sneeze! Many users find that leaving clothes to soak in VEL while other work is being done makes washing with VEL even quicker and easier.
"VEL" is a registered trademark of the COLGATE-PALMOLIVE-PEET CO. LTD.

"Bravo, Sir Archibald! And I'd believe you if you said you fought through a jungle full of lions for that malty-rich, sweet-as-a-nut flavor of Post's Grape-Nuts Flakes!"
"And of course, Gentlemen, we must remember that Grape-Nuts Flakes are not only marvellously delicious—they supply carbohydrates for energy; proteins for muscle; phosphorus for teeth and bones; iron for the blood; and other food essentials."
"Those two golden grains wheat and malted barley are combined in Grape-Nuts Flakes. They're specially blended, baked and toasted for flavor, crispness, easy digestion."
"Let us repair to the breakfast room and shoot a giant economy package."

Canadian Writer's Earnings From Book May Hit $200,000

New York, Dec. 14. (CP)—Paramount Pictures, Inc., has purchased the movie rights to a novel now being written by Lionel Shapiro, formerly of Montreal, at a price which may run to $200,000.

The price consists of an option for $10,000, $65,000 on completion and a maximum of $200,000 depending on sales.

The book, entitled "Sealed Verdict", will be a story of post-war Germany, including the War Crimes trials.

Shapiro, a native Canadian, started newspaper work with the Montreal Gazette, came to the United States for that paper in 1934 and was is war correspondent in the Italian campaign. He covered the Western Europe campaign for his present employers, the North American Newspaper Alliance, and for MacLean's magazine, Toronto.

He now is in New York completing his novel which will be published in late Spring or early Summer by Doubleday and Company. He will return to Europe in January to resume his assignment.

Variety, New York theatrical magazine, comments:

"Par's (Paramount's) anxiety to get the book is evident from the fact that it gave $10,000 as an option on the basis of nothing more than an outline." It adds that Doubleday "expects it to be one of the top sellers of 1947".

Canadians Best Informed and Most Sympathetic of Foreign Observers

New York, Dec. 14 (CP)—Hon. Ray Atherton, United States Ambassador to Canada, said today that "Canadians think more about America's relations with the rest of the world than Americans do themselves."

In a speech prepared for delivery before the annual meeting of the Life Insurance Association of America, Mr. Atherton said that for three years he has been learning how America looks to Canadians.

"Canadians and Americans are so much alike that we sometimes mistake Canadian comment on American affairs for domestic comment, even as we are tempted at times to discuss Canadian affairs as though they followed the same pattern as our own," said Mr. Atherton.

"In reality, Canadians are the best informed and the most sympathetic of foreign observers. They are also the most assiduous and concerned outside observers of America. Living among Canadians one's admiration for Canada, one's pride in America, one's perspective on the whole North American scene are all greatly augmented. One becomes, perhaps for the first time, completely aware of the full entity — North America."

"The one surviving American-Canadian debate during these last years has been the question of which country is contributing most to world needs on a per capita basis," said Mr. Atherton.

Understand Better.

"Canadians think more about America's relations with the rest of the world than Americans do themselves. They understand better than we the impact of America on the world. At the same time they cannot share in that mystical self-absorption which is uniquely and unalterably American.

"We have had, are having, and may continue to have trouble with strikes. The gigantic and unprecedented job of reconverting the world's most highly developed, most complicated, most powerful and most free economy, from total war to peace in a little over a year—this has not been easy, or uneventful.

"The actuality of America today is hopeful enough, promising enough, productive and rich and strong enough, but this picture is not always projected abroad.

"We cannot expect all nations to adopt our own estimate of ourselves, to absorb our own moods, to accept our own criteria. What we can do is to make it our business to see that there is a minimum of distortion in the projection of the picture of America—a minimum of excuse for distortion."

Theatres Advance Opening Night Curtain for Convenience of Critics

By FRED KERNER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 14. (CP)—New York theatregoers are not unlike their ilk everywhere—they rarely arrive on time and always delay the first act curtain. This, of course, annoys everyone backstage. But on opening nights, the late curtain is a particular peeve to critics of the morning newspapers.

So to give them a little more opportunity to create their panning, the league of New York Theatres asked producers to raise the curtain at 8 o'clock on opening nights.

The latest curtain during the past two weeks has been 8.10, which gave the newspapermen time to write their critiques and also see the whole play for a change.

It didn't last long, however. Last week's two openings were divided on the new plan. Ruth Gordon's "Years Ago" abided by the early curtain while "If The Shoe Fits", a new musical, remained conventional.

The new Ruth Gordon play could easily be called "Life With Ruth Gordon's Father"—with appropriate apologies.

In reality just another of the "Father" type opus, for sentimentalists "Years Ago" strikes a heart-warming chord. Undoubtedly Miss Gordon's relatives will enjoy at retrospective peek at her family's mode of life, and so will thousands of relatives of everybody.

This purely personal nostalgia is a tender Valentine to the authoress' own adolescence. It probably is the first auto-biographical play in theatre history.

"If The Shoe Fits"—a discouraging modern interpolation of the Cinderella story—is uninspired, unimaginative and produced on a lavish scale. The cast principals are Florence Desmond, the British comedienne, and Joe Besser of vaudeville fame, both of whom rise above the tedious level of the material to give enjoyable performances.

"State of the Union" which has been running more than one year lost one of its best laughs last Saturday matinee due to the coal strike in the U.S.

The laugh invariably is provided when Ralphy Bellamy reads a headline at the beginning of the second act. This headline is changed at each performance to keep up to the minute with the latest news flashes.

When Bellamy reached for the paper last weekend and read "Lewis Calls Off Coal Strike" the audience couldn't make up its mind whether he was kidding or not. They reached with an excited buzz, but the laugh didn't come.

Curtain calls: Elmer Rice's "Dream Girl" closes today after a year . . Ben Hecht's "A Flag is Born" also closed this week. . . The revived "Show Boat" rings down the curtain in three weeks after an 11-month run . . . .

"Love Goes To Press" slated for New York in January, takes a one-week stand in Toronto starting Dec. 23 . . . Maurice Chevalier, trying a person appearance concert tour soon, will open in Toronto.

Latta

Latta—Mrs. Alice Moore, of Belleville, spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. Wilder.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Dent spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. N. Wilder.

Mrs. E. Denyes spent a few days with her sister, Mrs. Frank Parks and Mr. Parks last week, returning home on Sunday with Mr. E. Denyes.

The Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Clarence Hall on Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Denyes attended the Warden's banquet and Cheesemakers' banquet recently.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Wilder have received the news that Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wannamaker have a new baby boy, born December 3rd, in Belleville General Hospital.

Those who motored to Peterborough on Monday were Mrs. Raymond Sullivan, Mrs. W. Elliott, Mrs. A. C. Campbell and Mrs. Ross Lott. Mrs. Charles Beatty also went with the girls' club.

Several were listening in and heard Mrs. W. Elliott speak from Peterborough radio station; also Helen Beatty and Mary Reid at 4.30 p.m.

The W.M.S. met at the home of Mrs. E. Denyes on Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. W. Elliott, Mrs. Clarence Marshall and Mrs. Arthur Hall called on Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hamilton on Wednesday afternoon. They are both under the doctor's care.

Sorry to report Mr. Ed. Emerson on the sick list.

Mr. Vernon Emerson left last week for the U.S.A. to visit relatives.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Lancaster (nee Helen McCreary) on the arrival of a baby girl in the Belleville General Hospital.

Almost Sold Out of Chocolates

Hastings, Sussex, England, Dec. 14 — (Reuters) — Candy shops here were almost sold out of plain chocolate today because at a "Save Europe Now" meeting last night hundreds of bags of candy, donated out of personal rations, were collected to be sent to German children for Christmas.

Many Christmas Trees Offered

The offering of Christmas trees predominated on the local produce market as a blustery wind kept a great many vendors and customers away from the market.

General price asked for the Christmas trees was $1 each although smaller trees were quoted at 75 cents and larger one at $1.25.

On the inside market eggs were slightly easier with a few vendors asking but 45 cents for 1st grade eggs, while others still asked 50 cents the dozen. Mediums were quoted as much as five cents per dozen below the Grade "A" prices.

There was a fairly large offering of fowl on the market with chicken predominating with top price being 42 cents. A few turkeys were in evidence at 48 cents the pound.

On the vegetable market potatoes were quoted at $1.50 per bag; onions 40 cents per half peck and sauerkraut 15 cents per quart. Winter vegetables were quoted at customary prices.

Ring packed McIntosh apples brought $3.40 per hamper with No. 1's quoted at $3.25 with top grade Spys fetching the same price. Spys by the basket brought 85 cents with Snows at 55 cents. Pippins sold at $2.75 the hamper.

One load of dry cordwood was quoted at $15 the cord, while a few farmers offered young pigs at from $6 to $7 each.

REINFORCE SEARCHERS

Seattle, Dec. 14 — (AP)—Reinforcements of searchers and a doctor, all expert skiers, were asked today as the operations base was shifted from Longmire to Paradise, high on the shoulder of Mount Rainier, in the search for a Marine Corps transport plane, missing since Tuesday afternoon with 32 men. The transport was en route here from San Diego, Calif.

Bad weather continued to hamper ground and air searches.

NEGRO CONVICTED

Mineola, N.Y., Dec. 14 — (AP)—Ward Beecher Caraway, 22-year-old Negro chauffeur-butler, last night was convicted of first-degree murder in the robbery-slaying of Mrs. Marjory Church Logan, wealthy Long Island resident. The verdict carries a mandatory death penalty.

Tweed

Tweed (Special) — The December meeting of the Women's Association of St. John's United Church was held in the Sunday School room on Thursday afternoon and conducted by Mrs. C. Barnett, in the absence of the president, through illness. After a few items of business the program put on by the Country Group was opened by singing several Christmas carols. The story of the Babe of Bethlehem as taken from the Bible was read in unison followed by prayer by Rev. Mr. Sisco. A beautiful reading "When David Followed the Star" was given by Mrs. Lincoln Elliott. A duet by Mrs. W. A. Beatty and Mrs. Constance Sharpe was omitted owing to unavoidable circumstances. After the program, the officers for the year 1947 were installed by Rev. Mr. Sisco as follows:

President, Mrs. Claud Barnett; first vice-president, Mrs. W. A. Beatty; second vice-president, Mrs. Wallace Johnston; secretary, Mrs. Frank Bowers; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Stanley McCullough; pianist, Mrs. John Sager. The group leaders and several other offices will be filled at a later date.

In accepting the office of president for the coming year, Mrs. Barnett read a short verse as a prayer, "Guide me in the selfless way, so I may give a life of service and a heart of love. Thus would I live." The attendance was very good in spite of a heavy all day rain.

Mrs. George Robinson has returned from Thomasburg where she has been visiting Mrs. Ed. Way and Mrs. James Way.

Mrs. John Reeves, who has been very ill, is now recovering.

Miss Lily Logan had a bad fall at her home on Thursday morning and was quite badly shaken up.

Mrs. S. A. McCarey, District Deputy, Rebekah Lodge, visited Peterborough Lodge on Tuesday December 10th.

Mr. Emerson Hodgins attended the Feed Dealers' Convention in Toronto during the week.

Mrs. Peter LaBerge, of Toronto, is spending a few weeks with her daughter, Mrs. A. Trudeau.

3rd Sidney

3rd. Sidney (Special) — Mrs. Wm. Hamilton spent Tuesday with Mrs. Harley Hubble.

Mr. and Mrs. George Denike, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Denike, Eudora and Douglas were dinner guests on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Les Ketcheson, Thurlow.

Rev. H. H. Hillis spent the dinner hour on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Orliff Pearson and family, 2nd. line.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Moon and Carl and Mr. and Mrs. Bid Westover spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Westover and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas McPherson.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Westover, Mrs. Harley Hubble and family, Mr. Wm. Bowers, also Miss Phyllis May and Miss Eileen Easton, of Belleville, spent last Saturday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hay at their home near Rossmore.

Centenary Young People's Union held their meeting last week at the home of their president, Mr. Ross Marshall. The meeting was in charge of the convener of Missions, Mr. Burton Hubble. Miss Barbara Hamilton was soloist for the evening's program.

Mr. and Mrs. Kingston and son, Mr. Leslie Kingston, of Oak Lake, spent Thursday with their daughter and sister, Mrs. Wilfred Johnson and Mr. Johnson.

The Women's Association held their December meeting Thursday at the home of Mrs. S. W. Spafford. Despite the rainy weather there was a good attendance to enjoy the Christmas program that had been prepared by Mrs. Fred Moon and Mrs. Bailey.

14 PLAYERS, THREE OFFICIALS WILL MAKE TRIP

Do Not Rank With Many Teams in Country But Will Do Their Best

By KEN MCTHERALL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Edmonton, Dec. 16 —(CP)— For the first time in hockey history a junior team — Edmonton Canadians — will represent Canada in the world championship to be held at Prague next February.

Canadians' acceptance of the invitation, politely but firmly declined by Calgary Stampeders, Hamilton Tigers, St. Michael's College of Toronto and Winnipeg Monarchs, was announced last night by Dr. W. G. Hardy of Edmonton, president of the International Ice Hockey Association. Fourteen players — still to be chosen — and three team officials will make the trip.

The announcement removed one worry of Canadian hockey officials — what team would agree to represent the Dominion —but the answer to the second question — will the Edmonton team win the world title for Canada — will have to await the series.

It's no reflection on the Canadians, beaten by Monarchs in the Western finals last spring, four games to one, to say they don't rank with Calgary Stampeders, Allan Cup champions; Hamilton Tigers, senior finalists, and probably several other senior teams.

Not Too Strong.

Nor are they considered as powerful as the 1945-46 edition of the two junior teams which turned down the Prague trip. This year's Canadians may not be as strong as last season's. They dropped a 7-5 decision to Edmonton Capitals in a city league game Saturday night.

It's a safe bet that Stampeders, Tigers, Montreal Royals and possibly a dozen other senior teams would have an easy time bringing Canada another hockey title. If a junior team does it, so much the better. The Edmonton squad isn't making any predictions.

"We've got a good club and we'll do our best to bring home the bacon," Coach Earl Robertson says.

Tradition is on their side. In only one world tournament has Canada been beaten. An English club sparked by the goal-tending of Jimmy Foster, who led two Moncton Hawk teams to the Allan Cup, nosed out the Dominion's representatives in the 1936 Olympics. Edmonton Superiors, only other Edmonton club to bear Canada's hopes, went over in 1932-33, winning 36 of 37 games.

Canadians plan to leave Edmonton Jan. 2, possibly playing at Regina, Moose Jaw, Sask., Brandon, Man., Winnipeg, Port Arthur, Oshawa, Montreal, Boston and New York before embarking.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

When two basketball teams met yesterday at Washington in a skating arena, covered for the occasion with floor boards, the moisture from the ice seeped through the boards and the players slipped and skidded to a deadlock. That is, they were unable to stay on their feet. The game was called.

First customer for tickets to the Washington Redskins 1947 football opener was a fan in Istanbul who wrote Manager Sid Carroll for ducats and added the cryptic note: "Barring an unscheduled game with Joe Stalin's all-stars, I hope to be back for the 1947 opening."

"Red" Rolfe, former major league baseball star, who recently took over the coaching duties with the Toronto Huskies professional basketball team, said yesterday at Toronto he wants his players to be hustlers and intends to develop the team both offensively and defensively.

Chips Off The Sports' Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

Lately Larry MacPhail, inquiring into the Yankees' 1946 ills, discovered that Joe DiMaggio was being treated by Dr. Toots Shor for bursitis of both shoulders and a gimpy heel. Larry promptly announced all Yankees would have to be X-rayed for possible hidden ailments before next spring.

* * *

No doubt this is a wise precaution, but even with the X-ray camera doctors cannot always discover what ails a man, especially if it is a tendency to have too much lead in the wrong places.

* * *

Recently a man sought medical aid because he had popped eyes and a ringing in the ears. A doctor looked him over, shook his head and said dubiously: "Well, let's get rid of your tonsils." The operation was performed, but without results. The man consulted another doctor, who had tapped and prodded and suggested the root of the trouble might be in the teeth. The man had his fangs yanked and replaced with crockery. Still his eyes bulged out like cue balls and his ears rang like the chimes of Normandy. He visited still another caybones, who told him bluntly: "You've got six months to live. Maybe a year, but I'd say six months."

* * *

In that event the man said he was going to treat himself right while he lasted. He bought a flashy car, hired a liveried chauffeur, had the best tailor in town make him 30 suits, decided even his shirts would be made to order.

* * *

"My shirts are expensive," the shirtmaker warned him.

"Money's no object," the doomed man said. "I want the best you've got. Monogram on the pocket and everything."

"Okay," said the shirtmaker, "let's get your measurement. Hmm, 34 sleeve, umm, 16 collar"—

"Fifteen," the man said.

"Sixteen collar," the shirtmaker said, measuring again. "Let's see, chest"—

* * *

"Listen," the shirtmaker said, "I'm warning you. You keep on wearing a 15 collar and your eyes will pop and you'll have a ringing in your ears."

* * *

Flight Lieutenant W. Hook, who looks after the coaching job for the current edition of the Trenton R.C.A.F. hockey squad thinks he has a team that should be quite some punkins in Intermediate "B" O.H.A. ranks this year. Upwards of twenty-seven potential ice stars turned out for the first practice a few days ago, but the squad is being weeded out and it looks as though what is left should make some of the other teams in the district move.

* * *

The team has been practising down Kingston way on several occasions and the boys are getting the baseball and softball kinks out of their arms and legs. Hook has a couple of neat goalies. One of them Robertson who played last year, battling for the custodians job. Nicky Sargent, former Picton star, has his eyes on a centre berth and the rest of the crowd is fighting for a job. Looks as though Hook will have a neat team by the time the ice is in the local igloo.

* * *

Basketball seems as if it is in for a good year too, especially in the "B" bracket. Both Mountain View and Trenton air stations will floor strong squads while the local Y.M.C.A. under the keen eye of Ed. Shortt, will place a team that should give a good account of itself. Things are warming up around Picton way and there are all indications of a strong Intermediate "B" grouping in the district.

* * *

Toronto's rampaging Leafs, youth plus, got themselves a couple of neat shiny wins over the weekend drubbing Rangers 3-2 on Saturday night and de-feathering the not-so-hot Chicago Hawks 4-3 in the Sunday session. Leafs retained their slim lead at the head of the heap. Maurice (Rocket) Richard, Canadiens star, got himself four points in the game against Rangers, netting a couple of goals with two assists thrown in.

* * *

Bob Leute, playing with the Idaho University basketball team in 1934 spotted his teammate Wally Carle waiting under the opponent's basket at the other end of the court and let fly with the ball. Bob's aim was off and the spheroid dropped through the hoop 80 feet away.

* * *

The laddies of the gambling racket are at it again. According to the morning sheets Mayor O'Dwyer and Gotham's highest police officials today accused what they term a "vicious" New Jersey gambling syndicate, fronted by a Broadway novelty manufacturer of plotting to fix Sunday afternoon's champion football game between the New York Giants and the Chicago Bears.

* * *

The attempted fix in which the syndicate offered to pay $2,500 to Frank Filchock and Merle Hapes, Giant backfielders was planned, police said, to throw victory by more than ten points to the Bears. The ring is said to have placed bets of 20,000 on the Beans to win. The Bears won alright, but neither the syndicate or anybody else got any gravy because the Giants were awarded ten points and on ties all bets are off.

* * *

The scandal, it is claimed may open a wide betting operation that, it is claimed may extend to college teams. It seems the boys with the big money have been getting close to college athletics and things may pop wide open in the near future.

* * *

Ol' Bobo Newsom is an articulate gent whose forked tongue carries as great a threat as his fork ball.

The much-travelled Washington pitcher has been a member of eight different major league squads during his 18 years in the bigtime.

After losing a game for the Red Sox some years back, Eddie Collins, Boston's General Manager, acidly inquired of baseball's high-priced hobo hurler: "Where did you learn to pitch?"

"What did you play in the big leagues, Eddie?" Bobo asked innocently.

"Second base," barked Cooperstown Collins.

"Well, then," the Great Mouthpiece said blandly, "where did you learn to pitch? You sign the checks and I'll throw the ball."

CHICAGO BEARS EASILY DEFEAT N.Y. FOR TITLE

Pro Football Faces First Betting Scandal but Players Not Blamed

By JOHN D. HAMILTON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 16. (CP)— Professional football today faced its first major betting scandal—but there were indications that the grid sport would escape the black eye suffered by major league baseball and college basketball in the past.

Albin J. Paris, 28-year-old New York novelty company official, was arraigned in Magistrate's Court on a charge of attempting to bribe, two members of the New York Giants Club in the National Football League.

The unsuccessful attempt to fix Sunday's league championship game between the Giants and Chicago Bears was discovered before the kickoff time by police.

The game went on as scheduled and the Giants, after a bruising battle in which they displayed every effort to win, went down before the Bears by a 24-14 score before a record play-off crowd of 58,346 at the Polo grounds. Despite the announcement of the attempted fix, the fans paid in a record gage of $882,653.25.

The Bears were favored all along to win and the victory created no surprise.

The District Attorney's office said Paris signed a statement saying he had offered halfback Frankie Filchock and fullback Merle Hapes of the Giants $2,500 each to "lie down" in the title game.

Paris, self-styled "big bettor" on athletic contests also offered to place a $1,000 wager on the Bears for each player, police said. Paris' bail was set at $25,000 and a hearing was scheduled for Dec. 23.

Police said both players refused to deal with Paris and were exonerated.

After the 1919 World Series between the Cincinnati Reds and the Chicago White Sox, several members of the "Black Sox" were barred from baseball for life for accepting bribes to throw the series.

Two years ago five members of the Brooklyn College team admitted taking $1,000 to throw a game.

Hockey has never had a major betting scandal either professional or amateur ranks.

Last year Walter (Babe) Pratt, Toronto Maple Leaf defenceman, was suspended for making bets on games but subsequently he was sold to Boston Bruins.

Maurice Richard of Montreal Canadiens finished off a steady scoring campaign during recent weeks by nabbing two goals and two assists last night to topple Detroit Red Wings' Billy 'The Kid) Taylor from first place in the National Hockey League scoring race. Richard takes over with 16 goals and 12 assists for 28 points while Taylor, held scoreless, drops to second berth with his eight and 17 for 25. Ted (Teeter) Kennedy, Toronto, notched a goal and an assist to move into third place with 15 and nine, replacing Roy Conacher, Detroit, who dropped to fourth with 13 goals and 10 assists for 23 points. Milt Schmidt, Boston, added a goal and an assist to claim fifth berth with 11 and 11 while Syd Abel, Detroit, and M. Bentley, Chicago, follow with 19 points apiece.

Montreal, Dec. 16 — (CP) — What we have we hold, seems to be the motto of the Ottawa and District Hockey Association, at least as far as their crop of young players is concerned.

Latest reports from the capital say the Association has pinned up warnings in the youngsters' dressing rooms and threatened expulsion of any players who sign tryout forms or option agreements with pro hockey clubs.

The warning continues:

"Beware of alleged scouts. Eight or 10 young players were left stranded in Ottawa last month because of signing tryout forms and then refusing to accept contracts at ridiculous figures offered by certain United States professional teams."

No names were mentioned as the Association the Association opened an apparent battle to keep closed ranks against outside depredations.

Exit Amateurs?

Prexy Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League, at a sportsman's dinner last week, aligned himself with that growing faction whose members think amateurism is on the way out fast.

Mr. Campbell, remarking that it's a commercial age now, suggested that "there should be less of a division between the pro and the so-called amateur."

"The time has really come in sports when the girl or man who attracts the customers into the park or the arena is worthy of his small share in the receipts," prexy Campbell ventured.

He didn't elaborate, but left it at that for the boys to mull over.

The Kibitzer

Just before tournament time, a mob was milling around a table. Some were standing on chairs trying to see. Many were on tiptoe with necks craning. The kibitzers close in were shovering advice.

This was a bridjuggler familiar to most of the better players. They knew the answer, but refrained from telling how it should be handled. Solving the problem was a liberal education in play.

A player at the table was working on it. Every so often, this baby thought he had all the steps figured out. But each time, some bystander suggested a different discard to stump him.

The solution to this problem was not found by him up to time for the match to begin. Nor late that night when it was trotted out again. So, it might interest you to try it in your spare time.

Notice nine cards left in each hand. Assume you are sitting in the south seat as the declarer at a contract in no-trump. You are now in the lead. Take seven of the nine remaining tricks.

Let me warn you not to try the solution without laying out the cards. You may have a better memory than most of us. Even so, it is well to make sure that you have not overlooked a card.

Keep in mind that opponents must make every attempt to defeat you. East and west have a right to any possible legal defense. No matter how you start, they must try to frustrate your plan.

At some time will you lead or take the dummy heart queen? If so, west may discard a spade or a diamond or a club. Each of these discards would require a different line of future play.

Will you ever lead or play the dummy club nine? If so, east may or may not go with the king. What then?

I hate to think what this may do to your disposition.

The Movie Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

"The Stronghold," now in the making at the St. Hyacinthe, Que., studio of Quebec Productions Corporation, is one picture in which scenes in newspaper offices will be authentic. For sequences on a set showing an editor's office backed by a busy city room the company imported a group of Canadian newspapermen to sit around, pound typewriters and make the scene look convincing. The news hawks also doubled as technical advisers for the scenes.

The group included Roly Young, movie reviewer of the Toronto Globe and Mail; Henri Poulin, head of the Montreal office of Time and Fortune magazines; Vince Lunny of the Montreal Standard, Roger Champoux of La Presse of Montreal, Ernest Pallascio-Morin and Fernand Denis, both of Le Petit Journal of Montreal, and Marc Thibault, publicity representative for Quebec Productions Corporation. Since they don't speak in their scenes, they will appear in both the English and the French versions.

After three days' shooting the reporters found they had been literally brought in as authentic background. They will be seen only through the glass partition of the editor's office in a scene between the editor, played by John (you'll get used to it) Pratt, who was in the R.C.N.'s "Meet the Navy," and Mary Anderson, one of the film's stars.

Some of the reporters had stories and columns to write for their real-life papers but movie men wouldn't let them do any work on the set. It made too much noise.

Adrian Scott is one producer who is enthusiastic about the policy of making films in England and Hollywood with name stars from each film centre. He has just returned to Hollywood from London where James Hilton's "So Well Remembered" was screened with Martha Scott and Richard Carlson of Hollywood, and Patricia Roc, John Mills and Trevor Howard representing Britain.

"We learned a lot about the British film industry during our visit, and I am sure this was reciprocal with the English studio craftsmen."

Walter Pidgeon, the boy from East St. John, N.B., who went to Hollywood and fame, is going to be framed. The New Brunswick museum at Shediac has asked for his portrait to add to their collection of New Brunswickers who made good. Another St. Johner who went to the top in the movies is Louis B Mayer, Vice-President of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures. He was born in Europe but spent his youth in New Brunswick.

Phyllis Calvert, the British now in Hollywood to play in "Time Out of Mind," has been signed to a long-term contract by Paramount and will divide her time between England and America.

Australia is entering the film field with a bang by making the premiere of "The Overlanders," its first high-budget feature, a social occasion sponsored by the Australian Ambassador to the United States, Norman J. O. Makin. Invitations have been sent to leaders of the government, business, finance, social and entertinment world for the New York opening Dec. 19.

The film, first major Australian project of the J. Arthur Rank Organization, marks the Commonwealth's entry into the competitive international film field. It tells the story of the 2,000 mile trek across the barren Northern Territory to prevent thousands of cattle from falling into the hands of the Japanese, at the time of threatening invasion. It stars Chips Rafferty and Daphne Campbell, both native Australians.

When you see Thomas Mitchell stagger drunkenly and vocally down the street in "It's Wonderful Life," and disappear with a great clatter as though he had fallen into a pile of ash-cans, you can remember it was all a mistake. The scene wasn't supposed to end that way.

During filming, as the actor went out of camera range, an electrician on the set accidently knocked over some props which drowned out the actor's vocalizing. The electrician decided on the spot he had better quit before he was fired but before he could disappear Frank Capra shouted, "excellent! What a natural bit of business. Print." And handed him $10.

Freddie Bartholomew, is entertaining the customers for the stage show at a New York movie house with a clever song, "Growing Up," describing his own position growing past his early child star stage and his later stint as a GI. He has a surprisingly good voice.

COUNCILLORS ELECTED

Whitby, Dec. 16 — (CP)—J. G. Strathy, with 301 votes, and R. J. Underwood with 206 were elected Saturday to fill two vacancies on the town council. They defeated C. E. Broughton, C. R. Butt and G. W. Huntley. Voters also approved fixed assessments for three firms.

Election officials said only one eligible ratepayer in five voted.

COLLIDE WITH TREE

Peterboro, Dec. 16 — (CP) — En route to California and a Christmas holiday, Dr. and Mrs. Orville Oughtred, Sutton, halted their journey here last night when they were admitted to Civic Hospital suffering from facial cuts and shock following a car-tree collision on Reid Street.

The accident occurred when the Oughtred car skidded on the slippery roadway, and shot across the street, colliding with an elm tree.

Fire Marshal Will Investigate $75,000 Blaze

Guelph, Dec. 16 — (CP) — An official of the Ontario Fire Marshal's department was due to arrive here today to investigate the cause of a $75,000 fire which gutted the Penfold hardware store and two apartments above it on MacDonnell Street during the weekend. The blaze brought the total damage in three Western Ontario fires to more than $163,000.

Six firemen were injured and three were taken to hopital in the spectacular blaze which forced more than 20 persons to flee to safety down a blazing staircase Saturday night. Ten were left homeless by the fire. Fire Chief Charles Vince, who announced the outbreak will be probed, said it was suspected a lighted cigaret thrown carelessly down a grate in front of the hardware store was responsible.

Two families occupying apartments above the store, who lost their entire possessions, were given temporary accommodation in hotels and private homes. The blaze was the sixth major outbreak in Guelph in the last two years, involving a loss of an estimated $500,000, including a $150,000 fire which destroyed the Bond hardware block in November, 1945.

Fire Destroys Home

Other weekend fires were at Parkhill, 25 miles northeast of London, where stock and mill buildings worth $80,000 were destroyed Saturday night, and a $10,000 blaze which destroyed the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Berecki at Chatham early Sunday.

The Guelph fire gutted a store and apartments above it next door to the Palace Theatre. About 900 theatre patrons filed out quietly a few feet from the blaze. Firemen who went to hospital were Fred Anderson, overcome by smoke, who was released Sunday night; Richard Southern and Edward Ferguson, treated for burns and who later returned to duty.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was reeding his paper and ma was reeding hers, saying, P. Willis Hinkle has a very good collum today, William.

Well, that's news, pop said.

Him not thinking as much of P. Willis Hinkle as what ma does, and ma said, He hits the bell right on the head, he never wrote truer werds.

What's he say, two and 2 makes four? pop said, and ma said, He says that one of the 4 freedoms should be the freedom of personel likes and dislikes. In other werds, the harmless fads and foibles of other people are really none of our business, and yet they rub our superficial surface the wrong way and are the cause of half the werld's dislikes and animosities. According to P. Willis Hinkle, how are the nations of the werld ever going to live at peace with one another as long as ordnerry private next door naybors cant learn to live and let live in their own little human tastes and distates? ma said.

By gollies this is a good time to tell you frankly that I like thick, cold toast for breakfist, and I wish you'd see that I get it, pop said, and ma said, Why William Potts, you know very well that thin hot toast is the only kind fit to eat. I mean how can you make such a morbid statement? she said.

I can make it with the advance nollege that you're going to resent it with every superficial fibre of your human nature, pop said. It's just an example of universal freedom of manners and customs being as distant as the moon, he said, and ma said, Now William, you really dont like thick cold toast at all, so you haven't proved a thing.

Mickey Vernon Batting Champ American Loop

(By The Canadian Press)

Top athletes in two sports were named during the weekend in the United States. James B. (Mickey) Vernon, Washington Senators first baseman, formally was named 1946 American League batting champion, in official statistics released Saturday and in its national rankings for 1946 the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association rated a trio of Californians at the top of the men's singles list. They were, in order, Jack Kramer, Frankie Parker and Tom Brown. A surprise was the overlooking of Ted Schroeder, top-ranking player and national titlist in 1942, now a member of the U.S. Davis Cup team.

Vernon gained his baseball award 11 points ahead of Boston's mighty (until the World Series) Slugger Ted Williams. The Red Sox repeated as team batting champions with a robust .271.

At Yipsilanti, Mich., Saturday night, Michigan Normal College downed a University of Western Ontario basketball squad 51-49. The margin of victory was a tip-in shot by Michigan centre Roy Weir in the last 20 seconds.

Colgate University Saturday chalked up its all-time high basketball score in downing University of Toronto. The game at Hamilton, N.Y., ended with Toronto collegians on the short end of a 86-37 score.

The Maryland Racing Commission, estimated its cost approximately $12,000 annually to feed the white mice used for laboratory anti-doping tests on its tracks, has asked the State legislature for more money.

At Washington, 46-yearo-old Harold A. Carlson, armless since youth, decided recently to take up bowling. He devised a gadget utilizing a rubber suction cup and valve. He attaches the gadget to his artificial hand, picks up the ball by means of the suction cup and then opens the valve, released the ball. His first score was a pretty fair 96.

CHAPTER 22.

"Now wait until I show you what goes with it, Nancy," said Mrs. Olliphant, who had gone to school with Nancy's mother and aunts and cousins and knew all about the family. She turned and took from some waiting pair of hands the slim, linked sables and hooked them adroitly to the coat. "I'll tell you something," she added. "This exact coat, only in a smaller size, and these were sables—we haven't another pair like them in the house—were sold to Stanislaus Lichtenstein on this very floor last week for his wife. But he came in later and changed them for a baby lamb, and that's why you can have them."

There was a silence while Nancy, who was somewhat bulky and shapeless, revolved before a mirror.

"I love them. I love it all," Nancy said suddenly.

"I want you to love them; I wouldn't sell them to you if you didn't love them," said Linda Olliphant. "You're eighteen now," she said. "You're just about ready to make your little bow, and everyone's going to take an interest in what you wear. But remember, I'm going to telephone Granny before I send these home. There are heirloom furs."

"Oh, telephone Granny!" Nancy pouted, loving the importance of it. "People treat me as if I was a princess," she protested, "following me around and checking me up this way! . . .

"Granny said I could have anything I wanted for my birthday," she told Jennifer when they were out in the street again. "Well, that's what I want, and a horse, and to go to New York when she goes on this autumn."

"And when's your birthday?" Jennifer asked with some difficulty out of a strange slow churning of unassimilate thoughts.

"Not till October, but I'll never want anything more than I want those furs!" Nancy said.

Luncheon was the last word in deliciousness, of course; icy cold crab cocktail, eggs bubbling away in a rich red sauce in the bottom of ramekins, pastries built up like little hats and castles and beehives. Jennifer ate it without tasting it; her heart was seething. This stupid fat girl, of whom she had said to Faddy and Elna that she drooled, could walk into Rousseau's. . . . !

The soft spring day was spoiled for her, the luncheon, everything was spoiled. She struggled through the afternoon hours concious only that the world was all wrong; the day would end somehow, and she would go home to the close air and kitchen smells of the flat. And perhaps Betty would say, "Oh, you lucky!" when she told her that Nancy Newell had taken her to lunch. But Monty would ask her why she wasted time on that fat snob.

Monty! She remembered him suddenly. He had been away for a week; he should be home now. He had gone suddenly; Jennifer had crossed the roof twice, expecting to find him at home, before she had happened to encounter his cleaning woman, old Mrs. Root. Mrs. Root had volunteered the information that Mr. Smith had come in Sunday night with two friends, had packed some clothes, and that they had all gone off together in the car. He had said to stop the milk until further notice, and leave the key at the auction store.

Jennifer crossed the roofs immediately after the supper dishes were done, jumped down over the familiar parapet, and reached the terrace. Faint light was pouring out across it; her heart rose. Monty was at home!

His back was toward the terrace windows as she came in; he glanced over his shoulder at her, nodded, and went on with what he was doing. Jennifer perceived that he was packing an old suitcase with odd garments, books, his camera, a pipe.

"Going somewhere?" she asked, chilled by his manner already.

"Yep. Mexico with Jim Sparks," he answered briefly.

No greeting, no smile, none of the usual affectionate questions as to what she was ready to report. Jennifer sank into a chair and tried to control her sinking spirits. What could be wrong? Nothing could be wrong . . . .

"Monty, for how long?"

"Oh. . . ." he said in an absent-minded voice. He appeared to be searching about for something, picked up a pile of two or three handkerchiefs, and put them into the suitcase. "Months, maybe,' he added airily.

"Months!"

"Maybe."

There was a long silence. Presently, with an effort and swallowing back tears, Jennifer asked:

"Monty, what's the matter?"

"Nothing," Monty answered.

"But there is," she persisted miserably.

Monty looked about in a businesslike way, picked up a book, tossed it aside, and snapped shut the cover of his suitcase. To Jennifer the spacious, high-ceiled, familiar old studio with stars spangling the black sky above the skylight took on all the fearful qualities of a nightmare. The lamps burned softly; light shone upon Monty's stooped, bony figure and bald head. He went into the kitchen, came back, picked up his bag and his overcoat.

"Put out the lights when you go and slam that window," he said evenly.

"Monty!" she said on a sharp whisper, on her feet and taking a few swift steps toward him. "You can't . . don't please. . . .

"You've been so good to me," Jennifer stumbled on, suddenly in tears; "you were the first person who ever helped me. Don't be mean to me now!"

He stood silent, irresolute, watching her.

"I'm sorry you came in, Jennifer," Monty presently began mildly. "I had made up my mind not to see you. You've—to live your own life, of course. Only. . . .I didn't think it of you. I've not right to say this," he interrupted himself restlessly. "I meant not to say it. But—if it had been anyone else. . . ."

Her throat was thick; she could not speak. She stood rooted to the floor, looking at him, the slow, sickening red coming up into her face.

"You see, I was with him when he bought some things at Rousseau's," Monty said in a dead silence. "They were 'for his wife'; only. .I happen to remember Daisy Lichtenstein. She's an Austrian woman; she weighs two hundred pounds. He never thought of that, never thought that I'd remember. And then, last Saturday, I went in to the hotel to say good-by to him—it was midafternoon—and I saw you with him at the elevator. Now," he finished in a light dry voice, "take care of yourself. I'll be back one of these days, and good-by."

"Monty, no matter what you thought," she said quickly, "I can explain. . . ."

The weak, stereotyped phrase did not sound convincing even to her. The man gave her merely a strained half smile from the doorway and was gone. She could hear his footsteps running down the stairs; they died away and there was utter silence in the studio.

The room rocked, tipped, settled slowly down into place. Jennifer swallowed with a dry throat, sat still. She was trembling a little and her head hurt her, or perhaps it was the effort to keep from tears that sent the sharp pain back of her eyes. She must not cry.

After a while she began to rub her thumb slowly back and forth on the arm of her chair; she watched it idly.

"It seems to be taking me a long time to grow up and get any sense," she said aloud slowly. She put her head back against the cushion of the chair and looked up at the skylight. "I can't see the stars from here," she murmured. And, getting up with an effort, she began to put out the lights, moving carefully as if she were lame.

Out on the terrace the stars were close, throbbing with a steady, even pulsing in a moonless sky. Jennifer leaned on the gritty, grimy surface of the brick parapet and stared up at them. She though of the happy and excited emotions with which, so many, many times she had crossed these roofs between Betty's kitchen and the studio, of the day she had first met Julie Carteret, of the studio suppers of red wine and hot French bread and great pots of goulash or beans compounded by one of the men—garlic and onion and tomatoes and red pepper pods mixed into the sauce and tasted a dozen times by everyone before being pronounced right. She thought of Monty's kindness, the old "Smith Culture" jokes, the blank books filled with the odds and ends of phrases and dates and facts that had helped her find her place in the circle and in the world.

She did not cry, but for many dark and quiet days and nights she carried with her a heart that was like a leaden weight in her breast.

It was unbelievable that in the early twenties, which ought to be so thrilling, one could feel as sober, as quietly bored as this. The pain and shame drained away from Jennifer's heart, leaving it empty and quiet. The days and weeks went by. On the summer mornings when she walked downtown the world was swathed in white veils of fog; through the summer afternoons wild winds swept chaff and newspapers about the park benches, and the shop was frequented by women who were in town for a day or two from the mountains or the lake. Tahoe was the lake; Jennifer heard a good deal about it. Evidently the fabled shores were set with country houses of all types; great places with lawns and flowers and boathouses, and little places where there were out-of-door grills under the tall pines. Sometimes everyone was talking Honolulu; clothes and hats had to be chosen for the semitropical beaches, words in a soft, much voweled language went about Vogelsang's. Once she and Miss Flood went down to the pier to see a big ship sail for Hawaii; streamers of colored paper webbed it to the shore until the very last minute, and when at last the great whistles shook the cool afternoon air and the last cargo port was closed, it was the trailing papers that clung and stretched to the end and broke into fringes that floated on the churning water.

The white decks and the white clothes and the flowered hats — it all looked so gay!

"Miss Flood," said Jennifer, "did you ever take a trip on an ocean liner?"

Mary Flood, unmarried and fifty-seven, was one of Vogelsang's finest saleswomen. But she was only a saleswoman. Younger women had passed her, graduated into the buyer class, married, and gone; Mary Flood was still an excellent, reliable, patient, and tactful saleswoman. That she lived to be the comfort of an aged mother and never missed seven o'clock mass, and that she quietly despised most of the salespersons and all of the customers at Vogelsang's, Jennifer knew; also that she had married sisters with countless children, and had—or had had—brothers who had been a heart scald to her and their mother. Mary lived in a white cottage out on San Jose Avenue; she never tired of observing that the climate there was balmy and fresh when aristocratic Pacific Avenue was bleak and windy, and also that you shopped better in the Mission.

One night Jennifer went home to spend the night with Mary and be presented to her tiny, spirited mother. The living space in the cottage was not greater, in actual inches, than that of the flat for which Betty paid a larger rent. But there was a great difference. Old Mrs. Flood had a small front garden jammed with geraniums, marguerites, marigolds, lemon verbena, alyssum, Fuchsias and border pinks. She had a back yard with a willow tree in it, two sheds, a clothesline, seven fowls, and a derelict old dog. She also had a large gray cat she called "me poor pussy," an offensively complacent brute which she smothered in pity and care, and a noisy canary.

The poverty of this house was the poverty of simplicity, scrupulous cleanliness, content. Jennifer loved it, and her heart quickened to know that Mary and her mother loved her. To the old woman she was almost instantly "Alanna," "Deary ger'rl," "Me hea'rt." There was some gratification in helping with dishes here; the towels, the sink boards were immaculate. Every hot, shining teacup had its appointed place, every scrap of food was transmuted into something unexpected and delicious. Mrs. Flood's veiny little spotted hands were never idle. The first night Jennifer spent there happened to be one of rain and storm; she slept deep in fresh sheets and fragrant blankets and awakened to find her clothes brushed and pressed, she shoes shining and a delectable breakfast almost ready.

"Mama never stops talking about you," Mary told her. Jennifer was beginning to feel her own power now, and in a sobered, sure sort of way to exert it. It was a power to attract friendship; people liked her. Her breath would come short and her eyes grow bright thinking of the miracle of it. People did like her! Monty had admitted it once, when they had been speaking of Julie.

"Magnetic?" Monty had said. "Yes. I suppose she is. But not as you're magnetic, Jimmy. You've got a way of working into people's affections. They may not see you when they first come into a room, but after a while you're the only person in it."

SOME SHORTAGE SIGNS

(New York Newspaper PM)

These two signs were posted over canned peas in a store on 11th St.:

"Two for $0.25; one to a customer."

A Brooklyn haberdasher displayed white shirts in the window with the legend:

"Limit—one shirt to two customers."

JUDGE GERMAN

Had Nothing to Say

After the verdict had been pronounced Judge German stood silently in the prisoner's box and looked intently at Judge Wright as the latter asked if the convicted man had anything to say. Mr. Greer replied for him, "No, Your Honor." Judge Wright then imposed sentence.

The jury deliberated for one hour and 50 minutes. In his charge, Judge Wright indicated they might well acquit the accused on both charges. "On the subject of the alcoholic content of the accused's blood," he said, "I charge you that as a matter of law that is not infallible, not a dependable symptom of intoxication. Nor, of course, is the smell of liquor. You can't convict on either of these circumstances without more contributory evidence."

Objects to Statements

After the jury had retired Crown Prosecutor Wallace objected to the statements regarding the blood test for alcoholic content and strenuously objected to Judge Wright referring to an appeal court decision which denied as drunk a man whose blood test showed 3.8 parts of alcohol per 1,000, compared with 3.1 alcohol in the case of Judge German. "You omitted to tell the jury that there was an acknowledged error in the blood test in the case you cited," he said.

Defence counsel protested against the suggestion that the jury be recalled for a further charge by Judge Wright, saying he felt that the judge's charge was eminently fair.

Judge German was transferred to the county jail Saturday night. Provincial officials rejected representations that as a diabetic under medical treatment for 30 months he should instead be transferred to the hospital.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, Dec. 16. (AP)— Buyers shopped cautiously for selected stocks today but neglected many market leaders.

Some demand still was based on the idea that a year-end rally, which has appeared in most of the last 45 years, would be witnessed. Good earnings and dividends were helpful.

Plus signs were sprinkled through the Canadian group at midday. C P R. was up 1-8, as was Distillers Seagrams, and Dome Mines gained 1-4. Hiram Walker and McIntyre were unchanged.

Departing Canadian Delegates Pleased With U.N. Progress

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 16 — (CP) — Members of Canada's three-party delegation to the United Nations General Assembly today relaxed after eight weeks of gruelling work in the ornate quarters on Flushing Meadows Park and at Lake Success, satisfied that the U. N. had made real progress and that Canada's contribution was substantial.

Hon. Paul Martin, acting delegation leader, in a statement before leaving for Ottawa, said "more progress was made toward effective international co-operation than could have been expected eight weeks ago."

The same sentiment was expressed by John Bracken, leader of the opposition; M. J. Coldwell, leader of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, and by L. Dana Wilgress, Ambassador to Russia and chief diplomatic adviser to the delegation.

Mr. Bracken went home Saturday, Mr. Coldwell last night and Mr. Martin was to leave today. Mr. Wilgress will visit Ottawa before returning to Moscow. Most of the other leading delegates have also departed.

"Co-operation must be well organized if the peoples of the world are going to be able to look forward to peace, stability and individual well being," Mr. Martin said in a statement to The Canadian Press.

"The Canadian delegation came to New York, under the able direction of Rt. Hon. L. S. St. Laurent, determined to do all it could to make the U. N. organization work . . .

Take Leading Part

"We were anxious to have the Assembly work quickly and expeditiously and focussed the Assembly's attention on this by presenting concrete suggestions to this end which were taken up and in the main adopted.

"Canada took a leading part in framing the great achievement of the Assembly — a resolution on disarmament that had some teeth in it. It also lead the way in setting up a relief system to take the place of UNRRA.

"In these two major fields and many others the Canadian delegation illustrated in practice the principle of functional responsibility outlined by Prime Minister Mackenzie King some years ago.

"That principle, as I understand it, means that nations should be judged by the contribution they are able and willing to make to world peace and well being, and not merely by geography or population . . ."

"Distinct progress is being made," said Mr. Bracken before leaving New York. "If international inspection as to troops and armaments should become a reality, as now seems possible, it will be the longest step forward ever taken toward the prevention of war."

Mr. Coldwell said the meetings of the Assembly this last week "have given us cause for a good deal of optimism."

"The long discussions earlier at times seemed discouraging," he added. "The amount of unanimity in the Assembly this past week surprised, I think, everyone.

"The great powers are some distance apart still but they are coming closer together."

Youthful Maple Leafs Retain N.H.L. Lead by Winning From Rangers, Hawks Over Weekend

Canadiens Defeat Rangers in New York and Boston Wins From Detroit

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Mostly for their youthful gusto, Toronto's Maple Leafs came to be called Conn Smythe's bouncing boys early in this National Hockey League season but the label carried fresh significance today after the way they rebounded into the league lead over the weekend.

The youthful Leafs, playing their sixth game in 12 nights, swept a double bill by outfinishing Chicago Black Hawks, 4-3, after beating New York Rangers 3-2, Saturday night. In both games, their rookie-studded lineup showed its elasticity by coming from behind for the victories.

The champion Montreal Canadiens who had taken over the first place by beating Leafs 3-2 in Toronto Wednesday night, did the best they could towards protecting a one-point margin by pinning a 4-3 victory on Rangers in New York Sunday night. But the Leafs' double win put the Stanley Cup holders a point behind again.

In a fourth weekend match, the third-place Boston Bruins widened the division between the top three and bottom three in the standings by edging out Detroit's Red Wings, 3-2, at Boston.

In the only contest of the four played Saturday night, Leafs spotted the Rangers a one-goal lead when Ab Demarco tallied at the halfway mark of the first period. Defenceman Gus Mortson, 21-year-old rookie, got this one back seven minutes later and the Leafs sped away with two second-period counters before Rangers tallied again in the last minute.

Ezinicki Breaks Tie

Wild Bill Ezinicki broke the 1-1 deadlock on a pass from Mortson, while Harry Watson fired the other Toronto tally and Church Russell closed the scoring for Rangers.

Toronto twice spotted the last-place Black Hawks an edge before a capacity crowd of 17,660 at Chicago. In the opening period, Red Hamill and Adam Brown fired goals that put Chicago two up and Bud Poile and Ted Kennedy closed the margin in the first half of the second session.

When Max Bentley gave Hawks a 3-2 lead moments later, Gus Bodnar tied it up again before the end of the period and Don Metz, recently returned to the Leafs from Pittsburgh Hornets, won the game with the only counter of the final period.

Two Losses

The Rangers, who started the weekend on a four-game unbeaten streak, went on from Toronto to their second loss before a home crowd of 15,726. Maurice (The Rocket) Richard paced Montreal's Canadiens to victory, firing his 15th and 16th goals of the season and helping in two others.

Glen Harmon, Buddy O'Connor and Billy Reay completed the Montreal scoring, while the Rangers' rover boys got all three for the Blueshirts, Church Russell counting twice and Cal Gardner once.

While the Leafs were saying it with youth, three veterans showed the way in Boston's victory over Detroit before a capacity crowd of 13,900 in the Boston Garden. After Red Doran and Roy Conacher shot the Bruins into a 2-0 lead, Pat Egan, Milt Schmidt and Woody Dumart tallied in succession for Boston.

The loss left Detroit, who used their famed "Indianapolis shift" to show several new faces, tied for fourth place with Rangers.

WEEKEND STARS

(By The Canadian Press)

Milt Schmidt, Boston, with one goal and one assist as Bruins edged Detroit Red Wings 3-2.

Gus Mortson and Bill Ezinicki, Toronto, who each earned a goal and an assist as Maple Leafs defeated New York Rangers 3-2.

Maurice Richard, Montreal, with two goals and two assists as Canadiens trimmed Rangers 5-3.

Church Russell, New York, who nailed two markers in the same game.

Adam Brown, Chicago, who made his debut in a Black Hawks uniform by garnering a goal and an assist as Toronto Maple Leafs won 4-3.

WINDSOR TAKES FIRST VICTORY IN O.H.A. RACE

Oshawa Generals Share Second Place With Galt by Defeating Wings 5-4

(By The Canadian Press)

The tail-end Windsor Spitfires provided the big news in the O.H.A. Junior "A" group over the weekend by hitting the win column for the first time this season with a resounding 4-0 victory over the fourth-place Stratford Kroehlers.

More negative news was supplied by St. Catharines Falcons, who failed for the third time in a row to get anything past Howie Harvey, diligent St. Michael's goaltender. The unfeeling Irish slammed seven goals past Maxie Haunn at the other end, giving them a 27-0 edge in scoring over the three games.

Yet Haunn was probably the best-looking hockey player on display at Maple Leaf Gardens Saturday afternoon as he kicked out an unrationed supply of rubber provided by the goal-hungry Majors.

Rudy Migay of Fort William was the top Irish scorer with two goals. Fleming MacKell, Les Costello, Wally Winslow, Ed Sandford and Ed Harrison got the others.

In the second game of the Toronto doubleheader, Young Rangers' efforts to down Marlboros were sadly hampered by injuries. Three men were sidelined during the encounter. Jack Anderson, Billy Ringer and Harry Pidherny required stitching. The Dukes won the game 3-1 to move into a fourth-place tie with Stratford.

Frank Kent, Ray Timgren and Joe Formick counted for the winners while Don Ashbee was the lone Ranger scorer.

Joy in Oshawa

There was joy in Oshawa Saturday night as Ray Ceresino's goal with 40 seconds of play remaining gave the Generals a 5-4 victory over Galt Red Wings and a share of second place with the losers.

Ceresino and Leo Curik won the game almost by themselves as they combined for four of the five Oshawa goals, Curik getting three before his line-mate provided the pay-off. The Wings blew the lead three times and were never behind until the last minute of play. Jim Uniac, Bill Scott, Bert Giesbrecht and Trent Ander scored for the losers. Phil Samis got the other Oshawa goal.

Monty Reynolds, a 19-year-old goaltender making his first start in a month led the Spitfires to their first win in seven starts in Windsor as he turned aside 31 shots from the luckless Kroehlers. Gord Haidy scored twice for the victors while Mike Russ and Paul Monforton had singles.

St. Catharines, a scant point ahead of the revived Spitfires, visit Hamilton for a joust with the seventh-place Szabos in tonight's only junior fixture. In the senior "A" division Stratford Indians play the second-place Staffords at Toronto.

Sports Roundup

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec 16 —(CP)— Portrait of a sports writer sitting at a hotel bar, swapping stories with the men who knew hockey when . . . "Who was hockey's greatest practical joker?" Somebody asks, and coach Dick Irvin of Montreal Canadiens suggests that the honor belongs to his old boss, Tommy Gorman, with Frank (King) Clancy, Charley Conacher and Clarence (Happy) Day drawing a passing nod from the rest of the company . . . Gorman used to lie awake plotting fancy schemes to confuse the old Montreal Maroons (usually with fictitious telegrams) and bedevil a favorite adversary, Manager Art Ross at Boston Bruins . . . Ross, whose French accent is straight from the sidewalks of Paris, obtained revenge one night by telephoning Gorman long-distance and identifying himself as a Father Leveque, and could he please bring some school children to the next Maroon game? Gorman approved, then asked how many kids were coming . . . "About 200," replied "Father Levesque." "Two hundred?" wailed Gorman. 'I thought you meant a dozen or so. Where are the kids from?"

"The deaf-and-dumb school," said Ross, placing the telephone gently in its cradle.

In Kitchener, one Hallowe'en, Irvin was en route to a game around 8 p.m. when he heard faint cries for help from one of the team's hotel rooms . . . Entering, he found Harold (Baldy) Cotton, usually the victim of Day-Clancy episodes, trussed on the floor between two mattresses, unable to move a muscle . . . Later Day and Clancy locked themselves in a room to avoid retribution, but Clancy opened the door an inch to avow his innocence and Conacher yanked him out head first and held him under a shower for 20 minutes . . . Baz (Montreal Star) O'Meara in town for the New York Giants-Chicago Bears football game, chipped in with the story about Cotton's (or was it Clancy's?) brand-new derby . . . Conacher substituted an old headpiece for the new and draped it round Clancy's (or Cottons) ears . . . The victim never found out it was "Old Hat."

TWO TEAMS TIED IN EACH DIVISION FOR FIRST PLACE

Kansas City Pla-Mors Advance a Rung by Defeating Houston

(By The Canadian Press)

The United States hockey has taken on the aspect of an army with a surplus of generals and a shortage of privates—Minneapolis and Omaha are tied for first place in the northern division while Tulsa and Dallas share first place in the southern.

Minneapolis and Omaha ended the week in a tie after jockeying the northern division first place between them over the last 10 days.

On three counts by Hal Brown and one by Dave Baker, St. Paul Saints downed the home team Fort Worth Rangers 4-1 last night.

Meanwhile, Kansas City Pla-Mors, the northern division cellar team, behaved like anything but a cellar-dweller, trouncing the visiting Houston Skippers of the southern division cellar 10-1.

The fourth Kansas City win in five games, it was sparked by Red Mitchell, Dick Butler and Johnny Harms with two counts apiece. Larry, Silvestri, Bert Olmstead, Wingy Johnston, and Powell brought in the other Pla-Mor counts. Jimmy Skinner was the only Skipper to get past Pla-Mor goalie Doug. Jackson.

Saturday night Don Morrison, the league's leading scorer, put on a one-man show chalking up three counts and assisting with a fourth to lead Omaha Knights to a 4-3 win over the Skippers. Arley Carlson, Morden Skinner and Paul Mundrick counted for Houston.

Earl Bartholome was busy for the Millers Saturday night scoring three times to help put down the Pla-Mors 6-1. Roy Kelly backed him with two tallies and Walter Atanas with one. Powell scored for the Pla-Mors.

In Tulsa the Oilers trounced St. Paul 7-1 as Johnny Ubriaco, Ralph Wycherly, Bill Knott, Hugh Mair, Joe Sadler, Emile Dagenais and Buddy Hellyer crashed the net. Joe Schcakc was the only St. Paul scorer.

Turkish Govt. Bans Communistic Activities, Papers

Any 'Subversive Movements' Will be Resisted to Utmost

By EDWIN B. GREENWALD

Istanbul, Dec. 17 (AP). — The Turkish army padlocked eight publications in Istanbul today, prohibited the printing and distributing of organs of a "communistic" nature and outlawed branches of two new political parties it described as "directed in a camouflaged manner by Communists and people having extremist Communist tendencies."

One usually reliable source described the actions as a "small purge" and said they might be considered a warning that the Turkish government was ready to resist any "subversive movements".

Observers in Istanbul were struck by the strong working of the army communique announcing the swift steps and were quick to note that they coincided with a rise of anti-Communist sentiment in Iran, just to the east of Turkey, and other events regarded here as possible harbingers of a changing attitude toward Russia.

Unconfirmed reports said persons of alleged radical tendencies had been arrested and numerous documents seized as secret police and the military descended on suspected establishments.

The steps were taken by the commandant of the state of siege —which embraces the Istanbul area and extends north and west through Thrace to the Bulgarian and Greek frontiers.

They came just four days after Premier Recep Peker telegraphed restless Istanbul University students to be "calm" and not start any demonstrations which he said would make happy only those "who want to disrupt order in our country".

The two new political parties, branches of which were outlawed in the state of siege zone, were the Workers and Peasants Socialist Party and the Turkish Socialist Party.

Suspended indefinitely by the army were the political magazines Sendika, Ses, Gun, Yigin, Dost and the Armenian newspaper Nor-or, all of which were accused in the communique of "propagating opinions" of groups affiliated with the two outlawed political party branches.

The morning newspaper Yarin was suspended for four months on a charge that one of its articles "spread propaganda to destroy the political and juridical order of the country".

The weekly magazine Buyuk Dogu was suspended for a like period because, the communique said, "by its reactionary ideas it has been judged harmful to security."

Brighter Future Seen by Mr. King On 72nd Birthday

Ottawa, Dec. 17 — (CP)—Business almost as usual was the order of the day at the Prime Minister's office today as Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King observed his 72nd birthday with a fairly full agenda.

One concession was made to the event. Cabinet council, which normally meets on Tuesday and Wednesday, was moved back this week to Wednesday and Thursday. But otherwise it was just another working day for the prime minister.

"He's at his desk today, just like every other day," an aide said.

Of the anniversary, Mr. King was quoted as telling a colleague:

"On this new year of life I can look out at a brighter future than since before the beginning of the war."

He planned to spend most of the day in his library at Laurier House opening messages from cabinet ministers, members of parliament and diplomats in the United Kingdom, the United States and France. Pat No. II, an Irish terrier, sat at the side of his desk.

There were so many messages that an official said Mr. King would be unable to acknowledge them all. A number of gifts, too, arrived at his home.

Ontario Roads In Bad Condition Due to Sleet

Toronto, Dec. 17—(CP)—Snow storms sleet and fine rain during the night left most Ontario highways in hazardous condition today and traffic was hampered over wide areas, especially from Toronto eastward.

Many buses and freight trucks were unable to proceed on their runs along the Toronto-Montreal highway and one passenger-laden bus was held up at Cobourg, 60 miles east of here. Between Kingston and Napanee visibility was reduced to practically zero during the height of the storm.

The sleet storms started in the Windsor area and extended east and northwards. Early reports however said there were few accidents. At Chatham Walter Brown of Ridgetown was injured when the car in which he was riding skidded off the road and hit a tree.

Commercial airline flights were cancelled during the storm.

Many highways were jammed with a slow procession of vehicles gingerly threading their way on the icy strip and on the highway to Malton, northwest of Toronto, a bus skidded around but remained on the road.

Cold at Dawson City Moderates To Forty Below

Dawson City, Y.T., Dec. 17 (CP). —Dawson City's weather moderated to a mere 40 degrees below zero Monday and things got back to normal somewhat in this old-time gold mining centre—at least the kids went back to school.

Winter was heralded in the Yukon with dropping temperatures a month ago. But it set in with a vengeance last week as the mercury dropped to an official 61 and unofficial record of 70 below, which old-timers said was the coldest in 20 years for this season.

Residents thought so, too, as the city's two schools closed, their 200 children stayed home, social functions were cancelled and a shortage of wood fuel was threatened because it was too cold for the wood-haulers to work. Many truckers found operation at 70 below too hard on their supplies of gas and oil, scarce commodities in the Yukon.

But they're tough up north and when the mercury got back near the 40's at the weekend, the wood haulers went to work again. And today most of the kids were back to school, though attendance in the lower grades was poor.

Plows and Sand Trucks Keep Roads And Highways in Shape After Storm

Toronto, Dec. 17 —(CP)— Snowplows in northern sections and sand trucks in southern areas worked today to keep Ontario highways in shape for pre-holiday traffic following a snow and sleet storm which swept across the southern section of the province.

Officials of the Department of Highways said strong winds caused drifting in the Sudbury, Sault Ste. Marie and Muskoka areas. Up to six inches of snow was reported in some districts. Plows worked on a 24-hour basis.

"We have what might be termed 'normal winter driving conditions' in most parts of Ontario today," said C. J. Murray, provincial supervisor for the highway department. "Forecasts are for snow squalls over a good portion of the province; then clearing.

"The public weather office at Malton gave us a good warning on this storm yesterday afternoon and we were able to take steps to meet it. We found their forecast highly accurate."

Warm sunshine and rising temperatures melted snow and ice on Ontario roadways south of No. 7 Highway which runs from Sarnia through Kitchener, Brampton, Thornhill and Lindsay to Peterborough and Perth. North of that area, highways were slippery but sanded.

In the Stratford district, highway transports waited for sand trucks early today and some paused in Stratford until sanding improved road conditions.

Windsor weather was cold, bright and windy today after a night of light rain and high wind. One bad accident and 11 minor crashes were blamed on slippery roads and streets.

Oshawa had two minor accidents. No. 2 Highway was in good condition near Oshawa but shortly before noon reports indicated it was icy in stretches between Oshawa and Belleville.

MASS HANGING IN LETHBRIDGE JAIL WILL SET RECORD

Four German Prisoners Of War and Canadian Army Veteran Will Be Executed Wed.

Lethbridge, Alta., Dec. 17.— (CP)—A new high record for the number of hangings in one Canadian jail in one day will be set here tomorrow when five men—four German prisoners of war and a Canadian army veteran—will be executed.

The Germans were convicted of murdering a fellow prisoner in the Medicine Hat prisoner-of-war camp in 1944 and the Canadian, Donald Sherman Staley, 29, a native of Bracebridge, was condemned for the sex-killing of six-year-old Donnie Goss in Calgary last July 24.

The present high mark for hangings on any one day in any Canadian jail is four. The four Saladin pirates were hanged on July 330, 1844, in Halifax Public Square for murder and mutiny on the high seas. Four bank robbers were executed in Montreal on Oct. 24, 1924.

The four Germans to go to the gallows are Staff Sgt.-Maj. Bruno Perzenowski, 34, Sgt.-Maj. Willi Mueller, 31, Sgt.-Maj. Heinrich Busch, 29, and Sgt. Walter Wolf, 29.

Their victim, Cpl. Karl Lehmann, a German doctor of Philosophy and a lecturer in the Medicine Hat prisoner camp, was accused by Nazi leaders in the camp of being a leader of a Communistic group plotting to overthrow the camp leadership.

When Lehmann's removal from the camp was ordered by Canadian authorities in connection with seperation of Nazis and non-Nazis in prisoner camps, the Nazi prisoners received orders from Germany by a hidden short wave radio that all Communists were to be killed.

Lehmann was lured to a lecture hall on the eve of departure. Members of the camp gestapo hanged him with a piece of sash cord.

The four Nazis have been spending much of their time playing chess, using numbered boards and shouting moves to each other through the bars of the individual cells.

Staley, who also confessed criminally assaulting and killing Garry Billings, 11, at Vancouver last July 5, has been assembling jig-saw puzzles.

The Nazis have refused to speak to Staley, who served four years with the Canadian army. Jail officials said the Nazis regard Staley with contempt as a criminal, meanwhile maintaining they are not guilty of murder. They claim they merely executed a military order in killing Lehmann.

Execution of the five men will begin shortly after midnight Tuesday but it was not known whether they will be hanged singly or in pairs.

The last previous hanging in Lethbridge was June 26, when Sgt. Werner Schwab, a German prisoner of war, was executed for killing another prisoner, Pte. August Plaszek, at the Medicine Hat camp.

Strachey Says Shipping Difficulties Not Price Affecting Wheat Supply

London, Dec. 17. (CP)—Food Minister Strachey told the House of Commons today that the "main difficulty" in the present British wheat supply situation is the inability of Canadian authorities to move wheat in sufficient quantities to ports.

He said he does not think the fact that Canada is receiving a price lower than the world level has influenced supplies.

Mr. Strachey told the Commons that the United States has promised Britain enough wheat and flour between now and Jan. 31 to avert a "very grave emergency."

Strachey, who earlier abandoned plans to fly to Washington on short notice in a plea for food, said Britain now would be permitted to buy and export 68,000 tons of wheat, 36,000 tons of flour and a small amount of coarse grains by the end of January.

In addition, he said, the United States has promised rail priority in moving additional quantities of Canadian wheat across the United States.

"Together with our existing supplies these quantities should—if there are no further delays in transport—just suffice to avert the very grave emergency which we foresaw for the end of January," Strachey said.

"Although these supplies are by no means so much as those we wished to purchase in the United States in January, at the same time they represent a major effort on the part of the United States government to meet us in face of the very real difficulty which the United States government faces today."

Eden asked if Strachey thought the limitation on Canadian wheat supplies was because the price to por. ,stitonn agcegnalreeusger nadian wheat agreement was lower than the world price.

Strachey said the wheat came from Canadian farms in adequate quantities at the $1.55-a-bushel price. The trouble developed later in movement of the wheat to ports, not in the movement of paid Canada under the Anglo-Ca- to ports, not in the movement from the farms.

Opposition Leader Winston Churchill pressed the point, asking:

"Did the price paid for Canadian wheat diminish the flow of that wheat to this country?"

"There seems to be a matter of opinion developing on this," replied the Food Minister.

"No one can answer authoritatively but I myself cannot see how the price paid for wheat could affect the movement in Canada."

Although it might have been said that the farmer did not deliver enough because of the price, actually the farmer did deliver enough.

Earlier Strachey announced he would not be leaving for the United States in a plea for food.

INDUSTRIAL BANK AUTHORIZES LOANS OF $9,396,674

205 Industries Benefit by Medium and Long-Term Loans by Crown Bank

Ottawa, Dec. 17 —(CP)— The Crown-owned Industrial Development Bank has authorized loans totalling $9,396,674 since it began operations Nov. 1, 1944, it was disclosed today in the bank's second annual report.

The report of the bank, established to make loans to small and medium-sized industrial enterprises for medium and long-term aid in their post-war expansion, said the loans were made to 205 industries.

Quebec and Ontario received the bulk of the loans which were broken up by provinces as follows:

Prince Edward Island, nil; Nova Scotia, $234,000; New Brunswick, $289,000; Quebec, $3,641,530; Ontario, $3,535,568; Manitoba, $409,999; Saskatchewan, $67,819; Alberta, $742,082; British Columbia and Territories, $476,695.

The average size of loans was $45,837, the average term five years, the shortest term less than one year and the longest term 15 years.

In making the report to Finance Minister Abbott, Graham F. Towers, bank president, said the volume of business was increasing gradually, if slowly.

From the character and diversity of applications received he believed that "there is not only need for the Bank of Canada but that it is likely to be able to operate on a self-supporting basis."

Earnings $427,322.

Earnings for the fiscal year ended Sept. 30, 1946, amounted to $427,322, as compared with 1945 earnings of $308,509. Interest on loans and investments, other than Dominion government securities, showed a sharp increase over the first fiscal period, rising from $10,566 to $138,172.

The report said that in the first fiscal year 485 applicants qualified as "industrial enterprises" under provisions of the Industrial Development Bank Act. Nearly half of these applications were withdrawn while in process of examination.

In the year ended Sept. 30, 1946, 105 of 409 eligible applications were withdrawn before the examinations had been completed, says the report.

Mr. Towers said borrowers were being encouraged to repay advances "as rapidly as is reasonably possible." The bank's staff had spent some time in advising prospective borrowers, who had subsequently arranged financing with other lending agencies.

In the last year, the report noted, there has been evidence of an increasing willingness on the part of other lenders to make long-term credits available to industrial enterprises.

POLICEMAN SHOT, FOUR WOUNDED IN GUN BATTLE

Negro Who Started Trouble Once Inmate of Insane Asylum

Murfreesboro, Tenn., Dec. 17 — (AP)— Murfreesboro was quiet today after yesterday's outbreak of gunplay which resulted in the death of one policeman, the wounding of four other persons and the shooting of a Negro responsible for the trouble.

Police said Edmond Haynes, 54, Negro, was removed to a jail at Nashville last night as a big crowd milled around outside the Murfreesboro jail. Haynes, former inmate of an insane asylum, shot a patrolman and wounded four other persons before he was himself wounded and surrendered late yesterday.

Police were investigating a report that Haynes was wanted in Toledo, O., in connection with the murder of his wife there several years ago.

Police said warrants had been signed charging Haynes with the murder of Herbert McLanahan, 38, Murfreesboro patrolman who died last night, and with attempt to commit murder against Fire Chief Buck Qualls, Sheriff Earl McNight and Police Chief N. W. Powers.

Haynes shot McLanahan as the patrolman questioned him following a complaint from a storekeeper that the Negro was acting suspiciously around his establishment. Leaving McLanahan wounded, Haynes ran three blocks to a house and there engaged officers in a gun battle.

Woman and Two Children Killed On Level Crossing

Drummondville, Que., Dec. 17— (CP) — A woman and two children were killed and three men were injured seriously yesterday when an automobile and a Canadian National Railways train collided outside this Arthabaska county town.

Mrs. Armand Nadeau, 35, and her children age three years and nine months, respectively, lost their lives when the car in which they were passengers was struck by the train at a level crossing at Nore Dame Du Bon Conseil, about 15 miles from Drummondville.

The woman's husband, Armand Nadeau, is in a critical condition in hospital here. Paul E. Trudel, driver of the machine and Henri Trudel, another occupant of the car, also are in hospital, suffering from fractures and body bruises.

SHOOTING AFFRAY IN WINDSOR CAFE WILL BE PROBED

Former Colonel In Army Under Police Guard After Pistol Is Fired

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 17 — (CP) —Lt. Col. D. C. Warnica, former Officer Commanding the 30th Reconnaissance Regiment, was in Metropolitan Hospital under police guard today after an affray in a downtown restaurant in which an automatic pistol was fired.

He suffered a badly lacerated index finger. May Chan, a waitress at the Shanghai Cafe on downtown Sandwich Street was taken to Hotel Dieu Hospital suffering a wrist injury.

Police held Lloyd Carl Wessel, 31, former taxi driver, for questioning.

Police said they were told the incident started early today when Wessel allegedly slapped his wife's face as she went to leave the restaurant. Col. Warnica, sitting alone in a nearby booth, heard the disturbance and walked to the Wessels' booth, police said they learned.

Witnesses quoted Co. Warnick as telling Wessel: "You can't do that to a woman."

Mrs. Hazel Thompson, seated with the Wessels, said an argument started between the two men. They began to grapple, moved away from the booth and, finally, behind another booth, out of her sight, Mrs. Thompson said.

She told police she saw no gun but heard a shot and saw a Chinese waitress running toward the kitchen. She heard the girl scream.

Police said they answered a telephone call from the restaurant and found the two men together. Wessel handed them a 7.65 mm. pistol, for which Col. Warnica produced a permit, they said.

The pistol had six live cartridges in the magazine; in the restaurant they found one spent bullet and one empty cartridge, executives said.

They quoted Col. Warnica as saying Wessel grabbed the pistol from his (Col. Warnica's) pocket and that it was fired during the struggle. Wessed told them Col. Warnica brought the gun from his own pocket and that he (Wessel) seized it from the former army man.

BULK OF VET PATIENTS MOVED TO KINGSTON

Ottawa, Dec. 17 — (CP)—Bulk of the 220 patients transferred to the Veterans Department Convalescent Hospital at Malton, Ont., after the Peterboro veterans hospital was destroyed by fire are being moved to Kingston, the Veterans Department said today.

Malton was the nearest hospital with sufficient accommodation at the time of the fire. Arrangements now have been made to accommodate them at the veterans hospital at Kingston, where more medical facilities are available.

About 50 patients at Kingston were moved to Rideau military hospital on the outskirts of Ottawa to make room for the patients from Malton.

U. K. Bacon Issue Cut Third, Bread Ration Menaced, Says Press

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 17 (CP).—London newspapers today headlined the United States grain export cut as a threat to Britain's bread ration, announced the bacon ration slash of one-third effective Jan. 5 and reported widespread electricity stoppages as the United Kingdom shivered in the winter's first real cold snap.

Even the test cricket match in Sydney, Australia was going badly for England, completing the worst accumulation of gloomy news in many weeks.

"Bread ration threatened," clamored the Daily Graphic, Conservative. "U.S. cut again exports to half what we need."

These are other stories typical of United Kingdom front pages:

1. Bacon ration will be cut from three to two ounces weekly, partly because of a fall off in Canadian shipments as farmers turned back to grain production to meet a world shortage.

2. Whisky supplies will be cut by 1/10th after Jan. 1, bringing some supplies down to 45 per cent of the 1938 figure.

3. Concern felt among British officials in Washington at the rate at which the United States loan is disappearing.

4. Sir Stafford Cripps, president of the Board of Trade, said yesterday in an address to the Canadian Chamber of Commerce that a world shortage of raw materials, particularly steel, is seriously affecting British hopes of reaching the export target.

5. Electricity supplies cut 10 per cent in central, southeast and southwest England and five per cent in northwest and mid-east England as sub-freezing temperatures brought a sharp increase in consumption.

The day's only really good news on the domestic front was a promised increase from two to 2½ pints in weekly non-priority milk supply.

Britain, making strenuous efforts to maintain the nine-ounce daily bread ration, asked the United States for 150,000 tons of grain during January but the Washington allocation announced last night was only 84,000 tons.

Higher Production Costs Chief Reason Says Prices Board

Chrysler, Ford And General Motors Made Appeal

Ottawa, Dec. 17 (CP)—A 10-per cent increase in the consumer price of new Canadian-made passenger automobiles and a seven per cent boost in the price of commercial vehicles, effective tomorrow, were announced today by the Prices Board.

Permission for the increases was granted, the Board said, because of higher prices being paid currently for essential imported parts and "substantially higher costs of both domestic labor and materials."

The companies who are permitted to make adjustments in prices are the Ford Motor Company of Canada, General Motors of Canada and the Chrysler Company of Canada, and the Board said the increase in price was allowed following demonstration by the three companies of the effect of higher production costs.

Board officials said that despite increased production costs, the permitted price increase has been held to a point where the price of domestically-produced cars compares "favorably" with that of imported cars.

A Canadian who imports a standard model from the United tates today would be obliged to pay upwards of 200 more than for the same Canadian-made car under the new domestic price ceiling, the Board declared.

Male "Wolves" On the Prowl In Calgary Wilds

Calgary, Dec. 17 — (CP) — Male "wolves," on the prowl for innocent waitresses, disperse early in Calgary, the Alberta Board of Industrial Relations heard yesterday.

Jerry Puckett, representative of the Calgary District Restaurant Association, told the Board that the "wolves" cause waitresses more grief around midnight than at two or 3 o'clock in the morning. The Board was hearing views of interested Calgary parties on minimum wages and hours of work.

A law now in force requires waitresses to stop work at 12.30 a.m. Mr. Puckett said the intention of the law was to protect them from undesirable male attention.

However, they run into more grief now than they used to, he said. The "wolves were on the prowl just after midnight, knowing the girls would be coming out at a definite time. Numerous waitresses had to leave by rear exits. But before the law was enforced, waitresses could be kept at work until two or three o'clock when parties were over, the city quiet and the "wolves" had dispersed.

A Board member suggested legislation for the "wolves" instead of the girls.

LETTERS CLARIFY DOMINION-N.S. TAX NEGOTIATIONS

Gap Between Two Governments Not Large Particularly on Question of Rights

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 17 —(CP)— Status of tax agreement negotiations between the Dominion and Nova Scotia was clearer today as a result of last night's release of an exchange of correspondence between Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Premier Macdonald.

The next move in the negotiations appeared to be up to Mr. Macdonald. He had before him Mr. King's letter of Dec. 14 which outlined the federal government's attitude toward the Nova Scotia proposals in a letter from Mr. Macdonald Dec. 5.

The letters, released simultaneously in Halifax and Ottawa, indicated that the gap between the two governments is not large, particularly on questions of taxation rights.

Mr. Macdonald said his government is ready to refrain "temporarily" from collecting personal income and inheritance taxes. It is also prepared to allow a five per cent tax to be collected on its behalf by the Dominion.

In return for these concessions the province would accept a $15 per capita subsidy and would ask the Dominion to vacate the gasoline, amusement and electricity tax fields. In addition it would ask for re-establishment of a $1,300,000 special subsidy paid between 1935 and 1942.

While these requests covered Mr. Macdonald's specific demands for financial concessions, he asked assurances that Dominion-Provincial conferences would be held at fixed dates every year and that the governments of the Dominion be brought together to work out a reallocation of duties and sources of revenue.

Welcomes Offer.

Mr. King welcomed the offer to vacate the major tax fields for a temporary period. He mentioned the federal government's recent decision to vacate the gasoline tax field next April 1.

John T. Truaisch Named Police Chief at Kingston

Kingston, Dec. 17 (CP)—Deputy Chief J. T. Truaisch has been appointed police chief, Board of Police Commissioners announced today.

Mr. Truaisch succeeds Chief R. J. Robinson, who has been on leave of absence after serving as chief constable for 37 years.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Dec. 17—(CP)—Synopsis: A cold wave is sweeping across the province this morning. It follows in the wake of an intense storm which has moved rapidly northeastward across Northern Ontario. Winds of gale force are reported from most stations. Skies are clearing at present but heavy clouds are expected to develop over the Great Lakes. Drifting east or southeast these will bring persistent snow to some localities.

VISITS IN DISTRICT AFTER 40 YEARS

His first visit to Hastings County in over four decades, Mr. Russell P. Gould, formerly of Moira, is renewing old friendships and acquaintances both in his native village and in Cannifton.

Mr. Gould, who has been the guest of his brother William J. Gould, is a prosperous farmer in the vicinity of Moose Jaw, Sask. He left his home in Moira forty-three years ago and remained in the West ever since.

TWO PICTON MEN BUY MITT AND GLOVE FIRM

Walter S. Fraser and Jack Welbanks of Picton have purchased the M. Branscombe and Son mitt and glove manufacturing business in the Prince Edward County town, it was announced today. The young men are local war veterans, who have secured the plant as a result of the death of William (Bill) Branscombe, who passed away suddenly last September.

The new owners took full control of their new business on Monday morning and the plant will be fully operated under the name of M. Branscombe and Son.

Welbanks served with the First Canadian Division headquarters staff throughout its overseas service while Fraser, former Albert College student and athlete was a pay lieutenant in the Royal Canadian Navy. Up to this week he was associated with his father's firm of G. E. Fraser & Sons, Picton.

The newly acquired business was founded in 1876 by the late Matilda Branscombe and has remained in the family since.

SLIPPERY PAVEMENTS SANDED EARLY IN DAY

With sidewalks and city streets sheathed in ice, traffic conditions were extremely hazardous this morning. City workmen, however, were out bright and early with truck and bucket, sanding dangerous gradients. At that, early morning workers slithered and slid to their places of employment with some consolation that temperatures were rising.

COLDER WEATHER HELPS WOOD CUTTING

The recent cold snap will prove an asset to farmers and others who depend on the swamps of the district for their annual wood supply. Heavy frosts without snow provides a solid bottom in the water-filled woodlands facilitating cutting and hauling. Last year farmers were seriously handicapped with heavy falls of snow with no frost and some were prevented from cutting their wood supplies until early in the new year.

GIRL SERIOUSLY HURT IN CAR ACCIDENT

Seven-year-old Joan Kimmett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Kimmett, 100 Chatham Street, was severely injured in a car accident on Sunday night and admitted to Belleville General Hospital suffering with a badly lacerated arm and facial hurts. She is expected to remain in hospital for the next seven days at least.

The little girl was riding in a car with her parents when the vehicle is alleged to have gone out of control on loose gravel near Napanee and hurtled into the ditch where it turned turtle. Mr. and Mrs. Kimmett were badly shaken up but otherwise were uninjured.

Christmas Seals Symbol of Hope To T.B. Sufferers

"Reminder Cards" have been mailed out by the Hastings County Tuberculosis Association to recipients of all unanswered Christmas Seal letters, according to Mr. D. L. Storey, Seal Campaign chairman.

"The association has found," he said, "that in the rush of Christmas preparations people often forget to send their contributions and appreciate a notice reminding them of their oversight.

"Since the sale opened November 25th, we have received $2,680.00 which is 35 per cent of our quota. We anticipate that the reminder cards will bring a prompt response from enough outstanding letters to enable the association to go ahead with its 1947 tuberculosis control program. The work of the association is supported by numerous small contributions rather than a few large ones. It has become a Canadian tradition for everybody to unite in the fight against tuberculosis by buying and using Christmas seals.

The appeal this year for the purchase of seals is made in order that mass X-ray surveys can be carried on in the County of Hastings. Mass surveys have been held in Belleville, Madoc, Marmora and Tweed in the past two years and it is hoped to complete the County of Hastings within the next two years.

Christmas seals are the symbol of hope to all sufferers from tuberculosis and through X-ray it is possible to locate and prevent the spread of this disease. Tuberculosis is contagious but if located in its early stages can be cured.

Cheques should be made payable to the Hastings County Tuberculosis Association and mailed to Christmas Seal Committee, Box 154, Belleville, Ont.

Suspended Sentence Given for Forgery

Pleading guilty on eight counts of forgery and four counts of uttering forged documents, Edward O'Shaughnessy, age 24, Plainfield, was given two years' suspended sentence by Magistrate T. Y. Wills when he appeared in local magistrate's court Tuesday morning.

Two other youths, James Nevery, age 18, and Douglas Wright, pleaded guilty of uttering four of the above documents and likewise had sentences suspended, the former for twelve months, and the latter for six months.

The documents forged by O'Shaugnessy were all cheques drawn on the account of Fred Hodgins of Plainfield and were cashed in Belleville with merchants and at a local bank. Total amount involved was $508.

According to summary evidence given by Inspector Hayes, O'Shaughnessy had forged Hodgins' name to the cheques and cashed four of them. Three of the other cheques had been cashed by Nevery and one was cashed by Wright, with O'Shaughnessy paying the youths for getting the cheques cashed.

All three accused were represented by counsel, with Alan B. Sprague appearing for O'Shaughnessy; R. A. Pringle for Wright, and E. E. Follwell for Nevery. Costs in each case were ordered paid by the accused.

SERIOUSLY HURT

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 17 (CP) — Stanley Peters, 19, and his cousin, George Peters, 19, were seriously injured early today when their automobile struck a hydro pole in East Windsor.

Hospital attendants said Stanley suffered a possible fractured skull and the other youth a severe spine injury.

Kenneth M. Couch Mayor of Trenton, Defeats Cory, 222

Trenton, Ont. (Special) — In what is said to be the largest civic vote polled in the history of the town, Mayor Harry Cory, chief magistrate for the past thirteen years, went down to defeat before Kenneth M. Couch in the town elections held here yesterday. Ross Burtt finished in third place in the mayoralty race.

Mayor-elect Couch polled 1197 votes as against 975 given Mayor Cory and 506 balloted for Councillor Burtt. The new mayor's plurality over Mayor Cory was 222.

Clarence Saylor, in his first attempt at municipal government led the councillor poll with 1507 votes leading second place Gerald Weaver who polled 1316 by 91 votes. With six councillors to be elected the next four successful candidates in order are Claude V. Graham, 1301; William Bradshaw, 1200; Victor Ryan, 1161 and Norman Banfield, 1139.

Defeated were Sherman Graham 1092; Charles Allore, 963; Henry LaFleur, 844; Ed. A. Simmons, 826 and S. Roy Westfall, 492.

Grant Rathbun headed the polls for Public School Trustees with a vote of 1637. Next in order came Jesse Goodsell, 1359; Harry Sager, 1294; Lloyd E. York, 1089 and Ernest A. Wiggins, 977. The only defeated candidate was Nortrand Sprague with 619 votes.

James E. Holmes was given an acclamation as public utilities commissioner.

An unusual feature of the election was the necessity of replacing ballot boxes. The vote was so heavy that on numerous occasions the boxes were crammed full and additional ones were necessary.

County Federation Of Agriculture Holds Meeting

The annual meeting of the Hastings County Federation of Agriculture was held in Shire Hall, Belleville, on December 13, with President Chas. Rush in the chair. Treasurer's reports given by Col. R. Vanderwater showed a small surplus. H. L. Fair reported on Federation broadcasts over CJBQ on Saturdays at 12:45, and also the good work being accomplished by showing of National Film Board pictures.

Election of officers resulted in Chas. Rush being returned as president; Seldon Homan, 1st vice president; R. Longwell, 2nd Vice President; Ross C. Bailey, secretary; Col. R. Vanderwater, treasurer; Directors: W. Spencer, Earl Whiteman, Elmer Post, Chas. Keene, John Moore Jr., W. J. Davis, Mrs. R. Robson, and a Junior Farmers' director to be appointed by their executive.

Col. Vanderwater addressed the meeting as to the value of farm organizations and although not in favor of strikes, thought that deputations from farmers' organizations were a big help in interviewing government departments with a view to an increase in prices.

Motorist Accidently Uncovers Large Number Of Stolen Cigarettes

It isn't often that packing cases full of cigarettes are found unattended on parking lots, but just that was discovered this morning by a Northbrook resident who accidentally made the discovery of the thus far unclaimed tobacco and cigarettes.

The Northbrook man was backing his car into a parking position at the rear of a Front street store and sensed that his car struck something which yielded quite readily. Investigation revealed two large confection packing cases into which cigarettes and tobacco had been thrown loosely. The cartons were open when found.

The cigarettes were turned over to local police who advanced the theory that the tobacco had been stolen and discarded when the thieves believed they were in danger of being apprehended.

Out-of-Town Solicitors For Advertising Will Be Given 'Brush-off'

Chamber of Commerce directors have concurred in a recommendation of the Junior Board of Trade that all solicitations for advertising for small out-of-town publications be referred to the secretary-manager of the Chamber for investigation and that the secretary advise all members of the Chamber of the procedure.

It was felt that such action would prove to be a deterrent to these out-of-town solicitors and also a protection to the merchant and the householder. Once the practice is established directors were of the opinion that some people engaged in this sort of business would give this city a wide berth.

Changes in Food Merchandising In Past 40 Years Outlined to Rotary

The average family spends nearly 40 per cent of its income for food and of this in 1939 it was estimated that the independent grocer sold 60 per cent and the chain store 40 per cent. During the past six years the independents have increased this figure slightly, Russell Hachborn, manager National Grocers here told the Rotary Club in a classification address on Monday.

Rotarian Hachborn stated that during the past 40 years people's appetites have changed as much as their living habits. The present modern marketeria when compared with the dingy, lamp-lit store with its cracker barrel and cast-iron stove is an illustration of what has taken place in the wholesale field as well.

Prior to World War I the wholesale grocery business carried a restricted number of grocery lines. Terms were lenient and long because profits were long and business was carried on in a leisurely fashion by several independent wholesalers for each district. They were "the good old days" Mr. Hachborn said, because profits were large.

Lush Times Ended in 1922

The first jolt came around 1922. Sugar had been selling at $25 the bag with other prices in proportion. There was a lot of money made but the bottom dropped out overnight. The result was the grocery wholesalers found themselves on the verge of bankruptcy.

At this point a new business, the chain stores was entering the field, a business that did not need the local wholesaler because they secured their supplies from their own central warehouses. They were not "given long to live."

To the contrary, however, Mrs. Housewife, the speaker said, liked the clean bright stores. She was quick to note the cheaper prices and in some of the stores she was allowed to pick what she wanted off the shelves. The chain stores expanded and were here to stay.

Mr. Hachborn reviewed the progress of his company since that time recalling the great change in the general appetite since his company came into being.

Nearly a third of the volume of food now is in fresh fruits and vegetables such as cabbage, carrots, celery, lettuce which are available the year round. Bananas are also a year round fruit, he said, predicting that there will be plenty of bananas available after the New Year and that they will be sold ripe as banana companies have threatened to cut off the supplies of any wholesaler who sells green stock. Some months his company has handled four to five carloads of this fruit, some 2,000 stems in all.

Outlining some of the supplies his company sold during the past month the speaker included some 42,000 pounds of mincemeat, 7,200 cases fruit juices, 50,000 pounds of nuts in shell, two tons of cocoanut, one carload California grapes, 60,000 pounds prunes, 10,000 pounds Christmas candy, 3,000 cases canned tomatoes, 3,000 cases canned peas and three carloads of oranges.

Scarce Items Soon Available

He predicted that peanut butter next year would sell for 39 cents per pound jar. Soaps would be more plentiful, and better in quality in early 1947. Shortening would also be more plentiful next year while sugar should be back to normalcy by July. Tapioca should be available before very long and salmon is now on the way, but there would be only sufficient for one month's supply.

Rotarian Hachborn at the conclusion of his address, presented members of the club with a half-pound tin of coffee. He was introduced by Rotarian Gus Freeman with club appreciation voiced by Rotarian Ed. Bernstein.

During the business session of the luncheon, President Bert Howard thanked the Hotel Quinte management on behalf of his club for the annual "free" luncheon.

Charges Against Cheddar Cheese Co. Dismissed for Lack of Evidence

Failure of the Crown to establish as cheddar cheese the Black Diamond cheese sold by Belleville Cheddar Cheese, Ltd., resulted in the dismissal on Monday of three charges against the above firm which had been laid by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

The Belleville cheese distributing firm had been charged with selling cheese at a price higher than the maximum which may be charged, of purchasing cheese for a price higher than at which it may be sold, and of keeping improper invoices. The charges were heard in city police court before Magistrate J. B. Garvin of Kingston who dismissed all three counts on lack of sufficient evidence.

The charges were presented by Special Prosecutor A. B. Collins, K.C., of Belleville, assisted by J. D. Arnup of Toronto, while J. J. Robinette of Toronto acted as defence counsel.

In giving evidence on the charge of selling cheese above the maximum price for which it may be sold under WPTB regulation, Mr. Ralph A. Wright, senior regional investigator for the Prices Board submitted sales invoices showing sales of cheese by Belleville Cheddar Cheese to wholesalers, retailers and consumer purchasers. The prices quoted in each case were above the maximum which could be charged under Prices Board regulations, according to the witness. The invoices referred to the commodity being sold as either "white" or "Black Diamond" cheese and the Crown failed to identify the latter as being "cheddar" cheese.

The charges were laid by the Prices Board under regulations concerning cheddar cheese.

Included in the invoice mark-ups on sales to wholesale customers were 1-8 cent per pound for waxing which the witness stated was allowable, and one-half cent per pound buying commission which the witness said was "possibly not allowable."

Witness stated that with respect to sales to retailers Belleville Cheddar Cheese invoices showed mark-ups of as much as four cents per pound more than was allowable. In one instance invoices indicated sales to a consumer at 40 cents per pound when the retail selling price was stated to be 31 cents per pound.

Under cross examination by Defence Counsel Robinette, witness admitted that officials of Belleville Cheddar Cheese had shown every co-operation when the investigation by the W.P.T.B. had commenced. Witness also admitted that processed cheese did not come under regulations laid down for the cheddar variety.

Instructor Called

District Cheese factory instructor George Pollard was called to the stand and classified Black Diamond cheese as being "cheddar" cheese, ripened and cut into various sizes. On cross examination, however, the witness admitted he did not know the handling procedure by Belleville Cheddar Cheese and he would not agree that Black Diamond cheese was considered in the Belleville area as being a "premium" cheese.

Asked regarding the processing methods used in the manufacture of processed cheese, the witness replied he was not certain but agreed with Magistrate Garvin that in many instances second and third grade cheddar cheese was ground with other ingredients being added.

"When does cheddar cheese lose its characteristic as cheddar cheese?" asked Magistrate Garvin. "I can't say," replied the witness.

Moved For Dismissal

In moving for dismissal of the charge against his client Mr. Robinette claimed that the Crown had presented no evidence to show that the Black Diamond cheese as described in the invoices was cheddar cheese.

No evidence was offered by Defence Counsel Robinette prior to his asking dismissal for his client.

In reply assistant counsel for the Crown, Mr. Arnup, referred to the "buying commission" cited on the invoices declaring that this could not be entered to increase the mask-up of cheese sold. He also pointed to the invoice item "inward freight" which he declared was in violation to the regulations which called for cheese sales by the factory to be "f.o.b. factory shipping point."

In conclusion Mr. Arnup held that Black Diamond cheese was cheddar and that it was not necessary for the Crown to prove the fact in all cases where Black Diamond was specified in the invoices.

With the dismissal by the magistrate of the charge involving the sale of cheese at a price above the maximum, the Crown was undecided whether to proceed with the remaining two charges. During noon recess, however, the Crown decided to proceed with the resumption of proceedings. Magistrate Garvin ruled that evidence in the first charge was applicable to the second and third charge and the accused was found not guilty on all counts.

Fire Hazard to be Avoided During Season of Christmas; Fire Marshal's Letter to Fire Chiefs

Fire Chief W. J. Lynch has received a copy of the Ontario Fire Marshal's communication to all Fire Chiefs in the province noting the safeguard to be taken for the prevention of fires in the Christmas season with its many functions and entertainments. The hazards are cited and the recommendations and advice should be read by everyone. The circular is as follows:

Dangers From Lighting

"To all Fire Chiefs in Ontario:

"In the excitement of Christmas parties, safety from fire may be forgotten. But only a momentary forgetfulness will allow a disastrous fire to start. No victim of fire ever thought that fire would come in the manner or at the time it occurred. Safety suggestions are based on actual experiences which show how fire accidents happened and the precautions that could have prevented them.

"Most fires occur from special Christmas lighting, particularly candles. Any open flame lighting should be arranged in fixed suitable holders well away from flammable decorations, Christmas trees, window curtains and table cloths. Constant watch by adults should be maintained over them while lighted. Electric lighting circuits designed for tree illumination should be examined for defects and proper size fuses.

"For candlelight services, only fixed holders for candles should be permitted, and these located well removed from decorations and from where the public will pass. Much to be preferred are fixed electrical systems with specially designed electrical candles. The dangers from carrying or holding lighted candles by the public taking part in the services are much too great ever to be allowed. Flashlights have been satisfactorily adopted for members of the choir or for services requiring moving lights.

Avoid Inflammable Decorations

"Flammable decorations should be kept to a minimum. They provide fuel for a rapid fire from any source of ignition. Metal, glass or asbestos decorations should be preferred in any selection. Flameproofing treatment for paper and fabrics is available at low cost. In public buildings, flammable decorations should be prohibited.

"Smoking habits are particularly important because of the quantities of wrappings, decorations and trees that might become involved. Matches and lighters should not be used near a tree, curtain or decorations, and extra care exercised in lighting or throwing away matches.

"An evergreen tree dries out rapidly in a warm room and should remain in a building for a few days only. It will retain freshness longer if the base is cut diagonally and stands in a pan of water. Location and support of the tree is important—well away from fireplaces, stoves, heaters and light bulbs and far distant from exit doors. The tree should be well supported, preferably with metal rods or wires.

Loose Paper Wrappings

Disposal of loose paper wrappings should be effected immediately in a metal can or barrel with metal cover. It is hazardous to leave loose papers around and it is dangerous to burn them in quantity in a stove or furnace.

"For gatherings at Christmas concerts and Christmas tree parties, emergency fire fighting equipment should be provided at an easily accessible location near, but not too close, to the tree. Fire extinguishers of pump tank or soda-acid types, or a length of garden or fire hose sufficient to reach any part of the area about the tree and ready for instant use, are most effective. Exits should be unlocked and unobstructed at all times that the building is occupied. In case of fire, call the Fire Department immediately.

"Children need supervision. Santa must observe safety rules to give them a Merry Christmas.

Signed "W. J. Scott,
"Ontario Fire Marshal."

Municipal Schools At Certain Centres Said Satisfactory

Toronto, Jan. 17 — (CP)—Municipal Affairs Minister George Dunbar said today that school sessions on municipal affairs his department is holding throughout Ontario are proving "so satisfactory civic officials can't figure why such a plan wasn't followed long ago."

The sessions, supervised by Mr. Dunbar, are not only for civic officials but also for elected representatives, and to date aldermen have been among their keenest boosters. A. J. B. Gray, deputy minister of municipal affairs, attends the sessions with other departmental experts.

Last week the school was set up for two days in both Belleville and Brockville and sessions are scheduled for the lakehead cities of Fort William and Port Arthur "when it warms up a bit — probably March."

Papers on various phases of municipal administration are read at the schools and a questionnaire held at each morning session. At the noon recess a box is set up for written questions, all of which are dealt with in the afternoon session.

Mr. Dunbar said that a representative of an Ottawa accounts firm which audits books for the city of Brockville was so impressed with the school that the following day he had members of his firm come from Ottawa to listen to proceedings.

Settles Question Of Mayoral Robes

Vancouver, Dec. 17 (CP) — He doesn't take office until Jan. 2, but Vancouver's mayor-elect Senator G. G. McGeer took his first civic hurdle in true style today. He settled once and for all—he hopes—the question of the city's two sets of mayoral robes around which civic controversy has waged since last summer.

One set was bought and paid for by the Senator when he was in office in 1935-36. But this didn't come out until last summer and when it did Mayor Jack Cornett quickly shed the robe and ordered a new flowing, black mayoral gown from the tailor —at the offer of former Lieutenant-Governor Eric Hamber, who is footing the bill.

Senator McGeer took his gowns to city archivist Maj. J. S. Matthews who gratefully received them as the city first such robes, which were used when the Lord Mayor of London and the King and Queen visited Vancouver.

But since the Senator's election Dec. 11 the tailor has announced that, the post-war clothing situation being what it is, the cornett-ordered robes wouldnt be ready for the Senator's "inauguration" in January. And tradition-conscious Vancouver citizens immediately asked: "Will Gerry go to his first council meeting as the new mayor in a business suit?"

The Senator, accustomed to "doing things properly" said he would not. He will be robed in his own mayoral gown "which I left with Maj. Matthews only on the understanding that I could use it at any time."

What will happen after the city-ordered gown is furnished?

"Well," said the Senator, "I'll wear them at the hall and take the one I paid for back to Maj. Matthews. They have quite a value now as an archives piece."

15-Year-Old Boy Admits Stabbing

Chicago, Dec. 17 — (AP) — A 15-year-old boy who went to visit his mother to exchange Christmas presents last night was held without charge today after, police said, he fatally stabbed his mother's 50-year-old fiance to protect her from being choked.

Police said the youth related orally that he plunged a 10-inch butcher knife into the back of Charles Sensenich, an optometrist, when he seized his mother, Mrs. Mary Williamson, 47.

"I pushed him off," police quoted the boy as saying, "but he grabbed her again.

"My mother's face was turning red. I thought she was being strangled to death. I found the knife in the kitchen alcove and stabbed Sencenich."

TO SPEND CHRISTMAS HOME

Phoenixville, Pa., Dec. 17—(AP) —Cpl. Chester R. Perkins, blind 21-year-old veteran whose letter asking Santa Claus for 'two bright shiny blue eyes' attracted wide attention, is going to play Santa Claus to his family in Indianapolis.

Perkins, whose sight was destroyed by a land mine in Germany, will leave hospital Saturday where he has been a patient for 21 months.

In his widely published letter, written to the Indianapolis News, which copyrighted it, Perkins, hopelessly blind, writes:

"If God chooses, let me find beneath my Christmas tree two bright shiny blue eyes — so that the memory of the last Christmas I saw may be blotted forever from my mind."

C.A.S. Kiddies To be Remembered By Kinsmen Club

Despite the fact that it was found impossible to make arrangements for the annual Kinsmen Christmas party for wards of the Children's Aid, the kiddies under the care of this organization will not be forgotten by Santa Claus.

For Monday evening at the regular Kinsmen club meeting, final arrangements of parcel wrapping were made as approximately 45 of the "Kinettes" turned out to assist in this important phase of holiday preparations. Loads of parcels containing toys and sweets, as well as other things gladden the kiddies' hearts on Christmas morning, were neatly wrapped in readiness for distribution.

The Kinsmen Club during the past number of years has made it a practice to stage a party for the wards of the Children's Aid but this year found it impossible. The party will be held as usual next year, however.

Vocal numbers by Miss Barbara Diment who acted as her own piano accompanist, were enjoyed at the joint Kinsmen and Kinette" meeting, while President Newton Wilbur presided.

C.N.R. Veterans Hold Christmas Party for Kiddies

The annual Christmas party of the Canadian National Railways War Veterans' Association was held at the Quinte Hotel Friday evening with members of the association together with their wives and families joining in the Christmas festivities.

Following a splendid program of vocal and instrumental numbers Jamie Clarke officiated as Santa Claus and delighted the many kiddies as he handed out presents for all.

Assisting in the musical program in charge of Larry Amo were the Lloyd sisters, Dora, Marie and Joan, who favored with piano numbers; vocal numbers by Mrs. Wiltshire, G. Gulliver, accordian; H. Fry, electric guitar, Marie Nash, guitar; and humorous stories by Harold Foote. Mrs. Bradley at the piano assisted in the community singing of Christmas carols.

One of the highlights of the evening's program was the presentation of a cigarette case to Mr. James Walden, past president of the association, in recognition of his splendid work with the association. Mr. Walden recently moved to Niagara Falls.

That the association is doing its share toward brightening the Christmas for veterans in hospital was made known with the announcement by Chairman H. McElrath that 1700 cigarettes in packets of 50 had been made up by the Legion ladies for the veterans' Christmas tree at the C.D.S. store.

Senator Bilbo Will be Given Chance to Explain

Washington, Dec. 17 — (AP) — Senator Theodore G. Bilbo (Dem.-Miss.) appeared likely to get a chance today to relate his side of the story of his relations with a dozen war contractors who:

1. Loaned him money;
2. Bought him a car;
3. Dug him a lake and,
4. Contributed more than $30,000 for his futile campaign to elect Wall Doxey to the United States Senate in 1942.

Chairman James Mead (Dem.-N.Y.) of a Senate war investigating sub-committee said Bilbo probably would be called today.

The committee would have preferred to wait for Bilbo's rebuttal until after examining Edward P. Terry, Bilbo's secretary from 1939 until last January. But Terry, who claims his life has been threatened if he says anything against his former boss, has been in a Quitman, Miss., hospital with a heart ailment and is not due to arrive here until tomorrow.

Bilbo told reporters he planned to present a written statement explaining his side of the affair He recently underwent a mouth operation but though his speech is somewhat slurred and indistinct as a result, he said he is ready to answer any questions the committee may put to him.

Yesterday's session brought details of how contractors — all of whom held lucrative government contracts in Mississippi—painted the senator's "dream house" home at Poplarville, contributed to the nearby Juniper Grove Baptist Church at his request, dug him a swimming pool and performed other favors.

Drive, Walk Carefully

Warning that a quick change in provincial weather conditions will result in a sharp rise in traffic accidents unless drivers and pedestrians exercise greater care, the Hon. George Doucett, Minister of Highways has issued an appeal to "make this a safe as well as a Merry Christmas in Ontario."

"Ontario's first real freeze-up each year invariably heralds a bad upswing in motor vehicle accidents, particularly in our cities and towns," Mr. Doucett points out. "Right now is a critical accident period. The traffic is very heavy due to the Christmas rush and the unusual fine weather has probably lulled many drivers into a false sense of security. Wet weather, ice and snow, crowds of hurrying people and everybody thinking of Christmas are accident-making conditions which drivers and pedestrians should keep in mind. Another point to remember is that Ontario's peak hour for fatal traffic accidents is from 5 to 6 o'clock in the evening. People are tired then and hurrying and in the winter months, the light and visibility is bad." The traffic accident rate in Ontario is now averaging about 36 percent higher than the comparative figures for 1945, according to Mr. Doucett, and to the end of September there were 453 people killed and 8707 injured this year in motor vehicle accidents in the province."

"December isn't Ontario's worst month for fatal accident," the Minister stated. "That usually comes in October, but the December record is bad enough. In the last 16 Decembers, there have been 886 people killed and 14,267 injured in motor vehicle accidents in Ontario. Traffic accidents reached a peak in 1941 when there were 801 deaths and 14,225 personal injuries. The December toll that year was 84 killed and 1286 injured."

The Christmas holiday season, while not as serious as the school opening period in September, is a bad time for child accidents, Mr. Doucett also notes. Over the 16-year period that comprehensive records have been kept by the Motor Vehicles Branch of the Highways department, an average of 7 children of 14 years and under have been killed and 130 injured every December in Ontario. The toll last year was 6 killed and 139 injured.

"Terrible at any time, there is something particularly tragic about child accidents in the Christmas season," Mr. Doucett comments. "The question is what can we do to prevent such accidents. The answer depends on everybody, including the children themselves."

Mr. Doucett gives six suggestions for making this a "safe as well as a Merry Christmas in Ontario."

Every driver, and there are over a million licensed drivers in Ontario, should remember two things: (a) in the Christmas holiday season there are nearly 650,000 children more exposed to traffic hazards than during the school term and (b) the children have their minds on Christmas, play and pleasures.

The most dangerous hours are the rush hours, particularly from 4 to 8 in the evening.

Every pedestrian including children should remember that the greatly increased traffic, poor visibility and unfavorable weather and road surface conditions and crowds of hurrying people create added hazards.

Treat every parked vehicle as a danger-zone of hidden children. Emergency braking on slippery pavement will not save lives.

Exercise caution when entering or leaving your driveway.

Drive safely and walk safely at all times and make sure that your own children play safely too.

U. N. Capital

In the city of New York on seventeen acres of ground will rise the capital of the United Nations. The site is one lying along the East River between Forty-Second and Forty-Eighth streets. This decision is one of the achievements of the present session of the United Nations Assembly now closed, that the United Nations will soon have a permanent home.

The speed with which the decision came after the offer of the site by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is seen as an impressive sign of the United Nations' permanence in the world.

The U.N. capital will be in one of the great centres of the thought and business of the world. New World nations will take it as of much significance that the majority of the nations of the earth have chosen a site in the New World.

New York Times commenting a few days ago before the final decision was reached said of the site that it stirs the imagination "Here is the open space of the river, never to be cut off. Here is rock to build upon, providing, as the headquarters committee agreed, foundations for the tallest buildings that may be desired. We cannot say that the League of Nations failed because it was cloistered in Geneva, but we can be sure that the idea of a cloitered existence can never be part of the United Nations. All through the Charter runs like a refrain the phrase 'international peace and security,' but it is not the peace of open fields, of quiet forests, of escape from the drive and tumult of human life on this earth. The peace and security must exist in the desires and emotions, the purposes and plans of men, at the point of their greatest activity."

The Times says that "if the campaign for international peace and security is so successful that more room than seventeen acres is some day required, we believe the extra space will be forthcoming. We like to think that upon those eternal rocks of mid-Manhattan a solid edifice for mankind may be built."

Turkey Bells

Bells are a part of our countryside tradition. From white-spired churches in small villages bells toll the hours through the repeating seasons. From May to September cowbells send notes from upland pastures; farm dinner bells peal the news of high twelve to men in the fields. In winter, bells swing from the collars of the work horses and jingle their cheerful tunes from the shafts of pungs and cutters. All these have had their praises sung. Scant has been the recognition and sparse the comment on turkey bells.

At the turn of the century, before turkey raising became a matter of incubators, wire porches and scientifically balanced vitamin-bolstered diets, most farms had small flocks for home use and perhaps a few extra birds to sell to customers in the village. Along in the fall, when the turkeys weighed eight or ten pounds and began to wander farther and farther away from the farmstead, it was the custom, to put bells on a few of the birds. The mail order catalogs had them to sell: polished bell-metal turkey bells; diameter one and three-fourths inches; enables the flock to be easily located; makes the foxes shy. Furnished complete with strap; weight three ounces; price 10 cents."

In the late fall, as the dignified, unhurried birds wandered over the upland pastures and mowing fields and went into the beech grove for the triangular-shaped sweet nuts, it was reassuring to hear the faint, sweet soft tones of the small bells as they floated down to the farmyard. When it grew toward dusk the countryman could tell where the flock was feeding and go directly to it. Each night the birds were driven home to roost on poles in the rear of the tool shed. One doesn't hear the tinkle of the little bells any longer.

—New York Times

An Ever-Available Opportunity

Among the various weeks, Book Week, Health Week, Citizens Week, it is reassuring to hear of Bible Week.

In times of stress men instinctively acknowledge a Power greater than themselves. The Plymouth Fathers, landing on the rock-bound shores of New England, gave thanks to their Heavenly Father. Nelson, on his death bed, thanked God that he had done his duty. And Cardinal Wolsey, dying in disgrace, wept that he had not served God better.

Two thousand years ago Christ said, "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." The truth of His words and the need of them speak louder with the hours.

Bible Week is a reminder of an ever-available opportunity daily to turn to the Scriptures, to find guidance in the commandments, courage in the lives of the apostles, and peace in the infinite comfort of the promises.

LAST SERVICE

I shall go and sadly say,
Standing with the throng:
"Though my friend has gone away,
'Twill not be for long."

I shall look upon his face,
Peaceful, cold and still,
Knowing to his resting place
Follow soon I will.

I shall mark the flowers about,
Wreath and red-rose spray;
See the good priest stepping out,
Soothing words to say.

I shall think at journey's end,
Whensoe'er it be,
I am sure of one more friend
Waiting there for me.

Mr. W. C. Mikel, K.C., of this city, has been appointed Provincial Magistrate for the City of Belleville by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council to succeed the late Stewart Masson. Mr. Mikel has served the city as an alderman, mayor, city clerk, city solicitor and auditor. The first Provincial Magistrate for the Town of Belleville was appointed in 1862. He was the late Smith Bartlett, a lawyer, who was practising here at that time. He held the office for seven years and was succeeded in 1869 by the late Abraham Diamond. He held office until his death in 1880. In 1881 the late Thomas Holden, barrister, received the appointment, and he held the office until his death in 1884. In 1885 Mr. J. J. B. Flint, Barrister, received the appointment and he held the office until he resigned in 1907 when Mr. Stewart Masson, barrister, was appointed to the office. Mr. Masson died some months ago and now Mr. Mikel assumes the office for which he is eminently qualified.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

(By the Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Dec. 17 (CP)—The six-way realignment of federal cabinet portfolios will bring with it readjustment of ministerial staffs. Practically every minister who switched from one portfolio to another will bring with him the chief member of his staff.

For instance, Hon. Douglas Abbott who switches from the Defence to the Finance Department will bring with him Dick Hunter, his executive assistant, Miss Doris L. Bentley, his private secretary, and Miss Edith Sheppard.

Hon. Brooke Claxton, who moves from the Health to the Defence Department, will bring with him A. E. Ainger, his private secretary, and Miss Irene Dunn, his assistant private secretary.

Hon. Paul Martin, who moves from the State Secretary to the Health Department will take Don Emmerson, his private secretary, three stenographers and a messenger.

Rt. Hon. J. L. Ilsley, who moves from the Finance to the Justice Department, will bring with him Miss A. L. Wickware, his private secretary, and two other members of his staff.

Rt. Hon. Louis St. Laurent, who gave up the Justice Department to devote his full-time to External Affairs will take with him his private secretary, Maurice Bernier, and possibly some others, although the changes have not yet been decided upon.

Hon. Colin Gibson, who moves from the Air Ministry to the State Secretary's Department, will bring with him W. O. Davis, his private secretary. Other moves have not been decided definitely.

The question of creation of a Maritime commission will be revived again at the next session of parliament, it is expected.

A large section of the marine industry has indicated it is in favor of the appointment of such a body to deal solely with the problems of that industry, as is done in the United States. The government has been holding off from taking the step, possibly because of the complexities involved in shifting jurisdiction into a single agency.

It now is reported that a move is under way among shipbuilders to lend their weight to the proposal along with that of ship owners and operators, and some action toward re-awakening the government's interest may be looked for before the end of January.

The long-awaited report of the Royal Commission on coal will definitely be in the hands of Reconstruction Minister Howe before the end of the year. That's the latest word from commission sources.

The commissioners, under Mr. Justice W. F. Carroll of Halifax, now are in Ottawa putting the final touches to the last sections of the report. Other portions of the bulky documents are in the hands of the printers, and much of the report already has been printed.

While there has been no announcement whether or not it will be held up for tabling at the next session of parliament, it is believed the report will be made public early in January.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

MANIFESTATIONS OF IODINE DEFICIENCY

Men and women approaching middle age (well, what do you think?) commonly develop some of the following complaints:

Chronic tired feeling which is little if any relieved by vacation or rest; lack of usual or former energy or pep; premature graying of hair and other signs of premature aging, poor circulation as evidenced by cold hands and feet; a desire for more clothing or more artificial heat or warmth in circumstances where normal individuals feel comfortable or even too warm for comfort; a tendency to accumulate flabby fat, clacker flesh; mental torpor, and often depression of spirits or a change from former cheerful temperament to a bleak or melancholy frame of mind.

Now when you and I were young, Maggie, any quack could have told you, and probably did, that such complaints come from your liver and all you need is. . . but I hasten to tell you that such complaints may signify any of a dozen ailments I shall not even mention ,and that if you are gifted with a little common sense you will leave it to your doctor to advise you what to do about it.

I have necessarily acquired some knowledge of human nature—so I imagine not more than one in ten readers who have an assortment of the symptoms mentioned will consult a physician, not until he or she is undeniably down and nearly out.

In a great many instances such complaints respond happily to correction of nutritional deficiency—iodine deficiency.

This is nutritional iodine, not medicinal. Every man, woman and child requires a certain amount of iodine daily to maintain good nutrition and good health, just as every one requires a certain amount of calcium (lime) daily to maintain good nutrition and good health. The difference in these two minimum daily nutritional requirements is one of quantity—this a 'teen age youth needs, say, 8 to 10 grains of calcium, (as supplied by 1—2 point of milk), while the same youth needs only 1-400th of a grain not iodine daily. But mind you, every one needs that wee, wee bit of iodine every day just as much as he or she needs any other nutritional element.

In some regions the soil, drinking water and the animal and vegetable food grown on the soil still supply the daily nutritional requirement of iodine. In most parts of the United States and Canada the soil, drinking water, cereals, vegetables, fruits, eggs, milk and meat are all poor in natural iodine content, and therefore most of the people suffer from iodine deficiency.

Iodine, which occurs naturally in chemical combinations, iodides, is easily soluble—dissolves in water—and so it is being constantly leached or washed from the soil of the uplands and carried in the rivers down to the sea. Where seaweed or fish meal is used as fertilizer much iodine is restored to the soil, but otherwise only those individuals who happen to get a reasonable amount of sea food are at all likely to escape the manifestations of iodine deficiency—unless they make it a rule of health to supplement their diet with a wee, wee bit of iodine or iodide in one form or another every day or at least two or three times a week the year around.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

KCl And Low Blood Pressure

When I told my doctor I'd like to try soluble potassium chloride for my allergy he said I'd surely have low blood pressure then—I have had low blood pressure for some time.

(V. B.)

Answer—It does not lower blood pressure. As the action of potassium is physiologically similar to the action of adrenal gland hormone it should rather ten to help low blood pressure.

Plants in Bedroom

Growing plant in a room are beneficial in DAYTIME, for they give off oxygen, but at night give off a gas (you know its name) that is poisonous to breathe.

(A. G.)

Answer—Reason why growing plants are healthful in living room, bedroom or sickroom is that the leaves and the porous pots evaporate some moisture, which is always needled in artificially heated air. The amount of oxygen given off, or the amount of carbon dioxide given off at night, if any, is insignificant. Carbon dioxide is not poisonous to breathe. There is always a certain amount of it in the air. Perhaps you confuse it with carbon monoxide, which is dangerous to breathe, but is never given off by plants, animals or human beings. In daylight growing plants absorb and utilize carbon dioxide from the air. Regarding cut flowers, there is no objection to having them in living room, bedroom or sickroom day and night, if you wish.

Terpin Hydrate

I took two dozen capsules of terpin hydrate (3 grains), one after each meal, and got the greatest relief from chronic winter cough I have had in years.

(Mrs. H. E. G.)

Answer—Thank you, ma'am.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why is a kind of thread called worsted?

"Worsted," pronounced 'WOOS-ted" or "WOOR-sted" and applied to a firmly twisted yarn or thread spun of long-staple wool combed to lay the fibres parallel, is derived from the name of a town in Norfolkshire, England, where this kind of thread or yarn was first made.

The name of the town is now spelled "Worstead," but formerly it was spelled "Worsted."

In the 14th century, when Edward III imported Flemish weavers to improve the English woolen industry, Worstead had as many thousand inhabitants as it now has hundreds and it was a properous market and manufacturing town.

Worstead, reduced to a mere village, no longer has a weaving industry and has only a -4th-century church as a relic of its past greatness.

Chaucer employed "roosted" and apparently it was in use already in the 12th century.

At first the carpets, hosiery, cloth and other fabrics made of worsted thread or yarn were used only by the common people; hence Shakespeare's "worsted-stocking knave" (Lear) as a term of contempt.

Nowadays a trade distinction is made between woolen and worsted goods.

Ordinary woolens are made from carded wool. The woolen thread is soft and composed of criss-cross fibres, leaving the cloth soft and with the pattern almost concealed by the nap.

On the other hand worsted is made from thread that has oeen twisted hard after the fibres have been combed until they are parallel, leaving the cloth firm and with a definite pattern.

iquor Licence ct Sets Price f Beer in Ont.

Toronto, Dec. 17 —(CP)— The w Liquor Licence Act, effective n. 1, sets forth prices to be rged for beer in Ontario, it s revealed Monday as the regtions went to the printers.

General provisions of the Act re announced last Thursday ht by Attorney-General Leslie ckwell in a broadcast speech. th it and the amended Liquor ntrol Act were proclaimed c. 5. They provided for open- of cocktail lounges and ened the Liquor Authority Conl Board to take over and opte retail outlets for sale of r for home consumption.

n one section the regulations vide that draught beer must served in glasses with a cont of nine fluid ounces and that foam, or "head," shall not exd one-half inch in depth from top of the glass.

n the southern section of Ono the beer price in beverage ms is set at 10 cents a glass, cents for a 12-ounce bottle 41 cents for a 22½-ounce tle. In Northern Ontario the ce is 10 cents a glass, 22 cents a 12-ounce bottle and 42 ts for a 22½-ounce bottle. se prices do not apply to imted beer.

he regulations define North- Ontario as "Manitoulin Isd and the islands adjacent reto, and all that part of Ono lying northerly and northsterly of a line commencing the south shore of the west nnel of the French River ere it is intersected by the duction southerly of the east- boundary of the township of vers, thence in a general easty and northerly direction folving the south and east shore Lake Nipissing to the bound- between the townships of ddfield and West Ferris; nce easterly along the lasted boundary to Trout Lake; nce easterly along the south re of Trout Lake and the Mata River to the boundary been Ontario and Quebec."

he regulations, while assert- that not less than one ounce liquor may be served under licences governing the sale of or, do not state the prices that l be charged for these drinks.

en Definition.

xempt from the gallonage tax the sale of beer, Labor clubs Veterans clubs are given nition in the regulations. A or club is defined as a chartd branch or union of any of established labor organizas in Canada; a Veterans' club a chartered branch of any of established war veterans' organizations.

Under the hours of sale it is ruled that no liquor may be sold or served in licensed premises on Sunday, Good Friday, Christmas Day, "or on a day when a general polling for a Dominion, Provincial or municipal election, or the voting upon any question submitted to the electors."

The regulations declare that in the case of railway cars or steamships, liquor may be sold "only while such a railway car or steamship is in transit on a trip, the main purpose of which is the transporting of passengers from one point to another point."

$2 for Permit.

Banquet and entertainment permits under which liquor may be served will cost $2 each and the board reserves the right to cancel such permits.

The application forms to be submitted to the board ask pertinent information relative to the applicant and specifically request whether or not the applicant has any connection, financially or otherwise, direct or indirect with any distillery, brewery or wine manufacturer.

The form also asks whether or not the applicant intends to provide dancing, music or other entertainment for guests or customers and "if so, where?"

Agreements with municipalities for the enforcement of the act asks that the officers to enforce the act be designated. The agreement provides for payment to the municipality of 20 per cent of the licence fees and the fines imposed in prosecutions for violations within the municipality of the provisions of the act. The agreement may be terminated by either party on one month's notice.

Will Mark Centennial Of First Telegraph Communication Between Toronto and Hamilton

Toronto, Dec. 17 — (CP) —An instrument similar to the one that clicked out the first telegraph message sent from Toronto to Hamilton will click again Thursday to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the start of telegraphic communication between the two cities.

Ancestor of the compact key and sounder of today, the instrument is long and cumbersome with a metal spool of tape set between two wheels about a foot in diameter. The tape feeds from the spool into a perforating machine which punches out the dots and dashes of the Morse code. At one end of the receiving set is the sending key.

Sent from the old city hall, which stood near the present site of the Lower St. Lawrence market in central Toronto and which later was destroyed by fire, the first message carried greetings from Mayor W. H. Bolton of Toronto to the mayor of Hamilton. The commemorative message will go from Toronto's Mayor R. H. Saunders to Mayor Samuel Lawrence of Hamilton.

Similar messages are to go to Mayor W. J. Macdonald of St. Catharines and to Mayor L. L. McConkey of Niagara-on-the-Lake. The first telegraph line to those points went into operation a day or two after the Toronto-Hamilton circuit.

When the lines spread out to link Toronto with Buffalo, Montreal, New York and other cities, newspapers started to use them to transmit news dispatches. Before the successful laying of the Atlantic cable, European newspapers came to Canada and the United States by fast packet ships and correspondents prepared special digests of them for telegraph transmission.

"On days of publication — for there were no daily papers in Toronto then — the editors would come to the office and crowd about as I read the news off the tape," R. F. Easson, a pioneer operator, wrote later.

"Frequently when there was some political news that would please him, Hon. George Brown, editor of the Globe, would give a 'Ha!' of satisfaction. As all the editors did not see eye to eye on political matters, there usually followed a hot and sometimes an acrimonious argument across the table. In the meantime, the news, no matter how important, had to wait until one side or the other was utterly confuted."

WRECK DELAYS WAR BRIDES

Moncton, N.B., Dec. 17 (CP) —A group of 150 war brides who arrived in Canada Friday met the third set-back on the way to their new homes Sunday when a freight train, derailed on the track ahead of them, held up their west-bound special for ten hours. The brides arrived at Halifax in the Liner Empire Brent, after a fortnight's wait in England while the ship underwent repairs. On their first attempt to come out to Canada two weeks before the Empire Brent had collided with a cattle boat.

GERMANS DEMAND RELEASE OF POW COUNTRYMEN

Hamburg, Dec. 17 —(Reuters) —Germans in Berlin and the Rhineland town of Puppertal recently held demonstrations demanding the release of their countrymen, held prisoners of war in Russia and the western countries, claiming the Soviet Union was still holding at least 4,000,000 men and women. Both demonstrations were organized by the Social Democratic party, the British News Service in Germany reported.

Canadian Carrier Returns

Victoria, Dec. 17 (CP) — The pride of Canada's post-war fleet, the 18,000-ton aircraft carrier, H.M.C.S. Warrior, arrived here Sunday in the teeth of a 30-knot gale completing an 8,000-mile trip from Halifax by way of the Panama Canal. She is on the Pacific Coast for the Winter and may return to the east coast next Spring.

Telephone Wires Tapped by Police Expose Attempt

New York, Dec. 17 — (AP) — The "tip" that resulted in exposure of Sunday's attempt to fix the National League championship football game between New York Giants and Chicago Bears actually was the result of police tapping of the telephone wires of Alvin J. Paris, arrested on a bribery charge, it was disclosed in court Monday.

Meanwhile, authorities launched a sweeping investigation of local gambling and bookmaking circles to discover whether Paris, 28-year-old official of a novelty concern, acted alone in attempting to bribe Merle Hapes and Frank Filchok, two of the Giants' backfield stars.

George Monaghan, Assistant District Attorney, said the investigation was continuing and that no further warrants yet have been issued. "I can't say whether there will be any more arrests," he said.

Paris, held in $25,000 bail on the bribery charge, was charged with bookmaking in court today and held in $3,500 bail on that charge. In the complaint Paris was quoted as telling police when they questioned him: "If you were listening on the phone as you say, you know what went on."

Monaghan, in asking yesterday that bail be set at $25,000, told the court that "I believe that the defendant has the backing of a very large bookmaking outfit outside of the State of New York; I believe they have substantial means and would not hesitate to get this man out of the jurisdiction of the state or even tamper with witnesses."

The law under which Paris was arraigned was passed in 1921 to protect professional sports after the scandal involving the 1919 World Series baseball games. The law makes an attempt to bribe a professional athlete a felony punishable by one to five years imprisonment.

Calls Criticism "Ungracious"

London, Dec. 17 (AP) —— Anthony Eden, former British Foreign Secretary, Saturday described as "ungracious" what he said was Russian criticism of Anglo-American convoy methods. Eden said 91.6 per cent of all the war materiel shipped by the perilous Archangel route reached Russia safely. He was answering charges made in the Russian Navy Journal Red Fleet and republished Saturday in British newspapers that the British Admiralty improperly organized one convoy.

Says Each German Captive Allowed to Remain Shows Promise of Being Good Citizen

Lethbridge, Alta., Dec. 17 — (AP)—The Lethbridge Herald in a newspage story Monday said it had learned from a Canadian army officer, associated with the detention of German prisoners-of-war for several years, that each captive allowed to remain in Canada "shows promise of becoming a good Canadian citizen."

(Plans are under way for the repatriation of German prisoners in Canada. Federal officials have said they are considering the question of allowing some to remain in Canada. The last repatriation draft is scheduled to leave Canada Dec. 22.)

"The officer explained that each of the captives who will remain has 'a perfect record' with the Canadian military 'or he would not be permitted to stay,' that each has been carefully selected by the Canadian army, that each is a firm believer in democracy and that each has been highly recommended for residence in Canada by his former employer in this country.

"While possibly 200 of the 2,300 German prisoners-of-war in Canada are being allowed to stay, it could not be learned immediately how many of the 300 in the Lethbridge prisoner-of-war camp will remain . . .

"Those remaining are to be sent to a camp in Eastern Canada to receive education which will fit them for life and civilian employment in the Dominion. Most of them later will be placed to work on farms and in bush camps, generally with previous employers who had recommended that the captive be allowed to stay in Canada . . .

"The officer said that each man is under 35 years of age and can speak English well."

COHEN OUT ON BAIL

Haileybury, Dec. 17 (CP) — J. L. Cohen, prominent Toronto Labor lawyer who was given a six-months' sentence here Thursday on conviction on a charge of assault, was released on $1,000 bail Sunday pending the hearing of his appeal.

Notice of appeal on grounds of law and fact was filed Friday at Osgoode Hall.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. Florence Turner, of West Moira Street, recently returned from visiting her daughter, Mrs. Marie Levo, of Saratoga Springs, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon W. Powley, Grenadier Drive, Toronto, were in town, Saturday for the Parrott-Robinson wedding.

Miss Yvonne Younghusband, student nurse at Kingston General Hospital, who has been a patient there during the last two weeks, is now convalescing at the home of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Younghusband.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Warner and daughter, Barbara Lee, of Detroit, have returned home after visiting Mrs. Warner's mother, Mrs. E. W. Flunder, Donald St., who has been seriously ill, but whose condition has improved.

Dr. Omar Z. Younghusband, of the Lahey Clinic, Boston, Mass., and Mrs. Younghusband, spent the weekend in Belleville, as the guests of Dr. Younghusband's parents, Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Younghusband.

The annual Baby Band Christmas Party held at Bridge Street Church, Monday afternoon was a decided success, seventy-three mothers and babies being entertained with games, movies and refreshments. This party was sponsored by the W.M.S. Evening Auxiliary of the church.

THREE ARRESTED

Toronto, Dec. 17—(CP)—Three men were arrested late last night on charges of obstructing police after a melee in an east end cafe.

One of them, Kenneth Stewart, is alleged to have slashed a policeman with a jack-knife. He was charged with assaulting and obstructing.

The two others arrested were Harold Brydon and Gordon Howitt, both of Toronto.

WEDDINGS

WOOD—BARRIE

At eight o'clock on the evening of Dec. 14th., St. Andrew's Presbyterian Manse, was the setting for a very quiet wedding ceremony when Trillene (Terry) Mary Barrie, daughter of Mr. Gordon T. Barrie of Campbellford, Ont., became the bride of Mr. Bruce Wilmot Wood, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Black, of Belleville, with Rev. J. G. Hornab officiating.

The bride was very attractive in a street length dress of aqua-blue silk crepe with matching hat and black accessories. Her corsage was of American Beauty roses. Miss Yvonne Barrie was her sister's only attendant, wearing a street length dress of brown silk crepe with touches of gold, matching sequin-trimmed hat and brown accessories. Her corsage was of red roses.

Mr. Joseph Pringle of Belleville assisted the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Wood have taken up residence in Belleville.

STOCKER—BAILEY

Marmora. (Special.) — The wedding was solemnized on Monday, December 9, at George St. United Church, Peterborough, when Elizabeth Lois Bailey, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bailey, of Marmora township, was united in marriage to Douglas Henry Stocker, eldest son of Mr. Morley Stocker and the late Mrs. Stocker. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. J. Semple.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was wearing a powder blue crepe dress with matching headdress and shoulder-length veil. Her corsage was of pink roses. Mrs. Earl Smith was the bride's attendant and Mr. Earl Smith was groomsman.

For travelling the bride chose a dress of aqua blue with cerise trimming, a matching hat and topcoat. After a short honeymoon spent in Toronto, the young couple will take up residence in Marmora.

PARROTT—ROBINSON

A wedding of considerable local interest took place Saturday afternoon at one-thirty o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, when Rev. A. W. Lougheed of Shannonville, united in marriage Bernice Winnifred, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Robinson, with John Marcus Parrott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Parrott, of Belleville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride made an attractive appearance in a floor-length gown of white duchess satin, made on princess lines, with sweetheart neckline and long pointed sleeves. Her fingertip veil of embroidered net was attached to a Mary Queen of Scots headdress and she carried a shower bouquet of red roses and buddelia with white streamers.

Mrs. Merle Robinson, the matron-of-honor, wore a floor-length gown of pale blue with silk jersey top and net skirt. Her headdress was similar to that of the bride's with shoulder-length veil. She carried a nosegay of pink and white carnations.

Mr. Merle Robinson ably performed the duties of groomsman.

Mrs. Shannon LaFontaine, of Belleville, very capably furnished the wedding music. During the signing of the register she played "Romance" by Schumann.

Following the ceremony a reception was held for the thirty guests present, the rooms being tastefully decorated in pink and white. The bride's mother received her guests wearing a strato grey crepe dress with sequin trim and grey felt hat. Her corsage was pink carnations. The groom's mother assisted, wearing a French blue crepe dress and matching hat, with corsage of pink carnations.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Parrott motored to Toronto and Windsor, crossing to Detroit for a trip to Miami, Florida, to return by way of New York. The bride's travelling attire was a loganberry wool suit and matching hat and black accessories.

Out-of-town guests were from Kingston, Sydenham, Toronto and Campbellford, and congratulatory messages were received from friends in California.

The week prior to her marriage a kitchen shower was arranged for Bernice Robinson by Mrs. L. Jones and Mrs. S. LaFontaine. During the evening a bride's book was made. The bride-to-be received many useful gifts and thanked her friends gracefully for them. At the end of the evening delicious refreshments were served by the co-hostesses.

CENTENARY W. A.

Centenary.—Starting with a pot luck dinner, which was thoroughly enjoyed by about twenty members, the Centenary W.A. held its annual meeting at the church on Thursday last.

Mrs. L. Hall, the president, opened the meeting with the theme song, and a Christmas hymn. Two members who had birthdays during the month contributed to the birthday box, with the usual happy birthday greetings.

The treasurer's report showed that the year had been a very successful one. A donation of $15 was voted to the M. & M. Fund, $5 of which is to go to the Victor Home in Toronto.

The report of the nominating committee was read by the Secretary, Mrs. Edmondson and the 1946 officers re-elected and installed for another year by the Rev. C. A. McCallum.

It was decided that the group system should be adopted, one group of five being responsible for refreshments each month, the hostess to provide the beverage.

Women's Activities

QUINTE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

In spite of unpleasant weather, a large crowd attended the December meeting of the Quinte Women's Institute held at the home of Mrs. F. Parrott.

The President, Mrs. Atkins, opened the meeting and Mrs. Ryan read the prayer.

During a short business session a $25 contribution to the Adelaide Hoodless' Fund was approved.

Mrs. Sandercock presented an excellent program, interspersed with Christmas carols led by Mrs. Howie.

A reading by Mrs. Montgomery, "A Dream of The Christmas Tree" was very well received. Little Mary Howie sang without accompaniment Brahm's Lullaby, with a kindergarten motion song for encore. Mrs. Charles Hyde gave two enjoyable readings, "Caleb's Courtship" and "The Free Seat".

Mrs. Maguire spoke briefly on the Area convention.

The Roll Call was an exchange of Christmas gifts.

An excellent lunch was provided by the committee: Mrs. Parrott, Mrs. Ryan, Mrs. C. Grass, Mrs. H. Greatrix.

YOUNG WOMEN'S GUILD

The Young Women's Guild met at the home of Mrs. Hunter, 289 Albert Street, on Monday evening.

Mrs. Coulter presided over the business meeting. Mrs. M. Buck conducted the Worship service on the "Nativity". Miss K. McPherson gave a talk on Arts and Handicrafts as taught in the Public Schools.

Several examples of the various crafts were displayed. Miss Elson explained the making of the characters that formed the creche. An opportunity was given the members to make any of the articles. This proved very interesting. An auction sale was held with Mrs. W. Harrison as auctioneer. Lunch was served by the hostess' committee.

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

Marmora. (Special.)—St. Andrew's United Church W.M.S. held their December and annual meeting at the parsonage on the afternoon of Dec. 11. The President, Mrs. H. R. Haacke, was in charge. Twelve members and one visitor were present. Seven sick calls were reported and five missionary monthlies and four books read by the members.

Mrs. W. J. Pack gave a splendid report of the newly organized Mission Circle of which she has been appointed Advisory President. There are fourteen members. It is expected more will be joining the Circle and all are enthusiastic. The installation of officers took place at the meeting on Monday when the following assumed office:

President, Dorothy Airhart
Vice President, Marie Bronson
Secretary, Doris Hannah
Treasurer, Ruth Nayler
Press Reporter, Marion Reynolds.
Program Committee, Marie Bronson, Arlie Pack, Marion Reynolds.

Rev. E. M. Cadigan then conducted the election of officers for the W.M.S. for 1946 which resulted as follows:

President, Mrs. H. R. Haacke
1st Vice President, Mrs. H. C. Barlow
2nd Vice President, Mrs. H. A. Burwash
3rd Vice President, Mrs. E. C. Prentice
Rec. Secretary, Mrs. Wallbridge
Cor. Secretary, Mrs. D. Sanderson
Treasurer, Mrs. H. A. Burwash
Young People's Work, Mrs. E. M. Cadigan and Mrs. G. Jarvis.
Christian Stewardship, Miss M. Brown.
Temperance and Citizenship, Mrs. F. Sweet
Missionary Monthly and World Friends' Secretary, Mrs. Sproul
Literature Secretary, Mrs. Trumpour
Associate Members' Secretary, Miss M. Brown
Organist, Mrs. H. C. Barlow
Press Secretary, Mrs. H. W. Sabine
Mission Circle, Mrs. W. J. Pack and Mrs. Irwin Wells.

The Christmas program was followed in the Missionary Monthly, featured by the singing of Christmas carols, prayers, Scripture reading and the candle-lighting service. Mrs. Cadigan and Mrs. Prentice dressed in saris as native women of India, with Mrs. Jarvis were the first group. Mrs. Barlow, Mrs. Pack, Mrs. Sabine and Miss Brown represented the Canadian women.

After the offering was received and dedicated the hymn "Joy to the World" was sung, bringing the meeting to a close.

Refreshments were served and a social half hour spent.

Energetic Club Hears Boys' Choir

The Energetic Club of Holloway Street United Church held their regular meeting in the Sunday School Hall of the church on Friday evening. The room had been given a festive appearance with the addition of decorations in the usual Christmas colors.

Miss Maida Grills, as pianist, added greatly to the Christmas atmosphere by the playing of carols in preparation for the opening hymn.

After a short business meeting, during which the treasurer reported a satisfactory bank balance on hand a timely program was presented, highlighted by a tableau of the Nativity accompanied by the singing of Christmas carols. During the presentation of gifts by "The Wise Men" Rev. Dr. Oscar Wagar explained the use of the gold, frankincense and myrrh.

Mr. Ed. Shortt led the boys of the Y.M.C.A. choir in presenting carols from other lands, which received the well-merited applause of the audience.

Games and refreshments concluded the meeting.

Christmas Party At Tabernacle Much Enjoyed

The Sunday School Assembly room in Tabernacle United Church was filled to capacity on Monday evening for the annual Christmas program. The room had been made attractively festive with decorations in the Christmas colors of red and green: hangings and festoons over the large lights and around the tall pillars, wreaths and a realistic fireplace as a stage background, and two fine Christmas trees, with the usual tinsel trappings and twinkling lights, standing like sentinels on the floor at either end of the stage to guard the many prettily wrapped gift packages in the hampers beneath their branches.

Mr. A. D. Archibald, superintendent of the Church School, welcomed the parents and friends of the children; and announced that Mr. Malcolm McClelland, who, with the help of the teachers, was responsible for the planning of the program, would act as Master of Ceremonies for its presentation. The words of "Silent Night" were thrown upon the screen and, with Mrs. J. W. Houston at the piano and Glenn Cornell playing the trumpet, the congregation joined in singing the carol, after which Rev. J. W. Houston prayed a prayer of thanksgiving for Christmas.

Group Numbers

The program consisted mostly of group numbers given by the different classes under the direction of the teachers in charge; with one recitation "A Vision" given by Barbara Thurgood; a clarinet solo by Ralph Cornish and a violin and piano selection "Queen of the Picnic", by Robert and Mary Houston.

A short play, "A Christmas Visitor" taught the lesson of unselfish sharing at this season of the year. This was presented by members of the classes taught by Miss License and by Mr. Taylor. An exercise, "The Firefly", with its candlelighting, culminated in the "Song of the Christmas Candles", included members of Miss M. Robson's class of girls and the "Firefly", (Gerry Hall). A handkerchief drill and song by the primary class, under the direction of Mrs. R. L. Johnston, was very well done. A skit "Christmas Concert Rehearsal in a Rural School", presented by the combined classes under Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Archibald, added a touch of realistic humor to the Christmas theme.

Boys' Chorus Outstanding

Two group numbers were outstanding for preparedness and presentation—a boys' chorus by members of the classes taught by Mr. A. Wynn and by Mr. E. R. Taylor; and the opening scene of the program by the tiny tots from the "Beginners' Department", who, with a reader (Mrs. A. J. Charlton) presented a pageant, "The Friendly Beasts", namely the donkey, the cow, the sheep and the little white dove, all bringing gifts to the Baby Jesus ("asleep on the hay" with Mary and Joseph keeping watch) to the accompaniment of carols sung by the other children of the class. This was done exceptionally well by children up to seven years of age, and the directors deserve a great deal of credit for the perfection achieved by this group. The theme of this pageant set the tenor for the whole evening's entertainment.

The chorus of "Jingle Bells" sung by the whole assembly was the signal for Santa's appearance "in person"; and the distribution of gifts and candy brought another Church School Christmas Concert to a happy close.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Watch Out For Those Apron-Strings, "Uncertain!"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl in my late teens and engaged to a fellow from the West. He is 21.

My mother doesn't want me to marry this boy if we go to live in his state, because she says it will be too far away from her. I don't want to leave my mother because I am very close to her, but I also love this fellow very much, and he wants to live in his state.

Should I leave my mother, and hurt her, which I don't want to do, or should I tell this fellow again that I want to live in my own part of the country and just take my chances?

Uncertain

If you're not very careful, "Uncertain", you're going to find yourself in a lot of trouble, no matter whom you marry or where you live. For it looks very much as though your mother were one of the kind who wants to keep her children tied to her apron-strings, and that you would be just as much under the maternal thumb when you're a Mrs. as you are now as a Miss. And that would be a sad state of affairs indeed.

Did you know that one of the primary causes for divorce in the United States is attributed basically to interference from in-laws? Better think that over very seriously before you give up the man you want to marry merely because your mother doesn't want you to leave her.

Should An Engaged Girl Pay Her Own Way Occasionally?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young girl of 20, have a good job with fairly good pay. My fiance has a job which does not pay much more than mine.

We do not have a car and have to travel by streetcar or bus wherever we go, which runs into a lot of money when he has to pay double every time we go out. We are both saving for a home when we get married, and neither of us has much spending money. He suggests that I pay my own carfare once in awhile, and that occasionally I should take him out to dinner and a show, not often, but just so it wouldn't seem that he was not saving enough money. I was quite put out when he made this suggestion, although maybe I shouldn't have been. I told him I thought the girl should never pay anything.

What I want to know is, which of us is right? If I thought he was, I'd gladly do as he suggests.

"Anxious".

As a general rule, I think things work out better where the man does the paying, although I can think of exceptions to this rule.

In your own case, however, you and your fiance are pooling your savings for your mutual purposes, so wouldn't it seem a good idea to pool your spending money, too? The end result will be the same. Why not decide on some such plan as this: jointly, the two of you make so much money, can save so much each week, and spend so much, each of you to assume half of the total amount, or whatever proportions seem right. Then you give your half of the spending money to your fiance, who will take charge of the expenditures when you are out together. This seems to me like a sensible arrangement.

She Married a Man Old Enough
She Married a Man Old Enough To Be Her Father

I am a girl of 17 who has been married a year. My husband is 42 years old and I love him very much.

About two months ago he met a woman who is 38 years old and has been seeing her frequently. People are beginning to tell me that I have made a great mistake.

Please try and tell me what I should do.

"Unhappy Wife"

I can't think what sort of parents could have allowed you to make such a marriage, for any person with half a wit would have known it could mean nothing but unhappiness for you.

Just what was it about this man that made you think you loved him enough to marry him? Did you have a lot in common and enjoy the same things? Did he take you to entertaining places and introduce you to interesting people? Was he thoughtful about your comfort, and considerate in all the small things which mean so much to a woman? Or did he treat you like a child of whom he was fond, giving you nice presents and petting and indulging you?

My guess would be that the latter was the case, for it would be very unusual indeed for a man of 41 to have the same interests as a girl of 16, your ages when you married a year ago. I'm very much afraid it was simply your youth that intrigued him; that he regarded you as a child to play with and fondle. And now he has tired of the company of a child and wants the adult companionship normal for his age.

If you love this man, as you think you do, then you probably wish to go on loving with him in the hope that he may get over this spell of philandering and settle down with you again. But the likely thing is that this is only the first of a series of affairs, and that sooner or later you will come to the point where it's not worth-while to go on taking it.

If you want to stick it out till then, that's your business. But my suggestion would be that you go and talk the whole thing over with some members of your family old enough and sensible enough to look at the situation wisely; or with some trusted older friend, or your minister, priest or rabbi. Sooner or later you are going to need advice from someone who knows you well, and perhaps if you get it "sooner", you can be saved some of the grief that I'm afraid is headed your way.

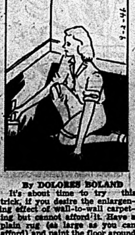
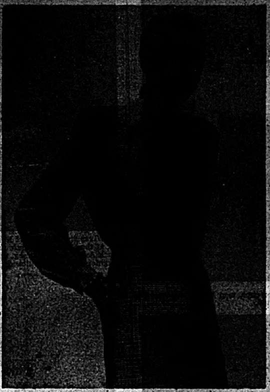
It's About Time



By DOLORES BOLAND

It's about time to try this trick, if you desire the enlargening effect of wall-to-wall carpeting but cannot afford it. Have a plain rug (as large as you can afford), and paint the floor around it the exact color of this rug.

For the Sportswoman



By PRUNELLA WOOD

The active sportswoman gets a double break in this soft, handsome checked wool frock, for it will serve for that tailored look around town, and for spectator sport events as well. All the frock needs for office or other everyday uses is a chic hat, calf shoes and some showy costume jewelry.

Put it on with saddle shoes and a heavy coat to make it into good bleacher wear, or rail bird spotting. The buttons are bone, the colors muted woodsy tones.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

To Announce The Engagement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. To announce my engagement my parents are planning to have two gatherings: (1) the engagement party on Saturday evening will consist of my fiance's friends and my own friends, all in our own age group, and (2) on the following day we are to have Open House, from 3:30 to 6 o'clock, for relatives and friends of the families, all of an older age group. Do you approve of this plan?

2. I believe I remember reading in your column that the engaged girl, not her parents, should send the invitations, informing friends of the engagement in the same note. Is that right?

B. S.

1. No! I don't approve of this plan because if there are to be two parties for the engagement-announcement, it is the way of courtesy and proper dignity and respect to have the first party include the relatives and friends of the families. They are the ones most intimately concerned with the news of the engagement. Then when the engagement is made known to the families' relatives and friends, a party may be given for the young friends of the couple, to "celebrate" the engagement.

2. No! Before the engagement is officially announced (either by a party or in the newspapers) the engaged girl and her fiance each write their relatives and intimate friends telling them of the engagement and asking that the secret be kept until such-and-such a date when the engagement will be announced. But since it is the girl's parents who announce the engagement, they are the ones who send out the invitations to the announcement party, usually without revealing in the invitations the reason for the party.

To Use First Names For Older Friends?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

For about ten years my husband and I have been extremely devoted to a man and his wife so much older than we are that it has always seemed entirely fitting for us to call them "Mr." and "Mrs." Lately we have been with them as much as we have been with our younger friends, and we enjoy them as much as if not more than we do many of our younger friends, for they are so delightfully enthusiastic and so "accustomed" in social ways. Recently they asked us to call them by their first names, and although we have been trying to get up the courage to do so, we feel self-conscious, and find that we don't call they by any name, thus avoiding the issue. But now we would like to know what you think we should do.

L. W.

I think that you should do what these good friends of yours have asked you to do—call them by their first names, for this is the way between such intimate friends of any age. And although you may feel self-conscious the first two or three times, this will drop off presently and you will enjoy the name-intimacy.

Taking Their Place at Table

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The other evening I went to a large dinner party, quite formal. Although there were place cards, the hostess, standing at her place at table, did some directing of the guests, telling them where their place cards were. While she was doing this some of the ladies, who had found their places, sat down. But one or two remained standing, as did the gentlemen of course, until the hostess sat down. I won't tell you which I did, but will you please tell me what I should have done? Anita Whichever you did was proper! For although it is not necessary for the women guests to remain standing until the hostess has taken her seat, it is entirely proper for any woman guest to do this if she considers this more courteous to the hostess.

COURTESY TIP

By Mrs. Beeckman

To do the thing you want to do even though you know it annoys other people, shows a meanness in your mind and character that you should take serious steps to cure. Amiability is such an endearing quality.. it's never shadowed by "annoyances!"

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

When Golden Tresses Become Tarnished

The upkeep of blonde hair isn't easy. Locks that were spun gold in childhood may become gold plated—and dull, at that — at thirty. Instead of bright sunlight atop the feminine pate, there may be a cloud of drab tresses. This state of affairs puts the once-blonde-dolly's heart into a vice. Why couldn't nature give a color guarantee? Just isn't fair, that's what.

All hair that is not black has a tendency to grow darker with the years. Light hair, like the silvered crown, requires more frequent shampooing, for all extraneous matter shows clearly and has a deplorable effect upon the color. Oily applications should be avoided. Heavy setting lotions are taboo. Some beauty authorities believe that Goldie Locks should not dry her hair in the sunlight, as strong sunlight is likely to make it streaked. We offer this idea for what it may be worth. Sunlight does have an effect upon the color, but there is no doubt that it invigorates the growth.

Only the blandest soaps should be used for the shampoo. An excellent formula is the following: place a small bar of castile soap in a quart mason jar, add a scant half teaspoonful of borax, fill the jar with boiling water; let it stand for three days before using.

The contents of the quart jar will be sufficient for eight or ten shampoos, depending upon the thickness and length of the hair. Start with a brisk brushing, grooming from the napeline to the crown. Hold your head over the bathtub and turn on the spray, using a strong current of fairly hot water.

Pour off half a glass of the clear top liquid of the shampoo medium; add an equal amount of hot water and friction well into the scalp. Follow with a prolonged rinsing. Repeat several times. It is not easy to get the hair clean. You are dealing with atmospheric dust and sebaceous oil, a combination that is not readily removed. Three soapings and three rinsings are necessary.

Fill the washbowl with warm water, add the strained juice of three lemons, then dunk your head in it, pouring the water over the hair with a cup.

In ny beauty shop, the blonde girl can have a peroxide rinse after the shampoo. These treatments should not be indulged in too often, as they will be likely to make the ends of the hair lighter than the growth close to the scalp.

The white henna pack is satisfactory for a thorough bleaching, if done by an expert who will be careful not to overbleach. There is, of course, no such thing as white henna. The pack is composed of powdered magnesium carbonate, peroxide, and a small amount of ammonia. This treatment cannot be given at home. No woman with sense in her head would attempt it.

The spun-gold locks of childhood may be gold-plated at thirty.

Fashion Flashes

THAT NICE COUPLE—beauty and comfort—get together in fine style in a series of beautifully draped dresses of cosy black or brown wool jersey all prettied up with sequins. Nice date numbers!

THE NEAT LOOK is characteristic of the best of this year's crop of furred fabric coats. Bright red woolen makes a fitted reefer detailed with big side flap pockets that curve around the hips. Collar and deep notched revers of nutria and nutria gauntlet cuffs.

TWINKLING FEET and legs, and no other type, should in for the new stockings that ture tattooed motifs. A heart, dove or a horseshoe motif is tooed at the ankle or knee of credibly sheer nylons, the sign selected at the time of chase.

JUST RIGHT for afternoon informal evening clothes is glittering little pillbox hat. sapphire blue velvet is used muffin pillbox bedecked multi-color stones and sequins misted with a circular black veil.

CHEERS for the little topper which is proving itself major coat fashion for wear. Nice for dinner wear simple white wool box with black wool tuxedo facing braided in gold.

HARKING BACK to the twenties is the wrapped coat. American broadtail—processed lamb dyed a rich taupe shade—is for a coat lavishly bordered natural flue fox, the coat cut to natural blue fox, the coat cut to Wide sleeves are also bordered with the blue fox.

Supreme Court Will Consider Appeal by Lewis

Washington, Dec. 17—(AP) — The United States Supreme Court today agreed to consider a 10-point appeal filed by John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers against their contempt conviction and fines of $3,510,000 growing out of the 17-day coal strike.

The high tribunal one week ago granted a government request for a final, "authoritative" ruling on whether Judge T. Alan Goldsborough had proceeded correctly when he attempted to head off the strike with a restraining order which Lewis ignored.

Today's action puts both sides formally before the Supreme Court as appellants — both requesting a final decision on the law points raised by the government and those presented by Lewis and the Union.

The court will hear arguments for each side Jan. 14.

Among the 10 questions for decision raised by Lewis and the Union were:

Were the fines excessive and so high that they violated the United States constitution?

Had Goldsborough power to issue the restraining order in view of the bans by the Norris-La Guardia and Clayton Acts on the issuance of court orders in labor disputes? This restrainer called on Lewis to withdraw his notice that the union's contract to dig coal was terminated. Lewis ignored it.

Could Goldsborough admit 'prejudicial and irrelevant' testimony?

The Justice Department's petition contended the two acts do not apply to the government. The department said the government acted as a sovereign seeking to protect the interests of the people, and the Acts apply to private employers only.

Sight-Saving School First in Australia

Sydney, Australia (CP)— The New South Wales state education department has established what it claims to be the first sight-seeing school in Australia.

The school, in operation in Sydney, is attended by 16 pupils, aged nine to 13, selected after a medical survey of school children in the metropolitan area showed that up to nine per cent have defective eyesight.

The selected children have defective eyesight in varying degrees. Most of them wear spectacles and their common complaint is shortsightedness. The aim of the school is to preserve their existing eyesight and restore sight to normal as far as possible.

Special fluorescent lighting is used and the children work at adjustable desks permitting them to get close to their work or away from it as their affliction demands.

Their work is set approximately at right angles to their line of vision, and specially-selected teachers are well-versed in their handicaps individually.

"Blackboards" are of ground glass in dark green and primrose yellow. Blue chalk is used on the primrose "blackboard" and yellow chalk on the green "blackboard." Children with short sight are given thick pencils and thick pen nibs and are taught to write in big, bold characters.

The education department plans to establish other sight-saving schools throughout the state if the experiment is successful.

History Classic Liked by Authors

New York (CP)—Forty-four authors listing "books I'd like to read" in a Herald Tribune survey showed more interest in "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" than any other work. Five named Gibbon's monumental study.

"Das Kapital" by Karl Marx was chosen by three. Dante's works were mentioned four times, oftener than any but Gibbon. Novels by Dickens, Tolstoy and Laurence Sterne were listed three times, with Dostoevsky, Homer and Plato once or twice.

Norman Corwin, radio producer, had a lengthy selection: Encyclopaedia Britannica ("all the way through"), the works of Freud and Sterne's "Tristam Shandy."

Robert Sherwood, playwright, said he couldn't boil down to three the books he'd 'like to read.

Franklin P. Adams, once noted as a columnist and now as a radio quiz star, answered: "I can't tell you the books that I want to read because if I want to read them, I read them."

Bird Plague Menaces Crops in Transvaal

Pietersburg, South Africa (CP) —Grain crops in this northern Transvaal area are being devastated by a plague of birds, so bad that even armed "sentries" cannot scare them off for more than a few minutes.

From dawn to dusk thousands of doves and great swarms of red-billed finches descend on the fields and for the poorer farmer it is a fight for existence. The natives are fast becoming exhausted trying to keep the birds off the crops. Farmers have decided to reap their corn before the grain has ripened to save at least a few bags.

REV. DR. INKSTER INJURED

Toronto, Dec. 17. (CP) — Rev. Dr. J. G. Inkster, veteran churchman who retired from active ministry in the Presbyterian Church of Canada some years ago, was take to hospital Sunday night with injuries suffered when he was struck by a motorcar. Dr. Inkster in 1943 had been appointed to visit the Presbyterian churches across the Dominion on a financial and evangelical mission although he was retired at that time.

Canada-U.S. Ties Remain Unruffled in Troubled World

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington (CP)—A year that saw representatives of almost every country coming to Washington with pleas or complaints left apparently unchanged the serenely efficient relations between Canada and the United States.

On the surface at least the mutual respect and friendly feelings that have made Canadian-American relations a model, remained unruffled by the terrific play of world events which made 1946 memorable.

The Republican victory in November putting Congress in the hands of that party for the first time in 14 years brought no forseeable threat to continuity of these relatioins. There was a possibility that the Republican majority might handicap the administration in its program of multilateral free trade agreements but these negotiations are so closely tied in with foreign policy that it seemed unlikely that high tariff influences would operate.

It was reasonable to expect that the Canada-United States agreement on development of St. Lawrence River power and navigation would make greater progress toward achievement under the new congressional regime, for two reasons.

1. The great congressional proponent of the scheme is a Republican, Senator Aiken of Vermont.

2. Two soft coal strikes in 1946 emphasized the necessity of establishing greater resources of hydro-generated electrical energy for industrial and domestic use.

The agreement under which Canada took over maintenance of the Alaska Highway, and other post-war settlements of projects jointly handled during the war, seemed to be working smoothly. Negotiations were going forward to improve border-crossing formalities with respect to both persons and materials, and the year brought considerable simplification.

Each country handled its price control and de-control problems without seriously affecting the other.

Embassy Changes

Late in the year the popular Canadian ambassador, L. B. "Mike" Pearson, was moved to Ottawa to become under secretary for external affairs. He was succeeded by Hume Wrong, one of Canada's most experienced career diplomats, who easily fitted himself into the Washington scene. Mr. Wrong, familiar with Washington because of his service here when the embassy was a legation, found no difficult problems awaiting his attention.

Probably the most delicate existing issue between the two countries has to do with fairly secret discussions, in the joint defence permanent committee and elsewhere, on development of defence, weather and flying facilities in the Canadian Arctic for the benefit of the whole continent. So far as can be learned these long term planning talks are proceeding without rancor and without great differences of opinion.

Visits of Prime Minister Mackenzie King to the White House were not as frequent as when President Roosevelt lived but that was not surprising. The late president and the prime minister were old friends. President Truman at once sought to perpetuate the close relations between the Canadian prime minister and the White House.

But both Mr. Mackenzie King and Mr. Truman have been busy men this past year, particularly the president, and fortunately for Canada that country has not been involved directly in many of the problems bedevilling Mr. Truman.

However the prime minister did visit Washinigton one, was entertained as the head of a friendly state in Blair House, the government's hospitality centre, and had a long talk with the president on all matters of immediate and common interest to the two countries.

ST. CATHARINES AND STAFFORDS EASY WINNERS

Falcons Beat Szabos 10-5 and Toronto Squad Defeats Stratford 6-0

(By The Canadian Press)

A couple of in-and-out teams looked like world-beaters in winning their O.H.A. games last night as Toronto Staffords Seniors and St. Catharines Falcons Juniors came through with form reversals from their last appearances to score lop-sided victories.

St. Catharines, who looked anything but impressive in dropping a 7-0 verdict to St. Michael's Majors on Saturday, ran up their highest score of the season in topping Hamilton Szabos 10-5 in the mountain city while Staffords, still smarting from a 5-0 drubbing at the hands of Hamilton Tigers last Wednesday, applied a little whitewash of their own in taming Stratford Indians 6-0 at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Fran Inonti drove home three goals to spark Staffords' drive into undisputed possession of second place in the five-team senior group. Lloyd Ronbell, Jack Stafford and Gord Ball were the other scorers.

Eleven penalties, all minors, were awarded and not a little of Staffords' success was due to their ability to score three goals while the opposition was short-handed.

Szabos Fall Apart

In Hamilton, the Szabos managed to keep up with the unwontedly powerful Falcons for two periods, trailing by only a single goal at the start of the final frame. Then they fell apart and the visitors slipped five goals past Bob DeCourcy against a single Hamilton counter.

Bob Wood and Junior McDonald led the scoring parade for the winners with three tallies apiece and Bob Twaddle was close behind with a pair. Mann and Buschnel got the others.

Pierre Cadieux scored twice for the losers with Hogan, Prieux and Wysynski getting singletons.

The victory boosted Falcons past the idle Toronto Young Rangers into eighth place in the 10-team circuit, two points short of the seventh-place Szabos.

Both leagues are idle tonight but swing into action Wednesday when the league-leading Hamilton Tigers meet the third-place Hamilton Pats in a senior clash, Oshawa Generals play at Stratford and Toronto Marlboros visit Barrie in a pair of junior tilts.

ROCKET RICHARD SCORING LEADER OF HOCKEY LOOP

Teeter Kennedy of Maple Leafs Moves Into Second Spot Ahead of Taylor

Montreal, Dec. 17 —(CP)— Maurice (Rocket) Richard, Montreal Canadiens prolific scoring right winger, has taken over the leadership in the National Hockey League individual scoring race with a total of 28 points, league statistics released today revealed.

Richard has sniped 16 goals, which is tops in the goal scoring section, and garnered 12 assists for a total of 28 points.

Ted (Teeter) Kennedy, Toronto Maple Leafs centre, jumped from fourth place in last week's standings to the runner-up position this week with 25 points. Kennedy has sunk 15 goals and earned 100 assists for 25 points. Billy (The Kid) Taylor, Detroit Red Wings forward who topped the scorers for the last seven weeks, is tied for second place with Kennedy. Taylor has accumulated 17 assists to lead the league's playmakers.

Milt Schmidt, Boston Bruins hard-working pivot-man has been working his way up the scoring ladder and this week finds him in fourth place with 21 points, two points back of Detroit's Roy Conacher, who is in third place with 23 points.

Montreal Canadiens' Bill Durnan has the best goals-against record among the goalkeepers. Pudgy Bill has allowed 50 goals to slip by him in 22 games. Turk Broda of Toronto leads the shutout artists with three.

Wild Bill Ezinicki of Toronto still holds the dubious honor of bad man of the circuit with 49 minutes in the penalty box, two more than Johnny Mariucci of Chicago Black Hawks who has spent 47 minutes in the cooler.

Toronto Maple Leafs are in first place in the league standings with 30 points made up of 13 wins, five losses and four ties. Canadiens are hot on the trail of the Leafs in second place with 29 points as a result of 13 wins, six losses and three ties.

Sports Roundup

Whenever Charley (Rabbit) McVeigh gathers with a group of pals to reminisce about his hockey days with the old New York Americans, somebody is sure to insist that he never could have lasted as long as he did in active competition except for his acrobatic tactics on the ice. . . Rabbit, so named because of his "hippity hop" stride, could turn a flip on skates without turning a hair. . . His friends still say the club kept him around just to entertain the customers. . . One day, so the story goes, a club official called on Rabbit to perform a special flip. . . Charlie complied and Helgy Bostrum, a bg defenceman, hit the small-statured Rabbit in mid-air, knocking him out cold. . . McVeigh had to be carried off but the club official thought it was all part of the act.

Sweather Switch

McVeigh, now an American League referee, says that the white sweaters of the officials will be replaced shortly by a green-colored issue to avoid confusion with the colors of a couple of clubs in the league: . . . "I was refereeing a game the other night," Rabbit said, "and a couple of passes came my way" . . . Speaking of sweaters, ticket scalpers in the New York area are wary about plying their trade in the college basketball circuit. . . Detectives are wearing college sweaters in an effort to trap the ticket-mongers.

"Y" House League Junior Standing

Bums	4	2
Goons	3	3
Mugs	3	3
Saps	2	4

Saps and Bums were the winners in the two Junior House League basketball games on Friday night. In the opener the Saps were 8 minutes late fielding a team, which gave their opponents an 8 point margin to start. These points were credited to the captain of the opposing team. With this handicap, the boys really started to work, and while neither team seemed to be able to get anywhere in the first half, the second half saw Spiegel's prides rack up enough of a margin in the play to be tied with the Goons at full time. Three overtime periods of 2 minutes were needed to break the tie, the Saps finally winning by a score of 24-22. The Goons simply could not get that ball to go into the hoop, no matter how hard they tried. They couldn't even sink free throws, and, while the Saps missed enough chances to win the North American championship, they did manage to sink a few to win. Burke got four baskets and Spiegel three for the winners, while Galbraith and Lepore each got three for the losers.

The second game brought together two teams which were even in the standing before the game, each having won 3 and lost 2. The Bums proved too good for the Mugs, however, and won by a score of 30-19. Starting fast, the winners piled up a 10 point lead in the first half, and got another point margin in the second. Stan Creeggan had a big time to himself in the second half getting five baskets, added to the 2 points he got on foul throws in the first half, he led the game scorers with 12. Even this could not get a win for his team. Dudley with 10 and Trumpour with 8 led the winners.

The teams:

Saps—Spiegel 6; Burke 9; Croll 4; McBride 1; Scrymgeour 4; Walmsley—Total 24.

Goons—Galbraith 14; Lepore 6; Muirhead; McCreary; Burshaw; Lazenby 2—Total 22.

Bums—Button; Dudley 10; Trumpour 8; Rose 2; Soule 2; Cameron; Buchanan 6; Maxwell 2—Total 30.

Mugs—Scott 5; Leslie 1; McBurney 1; Creegan 12; Button; Batchelor—Total 19.

Senior League

The senior league saw two teams short handed again, and two defaults as a result. Wildcats and Whizbangs being the only team with complete lineups, were credited with wins. An exhibition game was played which produced some good ball handling and interesting play with the Whizbangs taking the Wildcats for a tough struggle before bowing to them 44-36 at the finish. Wildcats led 24-18 at the half, but in the third quarter the winners had their margin cut to two points making a strong recovery in the last quarter to win by 8 at the final whistle. Whiting and Garrow with 16 and 12 led the winners, while Spafford and Faulkner got 10 apiece for the losers.

The teams:

Wildcats—Garrow 12; Harry 8; Mason 6; Whiting 16; Ostrom 2; Copplee—Total 44.

Whizbangs — Spafford 10; Faulkner 10; Vaughan 4; Miller 6; Watkin; Ritchie 2; Rollins 4 — Total 36.

Austin Watkin handled all three games.

The high single was won by Mrs. L. Mascaro with 337 and the high triple by Mrs. E. Moore with 822.

O.H.A. Groupings In this District

According to groupings released today by the Ontario Hockey Association, it appears that both Belleville Intermediate "A" and Junior "B" squads will engage in inter-city battles with Kingston teams. The "A" squad is grouped in Group 1 with Kingston Lions, Queen's University II's while Doug Whillan's juniors will battle with the Kingston Saints and the Kingston Victorias.

For the first time in years the big red team from the banks of the Moira will not face their traditional rivals from Peterborough and Oshawa in the group races. The Petes have entered two teams, the Peterborough Hockey Club, and the Peterborough Legion (Lakefield) and these are entered in the same group with Lindsay, Whitby, Bowmanville, Port Hope. Oshawa Legion, last year's enemies, are grouped with a western Ontario loop with Brantford, St. Kitts, Kitchener, etc.

There is a neat grouping in the Intermediate "B" series in this district which should be productive of some exciting hockey. Included are squads from Trenton, Trenton Flyers, Picton Combines, Mountain View, with Bloomfield drawing a bye.

In the Junior "C" series are Hastings, Trenton, Napanee and Gananoque.

Baruch Wants Early Vote On Plan by U.S.

By LARRY HAUCK

Lake Success, N. Y., Dec. 17 — (AP) — The United Nations Atomic Energy Commission was summoned to take up the long-debated question of atomic energy control today amid indications that American delegate Bernard M. Baruch was ready to press for an early vote on the United States plan.

The American proposal, stressing international controls and inspections, was turned down flatly by Andrei A. Gromyko of Russia last summer. During the recent General Assembly sessions, however, Foreign Minister Molotov agreed to international inspections and controls, which would operate outside the controversial veto but within the framework of the Security Council.

It remained to be seen whether, in the light of the development, Gromyko now would accept the Baruch plan, seek to amend it, or again insist on his own proposal.

Gromyko's original resolution, also put before the commission last summer, would ban atomic weapons and leave control and punishment to the individual countries.

Baruch, convinced of the "imperative necessity for speed," has prodded the commission continually and now points to the fact that the body must report to the parent security council by Dec. 31.

Baruch's resolution calls for a strong international system of control of atomic energy established and defined by a treaty. This treaty (convention) would set up an international authority with full powers of inspection and control of the treaty regulations. The atomic bomb would be outlawed and the United States would reveal its secrets step by step with the setting up of effective safeguards.

Colder Weather Promised By Forecasters

Chicago, Dec. 17 —(AP)— A cold-wave moved into a large section of the United States today and as temperatures skidded to below zero in many areas forecasters promised colder weather tomorrow.

The chilly blasts which passed across the states yesterday moved across the Great Lakes region into the Ohio and lower Mississippi valleys and headed for the eastern seaboard and the New England States. Forecasters said temperatures in the cold belt area would remain sub-normal most of the week.

New falls of snow reaching as high as nine inches and winds, reaching a velocity of 45 miles an hour accompanied the sub-zero temperatures in the northern sections of Minnesota, Wisconsin and upper Michigan last night.

Suggestion to Open Up 10-Yard Interference Rule May Cause Another Rumpus

Western Coaches Want Backfielders to Block That Distance as Well as Linesmen

Toronto, Dec. 17 — (CP)—Pursued vigorously enough, a suggestion to open up the 10-yard interference rule in Canadian football to allow backfielders as well as linesmen to block that distance could in time create another rumpus between the east and west in the matter of rules.

Conformity of the interference rule between the two sectional rivals was reached last season for the first time in years when the Canadian Rugby Union agreed to increase the blocking distance from five to 10 yards. But to Jack West, who piloted Winnipeg Blue Bombers last season after 31 years as a coach of American teams, the rule doesn't go far enough.

Discussing the Canadian game, the Bombers' coach suggested a further improvement could be made by permitting the backfielders to block 10 yards as well as the linesmen. He said it would eliminate the "confusion" officials have in distinguishing the blockers.

"The game is practically perfect except for that rule," he said. "As it is now a backfielder now and then can get away with blocking illegally and not be caught at it."

What the opposition to a code change will be like may be seen in the comments of two other Americans who have had considerable success in coaching Canadian football clubs. The two, Lew Hayman of Montreal and Alouettes and Warren Stevens, both said it would be a mistake to incorporate West's suggestion in the rules, for if nothing else it would tend to eliminate the end run of the Canadian game.

Stevens Against It

Stevens, athletic director of the University of Toronto and formerly coach of its football team, said no advantage would be gained by changing the rule any further since most of the plays then would be plunged with the ball carrier hoping to break loose after his interference knocked down the secondaries and tertiaries.

"If the backs were allowed to block 10 yards as well as being permitted to be in motion before the ball was snapped, it would be practically impossible to stop them," Stevens added. "I'm dead-set against it."

Speaking for the rule-makers, W. C. Foulds, chairman of the C. R. U. Rules Committee, said:—"It has been discussed, but personally, I think we have gone far enough. You can spoil things by going too far with some ideas."

Another opposed to any further change in the rule is Hec Crighton, dean of Canadian football officials.

MILLS TO MAKE TOUR

London, Dec. 17 —(AP)—Freddie Mills, British light heavyweight champion, who has made a fortune this year in losing to Gus Lesnevich, Bruce Woodcock and Joe Baksi, probably will make a world tour in 1947 — cashing in on a local reputation of being the Empire's best paid loser.

Manager Ted Broadribb, wily veteran who has taken many fighters to the United States, hopes to get Mills a fight in South Africa with the heavyweight champ there, and then go to Australia.

HOCKEY RULES

By BILL GRIM

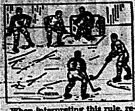
RULE 62

(a) A minor penalty shall be imposed on a player who interferes with or impedes the progress of an opponent who is not in possession of the puck, or who deliberately knocks a stick out of an opponent's hand, or prevents a player who has dropped his stick from regaining possession of it, or who, while not in possession of his own stick, interferes with or attempts to interfere with an opponent.

(Note) The last player to touch the puck—other than a goalkeeper—shall be considered the player in possession.

(b) Unless the puck is in the goal crease area, a player of the attacking side not in possession may not stand on the goal crease line or in the goal crease or hold his stick in the goal crease area, and if the puck should enter the net while such condition prevails, a goal shall not be allowed.

(c) If a player of an attacking side has been deliberately pushed into or is deliberately held in the goal crease by an opponent and the puck should enter the net while the player so pushed or held is still within the goal crease, a "goal" shall be allowed.



When interpreting this rule, referees should make sure which player creates the interference. Often it is the actions and movement of the attacking player, as defending players are allowed to stand their ground or shadow the attacking players. Players of the side in possession shall not be allowed to "run interference" for the puck carrier.

(Note) A player does not necessarily have to be in possession of the puck to be interfered with.

Huskies, Rebels Make a Big Player Deal

Toronto, Dec. 17 —(CP)—Toronto Huskies and Cleveland Rebels have been carrying on player negotiations these last few days and have come up with the result — big Ed Sadowski and Ray Wertis go to the Rebels for the services of Leo Mogus and Dick Schulz, plus an undisclosed amount of money.

Managing director of the Huskies, Lew Hayman, made the announcement early today, suggesting that further deals may be pending.

Mogus, high scoring centre and Schulz, who plays either forward or guard will make the sweater-switch in tonight's game when Cleveland plays host to Toronto outfit.

Sadowski, one of the Basketball Association of America loop's leading scorers when he quit the Toronto team after a game here Nov. 29, has been on the auction block since then.

Toronto, since losing Sadowski, has been looking for a "bucketman" and may find just that in Mogus, a 205-pounder who stands near the top in league scoring.

HAL NEWHOUSER IS TOP HURLER AMERICAN LOOP

Second Straight Year the Detroit Pitcher Has Won This Honor

Chicago, Dec. 17 — (AP)—Hal Newhouser of Detroit Tigers today was officially recognized as the top pitcher in the American League for the second straight year.

Newhouser's 26 victories during the 1946 season tied him with Rapid Robert Feller of Cleveland Indians for the most games won but the big Tiger southpaw was No. 1 in earned runs with 1.94 per game compared with his 1.81 which led the league in 1945, when he won 25 and lost 9.

Toiling in 293 innings during 37 games, Newhouser compiled a record of 26 triumphs against 9 defeats, gave up 215 hits for 77 runs against him, allowed 98 bases on balls and struck out 275 batsmen. His strikeout mark was topped only by Feller who whiffed 348 of the 1,331 men to face him.

Feller Third Best

In winning 26 games while losing 15, Feller's earned run average was 2.18, third best among pitchers who worked 10 or more complete games. New York Yankees' Spud Chandler was second to Newhouser in effectiveness with a 2.10 earned run figure for 34 games, 20 of which he won against only eight losses.

Leading the won-lost column was Boston Red Sox' Dave (Boo) Ferris with a 25-6 record for a mark of .806. Ferris was 14th in the earned-run department with 3.25.

The fifth 20-game winner in the league was Boston's Tex Hughson with 20 triumphs against 11 defeats. Hughson's earned run average was 2.75.

Five Others in List

In addition to Newhouser, Chandler, Feller and Hughson, 5 other pitchers who worked in 10 or more complete games wound up with an under three earned-run average. They were Floyd Bevens of New York, who won 16 and lost 13 and ranked fourth with 2.23; Paul Trout, Detroit 2.35; Ed Lopat, Chicago 2.73; Milt Haefner, Washington, 2.84; and Bob Newsom, Philadelphia-Washington 2.92.

Feller's outstanding record included appearance in more games, 48, than any other hurler; most innings pitched, 371; most complete games pitched 36. He allowed the most hits, 277, and also the most walks, 153. His 348 strikeouts broke a league record which had stood since 1904.

Feller also ran his one - hitter lifetime total to eight with a pair during the 1946 campaign — another league record. He twirled a no-hitter against New York, April 30; turned in two three-hitters, 4 four-hitters and 10 shutouts.

Charlie Conacher Will be Coach St. Louis Flyers

(By The Canadian Press)

Zachary Taylor Davis, 74, the architect who built and designed Comiskey Park, home of the Chicago White Sox of the American Baseball League, died in Chicago yesterday. Davis also built Wrigley Field, home of the National League Chicago Cubs, and the Los Angeles Baseball Stadium.

Tony Cuccinello, veteran major league infielder, will manage the Tampa Smokers of the Florida International League next season, league president Tony Spicola announced yesterday.

Syd Wright, playing coach of Quebec Montagnards of the Quebec Senior Lacrosse League has been awarded the A. L. Caron Trophy as most valuable player in the league, President Dick Brayley announced in Montreal yesterday.

Toronto Maple Leafs of the International Baseball League will open spring training at Tampa, Fla., March 15 under their new manager, Elmer Yoter, president Peter Campbell announced last night.

Veteran southpaw Jake Wade has been sold by Washington Senators of the American League to Jersey City Giants of the International League for an unannounced sum.

Andy Chakowski, high-scoring wing last season for Kansas City Pla-Mors of the United States Hockey League, has been suspended indefinitely for leaving the club for his home in Canmore, Alta., owner Bill Tobin announced last night.

Charlie Conacher, hard-shooting Toronto Maple Leaf right-winger of a few seasons back and coach of the Oshawa Generals of the Ontario Hockey Association's junior A group, will replace a former team-mate, Bob Davidson, as coach of the St. Louis Flyers of the American Hockey League next season. Davidson is on temporary loan to the Flyers from the Leafs.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George E. Carver, Sports Editor

Sam Langford, the famous Boston Tar Baby, fought professionally from 1902 to 1923 and compiled a record that won't be forgotten by boxing followers for many years. A native of Weymouth, Nova Scotia, Langford was nominally a welterweight but never worried about the size or shape of a prospective opponent. Fifteen times he fought big rugged Harry Wills, billed far and wide as the one heavyweight Jack Dempsey was afraid to meet.

Sam tackled men like Stanley Ketchel, Joe Gans, Jack Blackburn, Young Peter Jackson. Reputed nearly blind at the close of his career, Langford still had tremendous boxing skill.

The Tar Baby was confident of his ability. One day he took on a lightweight named Jack Lester. Sam came out of his corner for the fifth round with hands extended. "What's the idea, Sam?" asked Lester. "This ain't the last round."

Sam laughed and said, "Boy that's what you think," a minute later Lester was out like a light.

Looks as though those surging Petes from the Liftlock City who scalped our Redmen but plenty last year, and ran the highly touted Kingston Locos to the wire (with broken sticks?) are to be split up this semester, according to the Peterborough scribe.

* * *

But four of the originals appear to be willing to return to the original fold, to wit, Bun Kingdon; Art Heal; Henry Tompkins and Les Burton. Ray Harding and Randy Ellis will wear Lindsay colors and 'tis said that fiery Ned Vitarelli who will master-mind the Legion squad has garnered Joe Blewitt and Red Creighton.

* * *

In the meantime the lads of the Army and Navy Intermediate team here are sitting on their haunches in the main and waiting for ice. If the present weather keeps up it shouldn't be too long and don't be surprised to see the boys pucking up and down the harbor stretches while Walt Gerow is putting the glace carpet on his spacious hockey living room.

PERSONALITY

Trainer Tom McKenna of the New York Rangers is the youngest trainer in the National Hockey League at 27 years of age, according to a NHL release. McKenna, who was born on May 5, 1919 in Minneapolis and still makes his home there, made his debut as a trainer at the age of 14.

* * *

Tom became connected with the Minneapolis Millers in the American Hockey Association serving as a sort of assistant trainer. Although he was just 14 and was deep in his studies at school McKenna spent every available moment around the Minneapolis hockey team, acquiring as much knowledge as he could about looking after the ills of hockey players.

* * *

When the Millers would play away from home, little Tommy would take his school books with him and accompany the club everywhere they went. He would study his lessons on trains, in hotel rooms, in dressing rooms and anywhere he had the chance. When he returned from the trips he would be given tests by his school teacher.

* * *

McKenna spent the 1941-42 season training the Dallas hockey team. After the season was over he enlisted in the Medical Detachment of the United States Infantry where he spent the next four years.

* * *

Some of the most humorous happenings in Trainer McKenna's association with hockey players took place when he was with Minneapolis. There was a terrific rivalry between Minneapolis and St. Paul in the hockey wars and every time the two clubs met mayhem was committed. There was one particularly rough game in Minneapolis in which the St. Paul players came out on top. In the next clash between the two teams played in St. Paul, the Minneapolis players borrowed football helmets from the University of Minnesota and when the team took the ice at the start of the contest all the players on the Minneapolis team were equipped with football helmets. It was quite a lark and the fans howled with laughter. The players became unbearably warm wearing the helmets however, and they were discarded after five minutes.

* * *

McKenna likes to tell about the time Ching Johnson broke his nose, flipped it back into shape and continued with the game without being out of the play at any time. (Such durable people these hockey players are). Johnson was playing-coach of the Minneapolis Millers at the time.

* * *

Tom well remembers Leroy Goldsworthy's trick shoulder. It seemed that Goldsworthy had a trick shoulder and would slip out of place with monotonous regularity. Goldsworthy was playing for Dallas in 1941-42 and McKenna was the trainer. very time that the shoulder would slip out of place "Goldie" would skate over to the Dallas bench and McKenna would push the displaced bone back into place, and Leroy would carry right on with the play.

* * *

McKenna is keen and enthusiastic in his career as a trainer of athletes and seems to have the qualities needed to get along in his profession. The New York players are very high on him and he is making his first season as a trainer in the National Hockey League a very successful one.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By MEL SUFRIN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Charlottetown, Dec. 17—(CP)—With the exception of a sailor on a two-day shore leave, and maybe a woman in a hat shop, that particular species of mankind known as the "sport fan" stands head and shoulders above his fellow humans when it comes to fickleness.

For in what other pursuit can a man be cheered as a hero one minute and the very next be booed and heckled until the rafters shudder?

A good example of this lightning changeability in feeling has been the hockey player career of Gordie Drillon. Few sportsmen would be more willing to testify to fickleness in sport than the erstwhile right-winger of Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens.

It was reminiscent of the old days in the National Hockey League when Moncton-born Gordie skated out on the ice here last week as playing coach for Charlottetown Legionnaires in the city's senior circuit.

The game ended in an 8-8 tie and Gordie indulged in a lucrative evening of puckchasing, scoring a pair of goals and assisting in two others.

But it was the third period that brought back unhappy memories of the days four and five years ago with Toronto.

Because in the third period cheers turned to jeers and the fans began heckling Gordie in typical Toronto style.

Drillon let his ire get the better of him while sitting out a minor penalty. He turned, made for a spectator who had been heckling him, and wound up with a match misconduct.

Back at the turn of the decade Toronto's fickle fandom made life miserable for Drillon, even though he was a 20-goal a year man.

Drillon's shortcoming, if it can rightly be called that, was that he patrolled his wing with what appeared to be little effort.

Some said he was leaving all the backchecking to his linemates, Syl Apps and Nick Metz. But Apps for one had nothing but praise for Drillon's play. There wasn't a better Johnny-on-the-spot in the N.H.L.

His goal-getting prowess was disregarded by Leafian supporters who gave Gordie a merciless ride for what they thought was laziness.

When he finally was traded to Montreal, the heckling subsided, although not necessarily because Montreal sport fans are less fickle. It was more likely because Montreal's civic pride seldom allows it to follow any example set by little-loved Toronto.

Why the Charlottetown fans decided to pick up where Torontonians left off may possibly stem from the publicity given by the national radio to the persistent jeering that followed Drillon across the Maple Leaf Gardens ice lanes. It should be noted that Saturday night games in Toronto are heard in Charlottetown on a coast-to-coast network.

WANT ALL-OUT PRODUCTION

Toronto, Dec. 17 (CP) — Delegates to a weekend meeting here of the United Automobile Workers Union (CCL-CIO) Sunday adopted the recommendation of George Burt, Canadian Director of the Union, for all-out production and maintenance of price control so that the general wage structure would not be disturbed. The resolution however said this program would not prevent the "elimination of certain inequalities" in differentials which may exist at present.

ELLSWORTH VINES GOLFER TO BEAT IN COMING YEAR

Former Tennis Star Has Terrific Competitive Spirit

Miami, Fla., Dec. 17. (AP)—Along the golfing trail, they're saying that Ellsworth Vines, the reformed tennis player, will be the golfer to beat in 1947.

The Hogans, Nelsons and Sneads continued to dominate the professional picture during 1946, but with another year coming up, other names which may draw the attention along the tourney circuit were entering the picture.

Besides Vines, they include Johnny Palmer, Badin, N.C.; Loui Worsham, Washington, D.C.; Peter Cooper, Ponte Vedra, Fal.; George Shoux, Mamaroneck, N.Y., Al Smith, Danville, Va., and Jackie Burke, Jr, Houston, Tex.

But Vines has the experience over the others and he also has what fellow pros term "terrific competitive spirit."

Vines, 33 years old, of Los Angeles, Calif., has one of the most improved games in the business, says Freddie Corcoran, P.G.A. tournament manager, who sees all the big time golf.

After Vines had fired a six under par 29 to break the record on the outgoing nine of the Miami Springs golf course during the recent Miami open, there was much talk of his game.

"He is a good putter and long off the tee when he wants to be," they said. "But he's got more: he's got the stuff to stick in there and win.

"He's the fellow who's going to win two national titles in as many sports."

Vines was U.S. tennis singles and Wimbledon singles champion.

His golf victories this year included the Massachusetts and Pikes Peak opens. He was only a stroke behind Herman Barron in the rich Tam O'Shanter, and tied for third place with E. J. (Dutch) Harrison in the Miami open. He copped the Southern California open last year.

Sports Roundup

New York, Dec. 17. (CP) — Cleopatra and Frankie Boucher are centuries apart in point of time, as everybody knows, but Shakespeare might have been thinking of the hockey man instead of the Queen of the Nile when he wrote that "age cannot wither nor custom stale her infinite variety" . . . . Boucher, who started the customers three years ago by returning to active National Hockey League competition at the age of 41, unfurls new features of a jack-of-all-trades personally every day. . . There is Boucher, the gentleman farmer (home plantation: South Mountain, Ont.), there is Boucher, the coach (magnetized blackboards for skull sessions, the "swing shift" netminding system, and so on) and Boucher the mild-mannered Milquestoast (seven times winner of the Lady Byng trophy as the league's most gentlemanly player).

Well, the Ranger bossman's "infinite variety" doesn't end there. Boucher may be mellow now and easy on the draw, but as a kid of 17 he was a hard-riding member of the Royal Northwest Mounted . . . One of his pals in Ottawa suggested the idea, Boucher told Red (N.Y. Herald Tribune) Smith, and though Fran couldn't ride a horse he decided to join when his friend promised to take the riding tests for him. . . "But when we got to Regina for our training, we were on our own," Boucher related. "They'd say, 'you take that horse, Boucher,' and we'd get up on these half-broken beasts and the instructor would belt 'em with a whip and whoole, that was it."

NAVAL CUSTOMS AND TRADITIONS No. 10
CHRISTMAS AT SEA: All hands enjoy the Navy's memorable Yuletide customs. Every ship that can obtain some evergreen — tree or sprig — fastens it to the masthead. And the youngest rating becomes, theoretically, master of the ship, replacing the real Captain, who discharges his duties for him. Tradition also demands that the Captain personally serve Christmas dinner to the crew!

At no-trump, south is in the lead and must take seven of these nine tricks. Pop tried to solve the problem with the obvious spade lead. He kept hacking around with it as shown below:

West covers the spade with jack and dummy wins with queen. East sluffs a club. North heart queen is led. Suppose west sluffs a spade on this. North leads spade ace, south sluffing a diamond.

Club nine is led. Suppose east refuses to cover. It wins and spade trey is led into the west nine. Now the opponents can take only one more trick no matter what return comes from west.

When club nine is led, suppose east covers with the king. South wins with ace and then takes diamond ace and heart jack. A heart goes to east. South gets the seventh trick with a final club.

On dummy heart queen, suppose west sluffs a diamond. The spade ace is not led. Club nine is led and won with south ace even if east does not cover. Then lead heart jack, diamond ace, and a diamond.

West is in and must lead spades. If it is not the seven, dummy refuses to take the first return. That gives declarer two more spades to make the total of seven needed tricks.

But when dummy leads heart queen, west could sluff a club. After that, only six tricks can be taken with careful defence. Therefore, starting with a spade lead is not the answer.

This problem must be solved against any defence by opponents. Find the leads and plays that will take seven tricks despite any opposition by west or east. Can do.

The Movie Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

James Mason has finally emerged from his self-imposed hibernation from the press, which he lately started in New York and continued in Greenwich, Conn., to meet reporters and tell them a few of his plans for the future.

They are: Roughly six months' sightseeing in the United States which means no Hollywood pictures this trip; possibility of a Broadway play—he has already looked at two scripts which he considered unsuitable. If he does do a play it will be for a limited run in New York and an extended tour on the road.

"That would be a wonderful way to see the country," he said. "I would insist, however, on an engagement in Los Angeles. That would be a convenient excuse for visiting Hollywood and I could then go there as a very superior sort of person."

Mr. Mason's face, often scowling on the screen, has a boyish quality when he smiles and there is no suggestion of the sadistic nature of many of his characterizations which have "wowed" the ladies. He himself doesn't think his fans would be as much interested in his real personality as by "the sadistic, unrealistic characters I play."

Currently his lawyers are trying to stop release of his film "The Wicked Lady", in the United States because some his speeches have been cut at the request of the Johnston office and his contract states that none of his scenes shall be changed after he has approved them.

Louis Hayward has signed up for three movie stints—In January he will report to Eagle-Lion to make "Repeat Performance" with Joan Leslie and "Love From a Stranger" with Merle Oberon. After that he is slated to go to Italy to produce a picture for Edward Small.

Mr. Hayward replaces Arturo de Cordova in "Love From a Stranger", and will be supported by Richard Basehart in "Repeat Performance".

"Germany Today," latest release of R.K.O. Pathe's "This is America" series, gives a comprehensive account of post-war life in the American zone of Germany, showing breadlines and ruins, night clubs and frauleins, the Russian zone, G.I.'s yachting on the Wannsee, and German children learning baseball.

The picture is informative and good as far as it goes, but unless one knows otherwise, it leaves the impression that what it shows is the whole of Germany and that Germany is something like a new American subsidiary with nothing between the lively remnants of Nazism and a defenceless outer world but 300,000 United States Occupation troops.

AT THE BELLE

Setting a fresh pace for merry mayhem and riotous romance, "It Shouldn't Happen To A Dog," 20th Century-Fox's new comedy hit starring Carole Landis and Allyn Joslyn, opens today at the Belle Theatre.

The hilarious motion picture tells the story of a frustrated newspaper reporter who, in an attempt to score a Page One crime scoop, sets out after a gang of black marketeers, only to find himself entangled — romantically and otherwise — with the law in the person of a glamorous lady cop and her ubiquitous dog.

In one of her most unusual roles to date, Miss Landis is seen as the beautiful lady cop with an eye for romance, while Joslyn appears as the newshound with a nose for news who follows a black market trail—right into Carole's arms.

The film, directed by Herbert I. Leeds and produced by William Girard, features Margo Woode, Henry Morgan, Reed Hadley, Jean Wallace, Roy Roberts and John Ireland.

"Man Alive," Hilarious

Hilarious results ensue when a husband forgets his wife's birthday in the hilarious screen comedy, "Man Alive," the second laugh feature attraction starring Pat O'Brien, Adolphe Menjou and Ellen Drew, with Rudy Vallee featured. O'Brien is the forgetful husband and Miss Drew is the neglected wife. When Vallee arrives on the scene with an armful of red roses, Ellen makes such a fuss over him that O'Brien goes out to drown his troubles with the most astonishing results. Menjou tries to fix things up, but only succeeds in making it worse.

DEEP SNOW IN MIDLAND

Midland, Dec. 17 (CP)—Residents of this Georgian Bay area last Monday fought their way through snowdrifts after a continuous fall of almost 60 hours left a blanket of more than 20 inches. Main highways were reported open but dangerous for travel, while most side-roads were blocked and unplowed suburban thoroughfares were deeply drifted.

Almost hidden by huge heap of holly Vivian Notley and Marie Maggiora (left) helping harvest and package Yuletide crop in the Gordon Head district, Vancouver Island. Holly is clipped from trees (above) and shiny, green prickly sprigs with bright red berries piled into wicker baskets.

Some Men Have Unusual Hobbies

(From The New York Times)

Out in Chicago a butcher took up the pleasant pastime of constructive whittling after shop hours. For four years he devoted all his spare moments to converting a plank of wood 18 feet long and 22 inches wide into a chain. The final result was unique—a 350 foot length of unbroken links. Bursting with pride the man of meat draped the chain over himself from head to foot and had photographs made for the benefit of posterity.

In California's Folsom Penitentiary, an inmate who was a jeweler spent his spare time in constructing a clock exclusively out of the handles of worn-out toothbrushes. When finished after five months it ran smoothly and kept perfect time. Across the country, a Rochester man made an elaborate time-piece out of 22,000 pieces of wood. The job consumed eight hour daily for four and a half years and constituted the crowning achievement of thirty-three years of devotion to the hobby.

A man in de Ruyter, N. Y., constructed a perfect copy of Washington's Mount Vernon out of wood, paper and cardboard. He used up 3,726 pieces of material and the job consumed 475 hours, he informed the press, referring to a carefully kept work sheet. Near by a Syracuse man constructed a perfect sailing vessel model two and a half feet long out of 3,600 wooden matches. All the matches had been struck.

In Salt Lake City a convict in the State prison constructed a walking cane entirely out of cancelled postage stamps. He wound the paper bits around a thin steel core saturating the project with glue as he went along. When dry he put it on a lathe and turned it into a spiral, topping it off with a brass knob and applying a coat of lacquer.

Traffic Delayed For Seven Hours

Arnprior, Dec. 17 (CP)—An engine overturned and traffic was delayed nearly seven hours last night when a freight train bound for Smiths Falls left the tracks near here last night.

The train crew escaped unhurt from the overturned engine, but the tender and three freight cars were derailed and all traffic on the lines was at a standstill until crews, working in sub-zero weather, cleared the lines.

Only passenger train affected was an Ottawa—Pembroke local whose passengers were transferred to buses. The Canadian Pacific railway transcontinental train, which passed the scene of the accident about midnight, made its way without delay. Cause of the derailment was not determined.

Prof. Langevin, Scientist, Ill

Paris, Dec. 17 — (AP)—Prof. Paul Langevin, 74, noted French scientist, was reported dangerously ill here today. Langevin, known especially for his pioneer work in electro-magnetism and for his contributions to many branches of theoretical physics, was twice arrested by the Germans during the Nazi occupation of France and was held in confinement for long periods.

PRISONERS END HUNGER STRIKE

Philadelphia, Dec. 17 — (AP)—Five Eastern Penitentiary prisoners, four of whom participated in an escape 20 months ago, ended a 12-day hunger strike last night, penitentiary officials reported. Shortly after the men refused to eat on Dec. 4, penitentiary officials said they struck in protest against being segregated from other prisoners.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was addressing Christmas cards to the people she expects to get cards from, and I said, Hay ma, I bet Ant Fanny is going to send me stockings again for Christmas, because that's what she always send me. Do you think there's still time for you to send a letter telling her I've got plenty of stockings? I said.

Such an idea for land sakes, ma said. And as a litteral matter of fact you haven't got plenty of stockings, and the ones you have are full of darns, she said, and I said, But jimminy, ma, I mean gosh, that's none of Ant Fanny's business, is it?

Certainly it is, I mean people dont dictate to other people about what Christmas presents to send them, at least not in good siaiety, ma said. Your Ant Fanny naturelly thinks you'd be only too happy to receive some nice new stockings, she said, and I said, Well then: If she found out I wouldn't even be happy enough, she'd probably change her mind and send me something else if it's not too late yet. But anyways, ma, if you wont write and tell her, maybe I might just as well write her my letter of thanks in advance and get it off my mind, if you'll give me a stamp for the envelope, I said.

I'll be glad to, I'm sure I'll be delighted not to have to remind you to write every day for weeks, ma said.

And she gave me the stamp and I wrote the letter, Being, "Dear Ant Fanny, I knew they were going to be stockings again before I even opened the package, so I wasn't as dissappointed as what I would of been if I hadn't got so used to the shock from experience. Your loving neffew Benny.

And I hurry up addressed the envelope and ran out and mailed it before ma had a chance to ask to see the letter, and I'm still hoping for the best.

BURNED FINGERS

CHAPTER 24

Intoxicating talk, even if one only half believed it! But it gave her confidence, and the weeks and months as they went by confirmed it. Mary Flood was not the only employee at Vogelsang's who made friendly overtures to little Jennifer Richie. Sometimes a customer would say, "That small one, with the pretty speech." Sometimes a brother home from college would linger after his mother and sister had finished their inspection of summer wear, to task the pretty model if he hadn't met her someplace. Always she had the half-annoying, secretly gratifying tribute from strange men in the streets; they could not let her go by without some sort of tribute.

Jennifer liked to go home with Mary for the night. Between Marys 'grim gray middle age and her glowing young beauty a strange affinity asserted itself. Jennifer felt safe at the Floods' little cottage. She went with Mary to the mysterious ceremonies called the rosary and benediction, and thought of Eugene. She liked the candles and the incense, and the great dim church shaken by the organ: she loved the walk home with Mary, with two or three of Mary's contemporaries supplying an accompaniment of lachrymose and resigned conversation.

Another winter had gone by, and it was spring when Betty stupefied her with the announcement that she and Clint had arranged to be remarried. Clint, bashfully reappearing in his family circle, seemed to Jennifer to be quite a changed person. He was gray and mild and oddly shrunken; his manner was apologetic and conciliatory. The small girls instantly took him back to their hearts, and Betty was suddenly five years younger and filled with a certain coquetry and bloom.

They were married on a warm, grimy, windy July day; Faddy and Eina had permanents for the occasion and new dresses, and Betty wore a cluster of gardenias on the shoulder of her new suit. Jennifer was her stepmother's only attendant, and afterwards they all went to dinner at Solari's.

All this was oddly satisfying to Jennifer. Clint was making good money; Betty's money troubles were temporarily over. Faddy was to have Jennifer's little hall bedroom for her own; Eina would sleep on the couch in the parlor. For Jennifer there was new freedom, and she felt herself ready for it. It was with a deep feeling of relief that she left the old life behind her.

Betty had tried with affectionate eagerness to make some arrangement by which they could all live together, and Jennifer's heart had trembled with apprehension while any such plan was under discussion. But in the end they had all agreed that there was really not room in the flat for the enlarged family, and Jennifer had asked Mary Flood what she would advise. Mary had not even heard her out.

"You'll come straight to us," she had said, warming the very fibers of Jennifer's heart with the quiet glance she gave her as she said it. "My mother'd never speak to me again if you went anywhere else! Send your trunk out and stop your nonsense. It's my honest belief that Mama's been saying prayers to St. Jude about it ever since that first night!"

"Oh, Mary, I'd love it, but I'd crowd you!"

"Now listen: I always sleep in the alcove off Mama's room because of her heart. There's my brother John's room now empty, where you slept before. I'll have it papered. . . ."

So Jennifer moved out to San Jose Avenue and a new life began for her. She had a clean, square, sunshiny room to herself, a big closet of which she could take possession with all the delightful feelings that first new homemaking sensations have meant to all women since Eve herself. Soon she had her small duties in the household. Old Mrs. Flood would come home from market to find the dish towels sunning themselves on the backyard line or a tiny glass bowl of velvet pansies placed before the picture of Sergeant Francis X. Flood, dead at Vimy Ridge more than twenty years ago.

Jennifer paid board—five dollars a week. Mrs. Flood did not like it and generally managed to return at least a part of the sum in one form or another during the seven days. Stockings would appear in Jennifer's bureau, washed and mended with cobweb fineness; a fresh ruffle would adorn her office dress; her shoes were half-soled, her coat always brushed. "You spoil me!" she said.

Of her real return for their love she was only half conscious. She kept them laughing; she kept the house gay; there was youth where she was, with all its absurdities and impulses and plans.

"You get Mama going on those old Irish stories the way John and Annie and I never did!" said Mary. Annie was the married sister who lived in Oakland with a widowed daughter and a houseful of grandchildren. Sometimes on Sunday Jennifer went with Mary and her mother to Annie's household to take small shirts, a cake, six toys from the "dimee" and rolled copies of a church periodical.

One early December night Mary asked Jennifer to go with her to see a cousin who lived out on McAllister Street near the park. The cousin was elderly and invalided, and Jennifer did not anticipate any especial pleasure in the visit.

But they found there, waiting in the cousin's snuff-scented parlor, a tall, joyous youth who immediately took possession of Jennifer with a shout of recognition.

"Joe Evans!" cried Jennifer, as delighted as he. Mary Flood afterward asked her when they were at home how it happened that Joe Evans felt free to kiss her, and Jennifer replied with equal gravity that they had been mutually devoted to Eugene, "the brother that died."

Joe and she had been left downstairs while Mary mounted to see the invalid cousin, and Jennifer had not been able to get her questions out fast enough, laughing with a joyous abandon that she had not known for months—had not known, perhaps, since her little girlhood—at his replies.

Oh, it was so good to get in touch with them all again! Mollie had a little girl, hadn't she? Another? She didn't have two little girls? Oh, how darling! Sheila and Brenda. How darling! And his sister Marg'ret was home? And his cousins, the Reillys, and that cousin from Sacramento—the—the — the haughty one—Ellen Flowers?

"It's a pity you wouldn't come see Mama, and see Mollie's kids. She's right near Mama, about five minutes in the car. She's there almost every day. Listen—if I come get you Sunday will you come have dinner with us? My mother's always loved you."

"Your father?" Jennifer began hesitantly.

"Oh, gosh, the old man's always been crazy about you."

"Oh, life is fun!" said Jennifer.

No miracle had occurred, but the drab and dreary and shameful things seemed to have vanished into thin air, and Jennifer's daytime hours were filled with new thoughts and new interests, and her evenings and holidays were all fun. She had Christmas Eve dinner with the Evanses, and went to midnight mass with them, and in church Jim Lippincott took possession of her hand and held it warmly and tightly all during the sermon.

The air was sweet with the scent of candles and fir; the choir sang "Adeste Fideles," and it seemed to Jennifer as if the whole church was ready to float straight up to heaven on the waves of music and sweetness and light. Now and then she looked up sideways at Jim, and always he half turned his face and gave her a grave smile.

There were about sixteen in the Evans party; they came out of the warm bright church into the cold, starry winter night together, and said subdued but happy "Merry Christmas!" to one another. Then Joe and Jim walked home with Mary Flood and Mary's warmly bundled, sprightly old mother and Jennifer. They were all going to meet at the Evanses' again the next day, but the men said good night to them very seriously at the door, and kissed each one of them solemnly; old Mrs. Flood, Mary, and Jennifer.

Jennifer lay long awake, thinking about Jim and wondering.

Jim was a doctor; had just graduated. He was an intern at the City and County Hospital, an enormous building spreading itself across a hillside at the southern edge of the city. He was a tall, lean, broad-shouldered man of perhaps thirty; his cheekbones were long, his mouth large, his deep-set eyes gray. He had a mass of tawny, straight hair, somewhat unruly and a deep, kind voice. He was hard-working, serious, amusing in a dry sort of way, and had the quality, Jennifer thought, of making every woman who saw him fall in love with him.

Jennifer had met him on the occasion of her first happy reunion with the Evanses, and instantly had liked and admired him far and away above anyone she had ever met; he was put at once into a class by himself. All the other men in the world were—well, just men, fat or thin, dull or smart, likable or negligible. Jim was Jim. He electrified any gathering he was in; his quiet voice dominated other voices; presently everyone was more or less openly listening to him. "Jim Lippincott, Jim Lippincott," Jennifer would say to herself, thrilled by the very sound of the words.

Of course he did not pay any serious attention to her; why should he? For one thing a dozen persons with better rights were always taking possession of him, and for another he was working hard and did not come often to parties nor stay late when he did come. Jennifer was convinced that Mollie's sister-in-law, pretty Myra Moore, was madly in love with him, and there was a young and lovely widow, Helen MacInnes, who made no secret—or so Jennifer imagined—of her feeling for the doctor.

There were ten or a dozen of them who were together constantly that spring. When the weather was unpleasant they would dine downtown at some Italian or French restaurant and sing; the restaurant might not be smart, but to no one in this group did smartness matter. Then they would go to Mollie's house or the Evanses' house and play games, laughing themselves weak or penciled rhymes or puzzles, doing a great deal of joyous stumbling against each other and blundering to and fro when the time came for scrambled eggs and coffee.

Nobody was rich, but there was always enough food and light and firewood, always enough money for movies and carfare. It was a new world to Jennifer, a world without show, without strain, without pretence, without worry. If they played games for money it was but a few cents; if a spokesman—it was often Jim—announced to each member of a party his share of expenses, the girls as well as the boys paid on the nail. Mary Flood and her mother took as keen an interest in Jennifer's clothes on these occasions, her experiences, her triumphs, as any of her own flesh and blood could have done.

As the early spring warmed and bloomed about them they went on trips. Jennifer, silent with ecstasy, had her first look at the great trees of Mendocino County. She went with them to somebody's cabin at Aptos, and on an April Sunday morning they walked on curves of beach and stretches of great tumbled boulders; they stood on the points of the cliffs, and Jennifer felt the sweet salty wind ruffling her soft hair. They came back under the warm blanket of the fog and cooked hamburgers and toasted buns, and Jennifer felt that there had never been so happy a day and such wonderful people!

She had her own special place among them; she was their cap and bells. She pretended that she did not know it; her characteristic expression was one of innocent gravity. But she could amuse them; they looked to her for it. She would answer Thad O'Connor with the trembling meekness of a browbeaten little wife; she could sink her voice to a rich coarseness and burst into a choice type of Billingsgate that always wrung an amazed, half-shocked laugh even from Jim; in charades or impromptu theatricals she took whatever part they gave her with tremendous vim and enthusiasm. On one occasion, when old Mrs. Evans was in bed with a cold, Jennifer swept a big shawl about her slender body and came in to call in the guise of a lachrymose gossip.

For five minutes she sustained the part, reporting upon an imaginary family: "Joel, who was not drunk but had a little drink taken, d'ye see, Ma-iry," and "Tom and Frank, the twins, who have me bate wit' the devil that's in thim, God love thim!" and "The little one-een we burrit. 'Tis har'rd to burry thim, Ma-iry!" Mrs. Evans and the others, in an appreciative group, followed her narrative with respectful attention.

"Well, Mollie an' Joe's here an' I seen Delia in the hall," Jennifer finished with a glance about, "but where's the little Richie ger'rl today?"

And at this Mrs. Evans, with a vaguely puzzled similar glance about, answered in good faith, "She was here a minute ago!" to a chorus of delighted shouts and for the establishment of one more priceless family laugh on Mom.

Every hour of this wonderful spring and summer seemed to develop some new delight. Jennifer's consciousness of her own beauty, her own wit, her own lovableness—for they all made her feel it was like wings growing from her shoulders, lifting her above the old life she had known.

Refuses Plea Of Durant Counsel To Strike Out Words

Frankfurt, Germany, Dec. 17 — (AP) — Counsel for Col. Jack W. Durant today challenged the prosecution's assertion that Durant married former Captain Kathleen Nash of the Women's Army Corps "to seal her mouth" and asked the military court to strike the statement from the record of his trial on charges of participation in the theft of the $1,500,000 Hesse family jewels.

Defence counsel charged the assertion by the prosecutor, Maj. Joseph Robinson, was made "solely to prejudice the court."

The court denied the motion to strike. The defence then asked a 10-day continuance to obtain evidence to combat that and other "new issues" it said had been raised.

Without ruling directly on that request, the court recessed indefinitely until more heat could be obtained in the chilly courtroom.

Robinson, in his opening statement yesterday, said Durant's marriage with the W.A.C. captain, later convicted of participation in the jewel theft, was designed to prevent her from testifying against him, since wives cannot be made to testify against their husbands.

Youth Group Sponsors Yule Carol Service

A Christmas carol service sponsored by the Christian Youth Fellowship of the city was held in Bridge Street United Church on Sunday night, after the regular service, before a good-sized audience. The program, which was broadcast over radio station CJBQ, was replete with vocal and instrumental music that did credit to the efforts of the talented Christian youth of this city and brought to a fitting climax their first year of organization.

Mr. Eric C. Naylor, local composer and poet, who is general chairman of the Fellowship, capably performed the duties of announcer for the broadcast. Speaking briefly concerning the organization, Mr. Naylor stated that it was not connected in any way with similar organizations in Canada but that the Belleville group came into being in order that the various church youth organizations of the city could enjoy fellowship and meet occasionally to worship their common Lord. Speaking of Christmas celebrations, Mr. Naylor stated. "It is right that we should celebrate Christmas and give presents; but sometimes we are so busy celebrating Christmas we forget Christ. Let us not forget the Babe of Bethlehem, whom God sent to save the world from sin."

The youth chorus, under the able leadership of Mr. Stan Lessels, sang three carols, "Silent Night," "Joy to the World" and "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name." The audience was visibly impressed with the offerings of this splendid young choir and the deft skill of Miss Dorothy Mitchell their accompanist.

Carols sung by choir and congregation, accompanied by organ and piano, included "O Come All Ye Faithful," "While Shepherds Watched" and "Hark! The Herald Angels Sing." The scripture story of the nativity of Jesus was read by Mr. Ray Gunsolus.

Deeply appreciated was an alto solo "The Birthday of a King," sung by Miss Margaret Hillis. Mr. Gordon Brown created magic on his violin as he played "O Little Town of Bethlehem" and Bob Stebbins, talented young euphonium artist, delighted the audience with his rendition of "The Holy City."

An organ solo "Christmas Evening" (Mauro-Cottone) as played by Mr. Alec Gordon was a perfect distillation of abounding organistic gifts and interpreted with delicacy of instinct.

After the broadcast program the audience was privileged to hear a charming solo "Away in a Manger" sung by Master David Benn, a diminutive lad who captivated the hearts of all. The very personification of innocence, and devoid of any sign of stagefright, David also recited "Happy Birthday to Jesus Our King."

The opening prayer was given by Miss Jessie Hart and at the close of the service the Reverend D. C. Ames, minister of Bridge Street Church, pronounced the benediction.

NOTICE

The Annual Meeting of the Foxboro Cheese Company will be held at the factory on Friday, December 20th, 1946, at 1 o'clock for the transacting of general business and selling milk routes.

Search for Cause Of Mystery Disease In Babies Widens

London, Dec. 17 (CP).—Search for the cause of the mystery disease in newly born babies widened today from hospitals to people's homes as reports reaching Lancashire health authorities said that babies born at home also were falling victims to the disease.

Earlier three maternity wards were shut down for disinfection as authorities sought to curb the disease which already has taken the lives of 23 infants, affected five English hospitals and infected 18 other persons despite the "highest possible standards of feeding and attention."

In Lancashire, Dr. F. Hall, the county medical officer, said that he had ordered a full investigation into all baby deaths in the country in the last few months in which there have been symptoms of the mystery disease.

In Oxford's Cowley Road Hospital only two of a staff of 21 midwives and nurses in the maternity section escaped infection and 29 babies suffered attacks but there were no deaths.

Leicester General Hospital has been hardest hit. There a death Sunday brought the toll to 15 and forced closing of the maternity ward.

In old Windsor death of newlyborn twins Sunday gave rise to fears of a fifth epidemic, but the status of the epidemic in two Lancashire hospitals remained unchanged.

Gastro-enteritis has been prevalent in the maternity section of the Cowley Road Hospital since July but the public health laboratory has been unable to find "any positive results as to the type of organism responsible for the outbreak."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 17 —(CP)— The gold group recorded an index gain of .35 in the early session on Toronto Stock Exchange today and the other groups were down narrowly. Trading quieted down and the turnover for the first three hours was down to 535,000 shares.

MacDonald gained 20 cents or more, Campbell Red Lake firmed 15 cents and Bush Lake was in demand at an advance of about 5 cents or more.

Industrial stocks displayed mild weakness in the steel, liquor and paper groups. The Western oil share market moved sluggishly and at steady prices.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Buyers lifted individual stocks in today's market although many leaders continued to seek lower territory.

Selective recoveries appeared around mid-day with activity picking up a bit for an interval. While modest advances were well distributed near the fourth hour, numerous minus signs persisted.

Canadian issues generally were easy. C.P.R. at mid-day was off 3-8 and Hiram Walker and Distillers Seagrams each slipped 1-8. Dome Mines and McIntyre were unchanged.

PRODUCE MARKET

Toronto, Dec. 17 (CP)—Produce prices in the spot market here today were reported as follows:

Eggs: Receipts continue to arrive in heavy volume and moving slowly at unchanged prices; wholesale to retail, A large 45, A medium 41, A pullet 37, B 36-37, C 33-35; country shippers quoted graded eggs, case free, A large 41, A medium 37-38, A pullet 33-34, B 32, C 30-31.

Big Problems Face Britain During 1947

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London (CP)—British industry is near its goal of 100-per-cent reconversion to peacetime output but enters 1947 with the warning it must boost production for export or the country will "come a real cropper" in a year or two.

This dire prediction, from Sir Stafford Cripps, President of the Board of Trade, comes at a time when multiple shortages handicap industrial activity and the British people, after seven years' austerity, clamor for more goods at home.

"We are short of materials, short of coal, short of timber, short of labor," said Sir Clive Baillieu, president of the Federation of British Industries.

And while the manufacturing trades resume their normal operations, agriculture still is on a full war footing. Faced with an acute world food shortage, British farmers still must concentrate on growing grain instead of turning back to cattle, hogs and poultry.

Government spokesmen have termed the over-all labor shortage their greatest problem—so pressing that manpower, like finances, are going to be budgeted next year.

From a total working population of about 20,000,000, the same as in 1939, the government must find twice as many men for the forces and peacetime conscription and raising of the school-leaving age will keep youths out of industry. Women are quitting their jobs in large numbers to go back into the home and elderly persons who kept working through the critical war years now are retiring.

Already the export industries, with 1,344,000 workers, have almost 50 per cent more staff than before the war. They need at least 800,000 more to reach the country's export goal—three-quarters more by volume than in 1938.

Lifting of wartime labor controls has complicated the problem since workers no longer can be directed into essential jobs. For instance, agriculture must rely on German prisoners-of-war for 15 per cent of its labor force, despite an increase in the farm-workers minimum wage to £4 10s. ($18) a week.

Critical Fuel Shortage

Shortage of fuel is critical. Fuel Minister Emanuel Shinwell has predicted a 3,000,000-ton gap between production and demand, cutting the nation's stocks far below the safety level. Arthur Horner, general secretary of the National Union of Mineworkers, has predicted widespread factory shutdowns unless output goes up.

Among materials, steel is the danger-point. Strikes in the United States slashed expected imports from that country and lack of steel now is being felt in a dozen directions. The motor trade already has had to reduce its 1947 program. British steel exports have been brought down to rock-bottom.

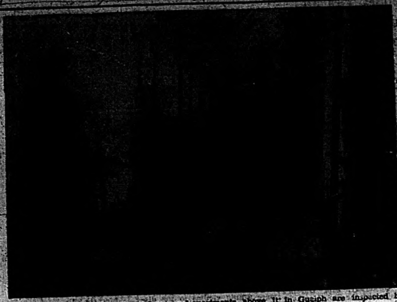
Labor disputes have become more numerous and 300,000 more working days were lost during the first nine months of 1946 than in the same period of 1945. But Britain has avoided the dislocation experienced by Canada and the United States through strikes in basic industries.

Wages of manual workers in the manufacturing industries reached peak levels. The average weekly earnings of all workers now are just over £5 ($20) compared with only £2 13s. 3d ($12.65) in 1938—a boost of 89 per cent.

Almost 7,000,000 men and women were discharged from the forces or from war production jobs in 15 months but large-scale unemployment has been avoided. The most serious feature of the country's unemployment "pockets" is that they are mostly in the so-called depressed areas where unemployment was heaviest between the wars.

A threatened revolt over farm prices by the National Farmers' Union was averted when Prime Minister Attlee's Labor government promised an early review of the price structure to iron out inequalities.

Farmers won the concession that their own work and that of their wives will be taken into account in measuring the level of agricultural profits.



Fire-swept ruins of Penfold Hardware and apartments above it in Guelph are inspected by crowd. Patrons of theatre next door filed out in orderly manner a few feet from flames; occupants were led and carried to safety by firemen from doorway at left leading upstairs.

Premier Receives Cabinet Approval Of New Agreement

Victoria, Dec. 17 (CP)—Premier John Hart Monday placed before his cabinet a "new deal" for British Columbia, a dominion-provincial taxation pact to bring the province not less than $100 million in the next five years.

He received immediate cabinet approval and will place the agreement before the legislature late in January for its sanction. Mr. Hart returned home Sunday from Ottawa after a two-week conference with federal authorities.

British Columbia, if the agreement is approved will receive $21,299,000 next year, plus more than $2 million in gasoline taxes, and in no year during the five-year period will the federal grant fall below $18 million annually.

The Federal Government will write off $8 million of depression debts and refinance $26 million, permitting British Columbia to pay both principal and interest of $1,124,675 annually. Previously interest alone was costing $1,020,000.

"Rent" Out Rights

During the life of the agreement the province will "rent" out to the dominion rights to collect personal income and corporation taxes and succession duties.

The dominion will also give the province 50 per cent of its collections from corporation income tax on electric and gas utilities, estimated at $500,000 annually. Arrears of income and corporation taxes, estimated at $3,850,859, will be paid to the province immediately.

Under the wartime tax agreement the province received $12 million for vacating the personal income and corporation tax fields, and the revenue from succession duties and statutory subsidies made the total approximstely $15 million.

There is no infringement on the constitutional rights of the province. At the end of five years the agreement will be subject to review. It may be cancelled or renewed as conditions warrant.

Canuck Announcer On British Stage

Glasgow (CP)—Starring in a new Laurence Olivier production, "Born Yesterday," which recently played at the Theatre Royal, is Bill Kemp, former Toronto radio announcer discharged last January from the Canadian Army in England.

The play, by Garson Kanin, produced in New York last winter and still running there, is described by theatre critics as a "slick, cynical and sophisticated" drama of "newspapermen, racketeers and dumb but successful chorines."

Kemp, until recently playing at the Embassy Theatre in London, is cast as an American newspaperman and his companions are Bessie Love of "Broadway Melody" fame and American Hartley Power who has been acting in Britain 20 years.

After a tour of the provinces "Born Yesterday" is to be produced in London.

SWIMMING CHAMPION URGED TO TAKE REST

Paris, France (Reuters)— Alex Jany, 17-year-old swimming champion, holder of the British 100 and 220 yards freestyle and four European titles, has been advised to "stay at home and rest."

Jany, who recently competed in an international meeting in Egypt, has been invited to visit Britain and Australia.

Reason for Jany's disappointing form in Cairo was that he was tired and overstrained, said Emile Drigny, President of the French Swimming Federation, who has advised Jany to take things easy.

Roast Beef of Old Canada

(From The London Times)

"Well now," said the waiter to David Copperfield "what would you like for dinner? Young gentlemen is generally tired of beef or mutton."

Today many elderly gentlemen might admit to being a little weary of mutton, but as to beef they would repudiate the waiter's remark with indignation and contempt. All the more will they rejoice over the agreement lately made in Ottawa, whereby Britain will take all the beef that Canada can export until the end of 1948.

Once upon a time roast beef for luncheon on Sunday was an integral part of home life. Then came the war and rationing, and Sunday after Sunday a first wistful glance at the family table revealed a joint culled from some meagre and strangely distorted sheep. There were always rumors that somebody else's village near by was a rich vein of continuous beef, but in every one's own village it was a case of beef yesterday and beef tomorrow but never beef today.

The shock of the present good news must excuse thoughts as to mutton that would otherwise be harsh and ungrateful. If indeed it were a saddle of mutton—but there are its accompaniments comparable must not be too roughly touched. It is not mutton that has made Englishmen what they are, nor are its accompaniments comparable to those of its rival. Caper sauce has a certain piquancy which, as the chemies of boiled mutton will ever, is sorely needed; mint sauce is far from despicable, but can either of them stand up singlehanded for a moment against the tremendous alliance of horse-radish sauce and Yorkshire pudding?

A covert slur has constantly been cast on beef's intellectual properties. The calumny is an old one, for Sir Andrew Aguecheek declared that it did harm to his wit, and today the epithet "beefy" is seldom applied to those pre-eminently interested in things of the mind. This may be an unfair inference from the fact that Sunday luncheon leads to Sunday afternoon slumber; but, whatever may be said against hot roast beef, cold beef stands patently absolved, since there is about it a fine Spartan quality it stands for long bracing walks in the open air with much good talk, for plain living and high thinking.

It is indeed regrettably to be conjectured that we are not such out-and-out cold beef men as we once were since few people eat it for breakfast, even if they can get it. Historians of the future judging by the literature of a hundred and more years ago will probably believe that stage coachmen invariable did so, and there is no doubt that both Mr. Weller senior and the coachmen on the Tally-ho coach to Rugby deliberately performed cold beef for breakfast washed down with tankards of ale.

So manly a standard of conduct we may never reach again, but at least we may hope to attain to it at the other end of the day, when it is "possibly sweetest," at Sunday supper. There are weaknesses in the greatest institutions and it is one of the mysteries of existence that food so palpably divine should become as palpably insipid and depressing when reduced to the form of sandwiches.

But this moment, when we can almost hear the booting of the beefladen steamers from Canada is no time for any but the handsomest sentiments.

Trapper Sees Man's Head Protruding Above River Ice

Nairn Centre, Ont., Dec. 17 — (CP)— A man's head protruding above the ice of the Vermillion River near Wabagesik Falls, five miles southeast of here, startled Finnish trapper Lauri Nauha and led Ontario Provincial Police today to investigate after Nauha found a body frozen in the ice.

The body was that of 68-year-old Finnish recluse identified only as Johnson. His packsack was beside his body. Johnson, a resident of the district 25 miles west of Sudbury for many years, was known to have been in failing health.

British Honors for Massachusetts' Residents

Boston, Dec. 17.— (AP)—The British government today honored 145 residents of Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont for wartime services. Presentations were made by Consul General Bernard Ponsonby Sullivan. Awards included commander in the Order of the British Empire, Member in the Order of the British Empire and the King's Medal for service in the cause of freedom.

MERRY · CHRISTMAS · 1946

This Christmas is a Good Christmas!

Beneath the lighted trees, eager children unwrap their precious gifts. In hearths from the Maritimes to British Columbia, warm fires glow. There is food on our tables, laughter in the air and happiness in our hearts.

Canada has earned this good Christmas, these good things. They are ours to enjoy because we have walked the middle road. We have kept our sense of values. We have been moderate in our pleasures . . . moderate in our spending . . . moderate in all things.

This Christmas is a good Christmas, and
The House of Seagram is happy to share the joy of all Canadians as we and you this year say, "Merry Christmas."

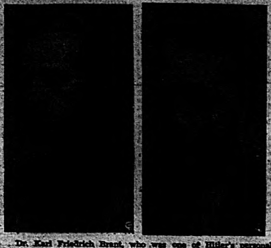
HITLER'S DOCTOR BEFORE ALLIED TRIBUNAL



Dr. Karl Friedrich Brant, who was one of Hitler's personal physicians, is shown at left as he appeared grim-faced during his trial before the Allied Military Tribunal at Nuernberg. Brandt is one of 23 Nazi doctors now being tried for war crimes, all of whom have pleaded "not guilty." Brig. General Telford Taylor, chief counsel for the prosecution, is shown at right reading charges against the doctors at opening of their trial.

"Witnesses of Falsehood" Members of Sect Called By Mercier of Recorder Court

Quebec, Dec. 18 — (CP)—John Maynard How, sharply denounced yesterday as a member of the Witnesses of Jehovah by Recorder Jean Mercier, appeared in court again today and was convicted on a second charge by the same Recorder.

How was found guilty today of illegally distributing pamphlets and was fined $100 and costs with the alternative of a three-month jail sentence, the maximum penalty.

How pleaded innocent and began a recital of his story. Recorder Mercier interrupted to say it was not necessary to hear the whole story all over again and he was not prepared to spend public money in prolonging court proceedings.

How went to jail. There was no immediate indication of an appeal.

On a charge yesterday of disturbing the peace, through distribution of pamphlets, How was fined $40 and costs with an alternate sentence of two months in jail.

Sentence Too Lenient

At that time Mr. Mercier said if he were permitted he would give a sentence of life imprisonment to every member of the sect convicted and that the sentence he now could give was "at least 100 times too lenient."

On How's appearance today, Recorder Mercier asked the press to give "as little publicity as possible" to the Witnesses of Jehovah because it was his opinion they freely break the laws and suffer minor sentences in an effort to gain newspaper headlines.

The Recorder added he knew he had no right to direct the press in this respect but he wished to make the request.

Meanwhile, it was reported Quebec City police had discovered the local headquarters of the sect a few days ago and had quietly carried out a raid, seizing pamphlets but making no arrests at the time. Confirmation of the raid was not immediately forthcoming.

Recorder Mercier termed the members of the sect "witnesses of falsehood" and "anarchists and enemies of the state and established government."

It was deplorable that Quebec City's by-laws were drafted "for sane and civilized people and do not provide for adequate punishment for such anarchical conduct" as How's.

All measures were justified in ridding "our Christian society of these transgressors of all laws, these enemies of all religion, these witnesses of falsehood."

Objects to Argument

Recorder Mercier objected to defence counsel's argument that How's visits to homes were similar to the activities of a parish priest.

There was "as real a distinction as between day and night."

Action of Jehovah's Witnesses in accosting housewives discussing religion with them and giving "obscene and subversive pamphlets to children to read was a defiant gesture of insolence that no decent citizen can ignore."

A week ago Recorder Mercier postponed judgment in the How case and ordered How and his counsel, Sam Schwarz-Bard from court, saying conduct of the defence lawyer was "unqualified and unjustifiable" in seeking a stay of judgment.

The Recorder said he had been prepared to render judgment at 10 o'clock but had been asked by defence counsel to delay his decision half an hour. He acceded to the request but in the meantime, he said, the lawyer went to Superior Court to file a writ of certiorari on behalf of his client.

The defence counsel in a statement later upheld his action and questioned the Recorder's right to suspend judgment "indefinitely."

Falls 3,500 Feet In Plane—Lives

Fort William, Dec. 18 —(CP). —The age of miracles has not yet passed — ask Walter Smith, office manager of a lumber company here. Smith, who is a patient in hospital now, fell 3,500 feet in an airplane Sunday and lived to tell the tale. The plane went out of control and from 1,500 feet down to the ground, he remembers nothing until he was crawling away from the wreck.

Stepson Kills Detroit Bride

Detroit, Dec. 18. (CP)—Mrs. Louis Mezei, attractive 26-year-old bride, was shot and killed early today as she lay sleeping beside her husband, William, 56. Police arrested Joseph Cyprus, 30, former paratrooper who said he was Mezei's stepson. Mezei said he knew "Joe was unhappy about my second marriage."
